PEAT BEDS IN POLK TOWNSHIP

May Solve the Fuel Problem for Marshall County—Minor
News Notes.

The Brown farm, near Tynor may be a big factor in solving the fuel problem for Marshall county, and eventually Indiana, along with every other state in the Union. Mr. Brown has discovered that the substratum of his farm, like many other farms in the county, is a dense peat bog. But this fact is only incidental to his announcement that a machine can be bought which compresses the peat into a better fuel than coal at the amazingly low cost of eighty-nine cents per ton. To one of these machines installed at South Bend for experimental purposes, Mr. Brown took a wagon load of the newly utilized product. The result was entirely satisfactory, as he returned with a goodly supply of carbon nuggets which, when tested in the stove, burned slowly, with a steady, intense glow like anthracite coal. Mr. Brown is interested in forming a stock company for the development of his land, and perhaps other lands in Marshall county. He thinks that the time is ripe for the establishment of a new, vast industry in this locality which will either put the coal trust out of business or compel it to revise its outrageous list of prices.

Plymouth boys have a habit of writing their names in letters as big as town lots. In the distant future some of them may, in a metaphorical sense, engrave their names in huge letters of fire across the firmament of human endeavor, but probably none of them, even though they go into the medicine business and patronize sign boards and barn sides, will ever scribble their names in more gigantic proportions than Walter Brower did recently. The surface of Yellow river was his paper and a snow-plow his pen. Finding that the pen made a nice wide mark on the clean layer of snow which covered the ice, he set to work and traced a signature many rods in length. It is presumed that all day long, and until the wind erased it at night, his name was plainly visible to the inhabitants of Mars. Each letter was actually as big as a town lot.

The new Republican Recorder and Surveyor took possession of their offices last Monday. Recorder Porter will endeavor to dispense with a legally sworn-in deputy but will employ Miss Bertha Hoover as his assistant. Miss Hoover is the daughter of Noah Hoover, of this city, a well tried voter of the G. O. P. It is understood that Surveyor Vanvactor will employ Eldridge Thompson, a democrat, as his deputy. Jones, the treasurer elect, does not take his office until January 1906. One of his two sons will probably act as his deputy.

Claud Soice has again left Plymouth, objective point, Central America. He is probably the most extensive traveler who holds his residence in Marshall county. The short sojourn here last month was the first he has made for five years. In that interval he was in nearly every western state besides visiting Hawaii, the Philippines and many Asiatic countries.

Queer doings are in evidence at Lapaz. About a week ago the town marshal found a stray horse and buggy which he kept several days in hopes that the owner might come around. If the owner did eventually show up it was in a strange fashion for one night somebody stole the horse and then wheeled the buggy out in the woods and set it on fire. This queer prank reminds one of the time they dynamited the front of Lapaz's famous anti-saloon divine.

There is mystery connected with the death of William Mueller who passed away last Tuesday morning. He was found lying unconscious in an intoxicated condition several nights previous just back of the row of east store buildings on Michigan street. A severe fracture of the skull is unquestionable evidence of the cause of his death but whether this injury was the result of an accident or the blow of a murderer remains a debatable point.

In his toast given at the banquet of the retiring county officials. New Year's eve, John W. Parks said that he believed no other county in the state could show a record quite so free from official dishonesty as Marshall. Almost without exception the whole line of county officers have exhibited the highest traits of competency and integrity.

Misses Blanch Disher, Edna Capron, Gertrude Peterson, Lois North, Harriett Bissell and Emma Holm have returned to their respective school rooms in various towns in Indiana, after spending the holidays in Plymouth.

H. A. Grube, M. L. Harley and C. A. Bondurant entertained the county officials and lawyers of Plymouth at a banquet given at the Ross House New Year's Eve.

A union meeting was held at the M. E. church last New Year's eve. Several ministers and prominent citizens spoke after which the Methodists tendered a reception and banquet to the general public.

The Plymouth String Orchestra is practicing diligently. Its music has already been pronounced "good."

Miss Marie Rhodes has returned from Bourbon, having spent several days with relatives.

Misses Lola Everley and Bess Vinall are spending a few days at Warsaw.

Shooting Affray at Logansport.

A cold blooded murder was committed at Dunkirk, a suburb of Logansport last Sunday morning. Just as the new year was being ushered in existence, Florence Mitchell, a colored woman of about forty years old who came from Lexington, Ky., shot and killed, Ella Swisher, a white. The women were rivals for the favors of C. D. Morgan, and had frequent quarrels. There was a dozen or more men and women of questionable character gathered in a saloon and were drinking quite freely until all were more or less intoxicated, when the Swisher woman threw her arms around Morgan and gave him a kiss which so angered the Mitchell woman that she preceded at once to shoot her rival to death. The murderess has been placed under arrest and is waiting action by the grand jury.

H. G. Thayer has sold his fine Plymouth residence to Indianapolis parties who will convert it into a sanitarium. The consideration was $15,000. The property originally cost about $50,000 and was one of the finest and most desirable homes in this part of the state.

O'KEEFE TURNS IN INTEREST

Has Saved County Over $3600 in His Three Years' Term.

William O'Keefe, treasurer of Marshall county, has submitted to the board of commissioners his report of the interest on public funds for 1904, collected by him and turned into the county treasury, together with the total amount of such interest for the past three years. The communication is as follows:

TO THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS:
I hereby report to you the sum of $1,235.39, interest on the public funds, collected from the banks for the year 1904, making the total amount of interest collected and paid into the county treasury $3,605.78 during the three years I have been treasurer of Marshall county, all of which appears on auditor's ledger, page 211.

WILLIAM O'KEEFE.

The reforms in the county treasurer's office advocated by William O'Keefe are not a fine-spun theory to be used only for dress parade purposes or ante-election statements. They are a reality—they are tangible—you can see the report on record; you can feel the hard cash in dollars and cents. It has been turned into the county fund. It now belongs to the people, and the amount is $3,605.78.

JOHNNIE WAS SURE HE KNEW

Fulton County School Teacher
Receives Embarassing Answer.

According to the Kewanna Herald, a funny thing happened in one of the schools near Fulton last Friday. A number of visitors were present, including the teacher's best fellow, and she was showing the little ones off to the best possible advantage. She had been taught to deal gently with one little fellow, and upon this occasion to help him out if necessity required it. She asked Johnnie to read and the young man responded without protest. Johnnie got along all right until he came to the word feet, but for the life of him couldn't tell what the letters spelled. "Can't you think what f-e-e-t spells?" "Nope," answered Johnnie. "Just think a second," continued the young lady. "A cow has four of them while I have only two. Now what is it?" Johnnie's eyes were riveted on the bulging front of the teacher's well filled shirt waist, and the answer he gave made a sensation that will be the talk of the district for the next year to come.

HARDWARE STOCK IS SOLD

Cook Bros. Establishment Bid In
for J. F. Weis, of Bremen.

The stock of hardware formerly owned by Cook Bros. was sold on Tuesday by the trustee, C. A. Bondurant. The stock was invoiced at $3,070 and was bid in by C. E. Forvert, of Nappanee, for $2,800. The stock was at once turned over to J. F. Weis, of Bremen, who is the real owner, and will give his personal attention to the business. Mr. Weis is a man of many years' experience in the hardware line, is progressive and a great hustler, and above all a man thoroughly reliable. He will move here with his family as soon as a suitable residence can be secured. The hardware was opened for business in less than ten minutes after the successful bidder's name was announced, and we hope it will remain open and do a successful business for many years to come.

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT FREES CHICAGO BANKER

William A. Paulsen, Convicted of Embezzlement in Taking Deposit, Is Granted His Liberty.

Chicago dispatch: Ex-Banker William A. Paulsen, convicted four years ago of embezzlement in connection with the failure of the Central Trust and Savings bank in 1896, was given his freedom on a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Charles A. Bishop of the circuit court of Du Page county. It was ruled that the amendment of the law under which Paulsen was convicted nullified the conviction, as his case was pending in the United States supreme court.

The only indictment on record against the former banker was on a charge of receiving a deposit of $40 in his bank after it had become insolvent. The law of 1873 made this a criminal offense, and he was tried before Judge Neely in 1900, four years after he was indicted. He signed a jury waiver, but before all the testimony was heard the prosecution withdrew the case. He then was given a jury trial before Judge Brentano and sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Obtaining bonds, Paulsen appealed to the Illinois supreme court, which affirmed the first decision. The case was taken to the United States supreme court. While pending there the law under which he was convicted was amended, the burden of proof being thrown on the state. Paulsen had contended his bank was solvent, but he was not allowed to show this before Judge Brentano.

The section of the old statute providing that the failure of a bank within thirty days after receiving a deposit shall be prima facie evidence of an attempt to defraud was stricken out. The new law also says that a knowledge of insolvency must be shown.

DISAPPEARANCE IS A MYSTERY

Wealthy Wood Buyer Believed to Have Been Waylaid and Killed.

Kenosha, Wis., special: It is feared that John W. Gettinger, a well-known traveling wood buyer of this city, has been murdered in the northern woods. Gettinger left Ripon a week ago Saturday with $700, bound for the woods, to purchase a cargo of wood. He had planned to be in Kenosha on Dec. 21, but no trace of him has been found. Gettinger was a man of considerable wealth and always carried large sums of money on his person. He was not a drinker or gambler and his domestic relations had not been unpleasant. Just before he left Ripon he had written his wife that he would be here in time to arrange a Christmas tree for the children. Mrs. Gettinger is on the verge of a nervous collapse. The police of Ripon and other cities have been asked to aid in the search for him.

GIVES BROTHER FATAL DRINK

Five-Year-Old Girl's Error Costs Life of Smaller Relative.

New York, dispatch: Mistaking a bottle of mixed carboric acid and camphor for one of soda water, the 5-year-old sister of 2-year-old John McCabe of East Twenty-second street invited him to drink of the contents. The drink proved fatal.

"You drink first," she said, "and I'll drink, too."

The little fellow did so and the next moment was writhing in agony. His mother rushed from an adjoining room and realizing at a glance that a terrible mistake had been made, summoned help. Although Dr. Bailey worked over the boy for ten minutes after his arrival at Bellevue, the child died without recovering consciousness.

VOLLEY OF SHOTS FOR NEGROES

Bullets Mar Christmas Celebration by Blacks in Alabama.

Hanceville, Ala., dispatch: While a negro congregation was holding a Christmas celebration at Stout's Mountain, a volley of shots was fired into the church from the outside. Rev. Mr. Clay, the pastor, and Bob Jackson were probably fatally wounded. Later the body of Henry Jett, a white miner, supposed to be one of the shooting party, was found near the church. John Jett, his brother, and Ted Blackwell have been arrested.

California Winemakers Object to a Higher Revenue Tax.

Los Angeles, Cal., special: A meeting of the southern California winemakers was held in this city to formulate a protest against the proposed increase of 5 cents per gallon of the internal revenue tax on sweet wines as recommended by the internal revenue commissioner. CZAR GRANTS BROAD REFORMS

Despite Autocratic Tendency Government Note Is Step in Advance.

WARNING AGAINST AGITATION

Extremists Are Dissatisfied, but Conservatives Look Upon the Document as Being a Victory for Prime Minister Mirsky.

St. Petersburg cable: While Emperor Nicholas' manifesto on Russian reforms coupled with the government note of warning leaves no doubt that it is the firm intention of the emperor to maintain the autocratic principle, the program of reforms outlined is a broad one. If it had not been preceded by the agitation of the last few months it probably would have been accepted with universal acclaim in Russia as extremely liberal.

The raising of the peasants to an equality with other citizens of the empire is alone practically second only to the emancipation of the serfs, but hardly less important are the guarantees which the manifesto directs to be incorporated in the laws for the protection of the personal liberties of the people. The measures taken under the state of siege are no longer permissible except in cases of crimes against the state.

Heeds Zemstvo Demands.

The increase in the independence and scope of the domstvos and zemstvos as well as the creation of smaller zemstvo units, the definite protection of the Jews, Armenians, and other unorthodox sects, and the revision of the press laws are all on the line of the zemstvo demands. The extremists, of course, are not satisfied and many of the moderate liberals are disappointed.

The government note threatening drastic measures in the event of a continuation of the vain agitation is resented deeply by them, and it is feared will inflame rather than allay the present agitation. Harsh measures, it is understood, however, will be avoided, and the government expects that the solid nature of the reforms offered gradually will draw to its support all except the extreme radicals.

Man of the Hour.

Fully as important as the government's response to the zemstvoists is the position in which M. Witte is placed by confiding the reforms to the committee of ministers of which he is president. The old finance minister becomes the man of the hour, confirming the reports that he is again in high imperial favor. Moreover, this body is raised to the highest dignity, which is apt to make the committee of ministers a real cabinet. In addition to the ministers six grand dukes are members of the committee.

Regarded as Mirsky Victory.

The general opinion is that the manifesto represents a victory for Interior Minister Sviatopolk-Mirsky and the conservative liberals over M. Pobedonostsev, procurator of the general holy synod, and the reactionaries, and practically places the strong combination of M. Witte and Sviatopolk-Mirsky behind the government's program. With a man of M. Witte's domination and force at the head of the committee of ministers the general belief is that he will control in the end. Those allied with the zemstvoists express the intention of continuing the agitation despite the government's note of warning.

Await Action of People.

The response of the people generally and of the extreme liberals and revolutionaries to the government's action is awaited with intense interest. No one imagines that any of these classes will be satisfied but upon the course they have elected to pursue will depend the question of a possible crisis in the near future.

At the meeting of the Moscow zemstvo resolutions of confidence and congratulation were passed on the appointment of Prince Mirsky as minister of the interior.

New York dispatch: An old house in Sunset Park, one of the landmarks of Brooklyn, has burned. It always has been thought the house was used as a hiding place for "Charley" Ross immediately after he was kidnapped in Philadelphia. The house was a relic of revolutionary times.

Explosion Wipes Out Family.

Guthrie, Okla., dispatch: Wilhelm Schultz was fatally burned and his wife and three children are dead as a result of a gasoline explosion in their home near Gypsum, Okla. The mother held the lamp with the wick lighted while the father filled the lamp with gasoline.

Allege Husband Is Murderer.

Radford, Va., dispatch: James Linkous was taken to Roanoke to prevent lynching at the hands of infuriated citizens after a coroner's jury had returned a verdict that he murdered his wife and adopted son and burned his home to remove evidence of the crime.

Mrs. Mackay Is Recovering.

London cablegram: Mrs. Frank J. Mackay, formerly of Chicago, now residing in England, who sustained a slight concussion of the brain Dec. 19 as a result of an accident while fox hunting, continues to make good progress toward recovery.

HURRIES MEN TO CRUSH THE UPRISING IN SAMAR

Governor Wright Cables That He Is Forwarding Reinforcements to the Constabulary.

Washington, dispatch: Secretary Tamm has received a cable message from Gov. Wright at Manila in response to his inquiry in regard to the recent uprising of the Pulajanes in Dolores, Samar. Gov. Wright in his message says:

"With reference to your telegram of the 21st inst. I regret to say that Gen. Corbin's report of the attack on and loss of detachments of scouts at Oras and Dolores is correct. Pulajanes have of late left the west and north sides of Samar and become active on the east coast, which is practically without a harbor and very difficult of access during the prevalence of the existing monsoon. Orders were given some time since to strengthen all detachments on the east coast, but, unfortunately, this was delayed by the wreck and loss of the coast guard boat, carrying a hundred or more of the constabulary. The men were saved, but the delay in sending another coast guard boat to the rescue resulted in leaving these small detachments at Oras and Dolores isolated, and the consequent loss. All east coast stations have been heavily reinforced and we are still sending men in by my direction. Gen. Allen (chief of the constabulary) left here (Manila) two weeks since to take personal charge of affairs in Samar."

In conclusion Gov. Wright says he is still further reinforcing Gen. Allen with constabulary and is consulting with Gen. Corbin, who, if necessary, will send troops.

RELIGION MAY CAUSE DEPORTATION OF SCOTS

Alleged Fanatics Are Being Held at Ellis Island Until Officials Investigate Maine Colony.

New York, dispatch: Pending decision on final action, the Ellis Island authorities are detaining fifteen Scotch people, including men, women and children, said to be religious fanatics, who arrived on the Anchor line steamship Mongolian.

The party was en route to Shiloh, Me., where there is a religious settlement called "The Corporation of the Kingdom."

The party had only $45.25 among them. Thomas Brown, his wife Helen and their five children had $10 as their share; James Anderson and his wife and 1-year-old child had $14; John Miller and wife and two children had $20, while Alexander Sinclair, a single man, had $12.50. Brown was a chairmaker in Scotland; the other men were railroad signalmen.

The men explained that a man named Monroe had bought them their passages across and secured tickets for them to get them to Shiloh, Me.

The authorities are looking into the Shiloh corporation, the treasurer of which, Charles E. Holland, was at Ellis Island to meet the party, and declared that the corporation had $30,000, and would not allow any of the Scotch party to become charges on the country.

The whole party profess religion deeply. They will be kept on the island until the religious settlement can be investigated. The men of the party sold their homes and furnishings in Scotland to get what money they possessed.

SWINDLER IS SACRILEGIOUS

Uses Biblical Names and the Pope's to Dupe the Farmers.

Minneapolis, Minn., dispatch: A forger with either a peculiar sense of humor or a sad disregard for sacred things has been plying his criminal calling in this quarter of the globe. To what extent he has profited by his rascality or how much amusement he has had out of the marvelous gullibility of his victims will only be known when the fellow is rounded up and induced to tell his own story. It is known, however, that he has altered checks bearing as signers variously the names "Pope Plus X," "St. Peter the Apostle" and "John the Baptist," and it is also reported that one farmer named Julius Redmond has, through the use of these checks, been defrauded of 11,500 bushels of wheat.

OIL MAGNATES CLAIM HONORS

Counsel Says They Suggested Control of Interstate Corporations.

BASIS OF GARFIELD SCHEME

John D. Archbold First Spoke of Matter Before the Industrial Commission, Outlining the Plan Elaborated by the Commissioner.

New York dispatch: That John D. Archbold, one of the leading men in the Standard Oil company, who is now opposed to the idea, is really the father of the plan for federal control of interstate corporations, which Commissioner James R. Garfield has developed, is an interesting claim now put forward. John D. Rockefeller also made a somewhat similar suggestion. S. C. T. Dodd, general counsel of the Standard Oil company, said regarding the proposition made by Mr. Archbold Sept. 8, 1899, before the industrial commission:

"I think it is very probable that Mr. Archbold was the first man to advocate publicly a federal incorporation law under which the great interstate corporations could take out federal charters."

"We have often talked among us about this matter, and it would certainly be a thing very much desired if it could be accomplished."

Would Simplify Law.

"Its result would be to get the corporations out of the tangle that is caused by the multiplicity of state laws, and it would give to the government sole control."

"But the legal difficulties are perhaps insurmountable without a change in the United States constitution. The charge of unconstitutionality would be brought. The various states would be apt to attack such a law on the question of their sovereignty being infringed upon."

"I think John D. Rockefeller also made a statement before the industrial commission of much the same tenor as that of Mr. Archbold. Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania at the last session of congress introduced a bill which embodied the idea of federal charters for interstate corporations."

What Archbold Said.

Mr. Archbold's statement was as follows:

"If you should ask me, gentlemen, what legislation can be imposed to improve the present condition, I answer that the next great—and, to my mind, inevitable—step of progress in the direction of our commercial development lies in the direction of national or federal corporations. If such corporations should be made possible under such fair restriction and revision as should be attached to them, any branch of business could be freely entered upon by all comers, and the talk of the monopoly would forever be done away with."

"Our present system of state corporations, almost as varied in its provisions as the number of state, is vexatious alike to the business community and to the authorities of various states."

Uniformity Is Wanted.

"Such federal action need not take away from these states their right to taxation or police regulation, but would make it possible for business organizations to know the general terms on which they could conduct their business in the country at large. 'Lack of uniformity in the laws of various states as affecting business corporations is one of the most vexatious features attending the business life of any great corporation today, and I suggest for your most careful consideration the thought of a federal law.'"

But, while Archbold, Rockefeller and their associates advocated charters then, they are not in favor of the Garfield plan of today. They know that it means business and that were it in operation under the present administration many charters would be revoked.

SCARCITY OF OFFICERS TIES UP NAVAL VESSELS

Secretary Morton Takes Steps Place Ships in Reserve to Keep Within the Appropriation.

Washington dispatch: It has been determined by Secretary Morton that until the navy has more officers it will be necessary to establish two classes of ships in reserve. In order to carry out this scheme, which will save economy both in the expenditure of funds and in employment of officers, the secretary will soon ask congress for a special appropriation. It is likely that Whitney basin, at the Brooklyn yard, will be used as a reserve station for the laying up of a large number of vessels.

Both classes of ships that will be taken out of active duty will be maintained in ordinary, under a system of serviceability which will admit of use of the vessels without much delay.

One class will be kept at navy yards under such conditions of readiness for duty at sea as will permit of their departure from port within twenty-four hours. This can be accomplished by having the ships in the care of a few officers and men, and the engines will be turned over frequently and the equipment stored in accessible places alongside when not actually on board.

Another class will be in less readiness for service, probably far enough removed from the conditions of duty to require a week or more to get the vessels away from the yard.

In both cases there will be periodical docking and other processes which will keep the vessels in an efficient state.

This procedure is against the policy of President Roosevelt, who believes that every vessel of the navy ought to be in commission and in active service all the time.

Owing to the lack of officers, however, and the difficulty of providing full complements for all the ships, it has been found necessary to adopt some expedient that will permit skeletonizing of crews and reduction in ships' officers. The need for officers is so great that a premature examination of midshipmen at Annapolis has been ordered.

DECLARES CUBA IS HEALTHY

Minister Quesada Denies Reports That Yellow Fever Has Foothold.

Washington, dispatch: Senor Quesada, the Cuban minister, denies reports that yellow fever again is beginning to obtain a foothold in Cuba, and that the Cuban government is not enforcing sanitary precautions vigorously. He has given out an official statement declaring that the mortality in the island has declined steadily since the establishment of the republic, and that there has been no epidemic of quarantinable diseases. Neither yellow fever, smallpox, cholera or the plague, he says, has developed in Cuba since the proclamation of the republic. The death rate per 1,000 inhabitants in Havana province in August was 19.42; in September, 18.24; October, 17.31; November, 16.60.

BUYS LAST OF COKE HOLDINGS

Frick Concern Acquires Remaining Land at Connellsville, Pa.

Greensburg, Pa., dispatch: The purchase by the H. C. Frick company of 1,000 acres of Connellsville coking coal land has just been confirmed. The Frick company is a subsidiary company of the United States Steel corporation and the property bought is said to be the last piece of coal land held by private individuals in the Connellsville region. The property lies in north and south Union townships, near Uniontown, Pa., and the price paid is said to be $1,000,000. The deal includes sixty-three acres in the Klondike region and 100 ovens known as the Crossland plant.

DECLARE BOYS ARE WRECKERS

Railway Officers Arrest Two for Putting Obstruction Before Train.

Fort Wayne, Ind., dispatch: Perry Ruffing, aged 14, of Fort Wayne, and Phinley Ireland, his cousin, aged 18, of Wadon, Ind., were arrested on a charge of train wrecking. They confessed that they rolled two rails across the Grand Rapids railroad track six miles north of here. A freight engine and four cars were derailed. The trainmen were slightly hurt. Detective Slusser of Chicago and Deputy Sheriff Dasher made the arrests. The Ireland boy is said to be a degenerate. He and Ruffing wanted to see what would happen, they say, in explanation of their action.

Shoots and Kills Man.

St. Paul, Minn., dispatch: Harry Cannon shot and killed Percy Young. Cannon surrendered to the police, claiming that Young entered his room and started a fight, and that he pointed a supposed empty revolver at Young with the intention of frightening him.

The Ward of King Canute

A Romance of the Danish Conquest.

By OTTILIE A. LILJENCRANTZ, author of The Thrill of Lief the Lucky.

Copyright, 1901, by A. C. McCLURG & CO.

Anger leaped from the young noble's eyes as, in his turn, he came between her and the Jarl. He said forcefully, "No one shall ask anything of you that you do not want, nor shall any king compel you. Yet I think I have a right to know what his will is with you."

"You have not," the Dane contradicted. "Do you think the king's purposes are to be opened to the sight of every Angle who becomes his man? End this talk, maiden, and give me your promise to be obedient."

She gave it in a cry of despair, "I must—I know I must!" then sought to make peace with her lover by laying caressing hands on his breast.

But for once the Etheling's will did not bend to her coaxing; his mouth was doggedly set as he looked down upon her. "I trust no man I do not know," he answered, "and I do not know Canute the man. You have no cause to reproach me with lack of faith in you, Randalin, for when every happening—even your own words—made it appear as if it were love for Rothergar Lodbroksson which brought you into the camp, I looked into your eyes and believed them against all else."

"Love for Rothergar Lodbroksson?" she repeated, drawing back. "Then you did believe that I could love Rothergar?" Her voice rose sharply. "You believed that I followed him?"

Too late he saw what he had done. "I said that I did not believe it," he cried hastily. "What I thought at first in my bewilderment—that could not be called belief."

But she did not seem to hear his explanation as she stood there gazing at him, her mind leaping lightning-like from point to point. "It was that which made you behave so strangely in the garden," she said, and she spoke each phrase with a kind of lowship had reached its height, like one who would ride in upon the crest the Gainer rose to his feet and began speaking to the king. The first words Randalin heard distinctly were Canute's, as he paused with upraised goblet to look at the Mercian.

"Strangely do you ask," he said. "Why should I give you more than Edmund gave you?"

She had no difficulty in hearing Edric this time. Aggressively honest, his words rang out with startling sharpness. "Because it was for you that I went against Edmund, and from faithfulness to you that I afterward destroyed him."

Out of the stillness that followed, a voice cried, "Are you mad?" and there was the grating of chairs thrust hastily back. But, after a great wrench, her heart stood still within her as through the madness she perceived the purpose. As well as Edric of Mercia she knew that the young Viking's vulnerable point was his longing for his own self-esteem, a craving so unreckoning in its fervor that—should he have the guilty consciousness the traitor counted on—rather than endure his own reproach for cowardice he would be equal to the wild brazenness of flinging the avowal in the teeth of his assembled court. Her pulses began to pound in a furious dance as the same flash of intuition showed her the rock upon which the Galber's audacious steering was going to wreck him.

For no skulking guilt was in the face of the new king of England as he met the startled glance, but instead a kind of savage joy that widened his nostrils and drew his lips away from his teeth in a terrible smile.

"Now much do I thank whatever god has moved you to open speech," he said, "for with every fiber of my body have I long wanted to requite you for that faithfulness. Knowing tears for him while I am awake. I will remember only that I am my father's daughter and the Lady of Avalcomb."

Proudly as became an Odal-woman, she followed the page when he came to call her to the royal presence. The great stone hall in which the king awaited the arrival of his Norman bride was the same room in which he had feasted the night before, but tables and dishes now were gone, gold-weighted tapestries hung once more over the door by which Edric of Norway had made his entrance, and a rich-hued rug from an eastern loom lay over the spot where she had seen the axe rise and fall.

Porcing herself to tread the rug with steady step, she came where the king stood by an open window. He was as changed as the room, though in honor of his bride he wore again state robes of silk and cloth-of-gold, for the fire of the Northern lights was gone out of his face, leaving it dull and lustreless.

His ward courted deeply before him. "For your justice, King Canute, I give you thanks drawn from the bottom of my heart," she said.

"I welcome you to your own, Lady of Avalcomb," he answered as he returned her salutation. Leaning against the window frame he stood a long while looking at her in silence—so long that she was startled when at last he spoke. "Yet for the good of the realm, I must lay on your odal one burden, Frode's daughter."

"What is that, King?"

"It is that before the year is out you take a husband who shall be able to defend your land in time of need."

Her white cheeks went very red before him and then grew very pale again, while her breast rose and fell convulsively. But she clasped her hands over it as though to still its protest and, suddenly, she flung up her head in a kind of trembling defiance. "What does it matter? King, I know what a Danish woman owes her race. Choose you the man and this shall, like other things, be as you wish."

It was evident that her answer took him by surprise, for he bent from the wall to observe her. "I choose!" he repeated. "Have you then no choice?"

She tried to say "No"; she tried desperately to say it; but already her courage was crumbling under her. All at once she took her hands from her breast to hold them out pleadingly, and her voice was broken: "Lord, let me go back to Avalcomb—now—to-day!"

"Wherefore to-day?" he asked. "I had thought you would remain here for awhile and get honor from Queen Emma." A moment he looked away from her, out of the window at the drifting clouds. "I can tell you, Frode's daughter, that while she is noble in her birth, she is still nobler in her mind," he said gravely. "Little would there be in her service for you to take ill. I think it possible that she might be highly helpful to you. There is that about her which makes the good in one come out and back like a snake in the sun, while the evil slinks away shadow-like."

She interrupted him with a cry that was half a sob. "Lord King, I cannot bear it to see more people that are strange to me! Since I left my father's house I have felt the starkness of strangers, and now—now I can endure it no longer. My heart within me is as though it were bruised black and blue. Let me go back where all know me—where none will hold me out at arm's length to challenge me with his eyes, but all love me and place faith in me because they know me. Lord, give me leave to go home—pray it of you! Beseech it of you!" Entreated, she would have fallen at his feet if he had not caught her hands and stayed her.

A Dream Dispelled.

There was once an observing young woman who took note of the fact that the men seemed to be abashed when in the presence of the maid who ruled the kitchen.

So she went to cooking school and took a thorough course in culinary science, graduating with honors.

On a time she married a man, and she insisted upon getting the meals herself.

But, alas! instead of standing in awe of her and allowing her to boss the house he was quarrelsome and dictatorial, and she was little better than a slave.

At last she threw herself at his feet and begged him to tell her why a man was not as much afraid of his wife as he was of the cook.

"Hub!" he responded. "I'm not afraid you'll quit your job and disorganize the household system."

This shows us that conditions knock the plausibility out of theories right along.

Break It Gently.

Richard Le Gallienne spends much of his time in New York. He affects a decidedly peevish fashion in his hair, which calls for a sparing use of the shears. Near his lodgings is a German barber shop, where he frequently drops in to have his shaven, but never for tonsorial attention, much to the disgust of the proprietor, who is possessed of the true barber hair-destroying instinct. The other day as the poet left, after one of his usual visits, a customer heard the barber say to the boy:

"See here, Fritz, der next time dot shentlemen comes in to get his shine I wants you to say somedings to him about dot shameless hair he got. Doan get fresh, and make some of fones—shust hint delicate. Say, 'Boss, you looks like a shackasses wid dot hair; why doan you git him cut, already?'"

Exquisite Evening Silks.

Evening silks were never so beautiful in design and coloring. Small figured brocades are shown in mixed and single colors. A beautiful pattern is shown in mingled colors, the multi-shaded floral sprays in exquisite tones being cast upon a light, yet dull green satin background. They are so perfectly wrought as to seem just fresh from their stems, and beggar description.

Another pattern is shown in white peau de soie, with large bouquets of roses scattered at wide intervals over the shining surface. The roses shade from faint rose to crimson, and the pattern is repeated hardly twice in the whole length of silk.

Another beautiful silk, not so gorgeous perhaps, but as effective as any, is a white peau de soie ground with simple sprays of maiden hair fern laid upon it, also widely apart. There are only the two colors in this silk, if any one may except the thready red of the tiny stems, but the tones shade with exquisite taste, and the design is sure to attract widespread admiration.

Little Chocolate Puddings.

While one pint of milk is heating in a double boiler, beat two eggs until light, sift in two heaping tablespoons of grated chocolate, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, and add to the milk. Cook five minutes, then turn into small cups which have been dipped in cold water. Serve with the following custard: Into three cupfuls of slightly salted, boiling milk stir one beaten egg, one-half cupful of sugar, into which has been stirred one small teaspoonful of corn starch, two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, and cook until thickened and smooth. Set in a cold place until wanted, then slip each pudding onto an individual dish, place a macaroon or sugar kiss upon each top, and surround the base with the vanilla custard.

Pretty Visiting Costume.

This new and altogether picturesque vogue is of mouse-colored velvet, featured with a surplined waist and a vest of white satin, with ruby buttons. The shoulders are shirred and the top of the sleeves gives a puffed effect.

For Home Dressmakers.

In home dressmaking the long seams are often difficult to get quite straight. As an aid in seaming pieces for the skirts of dresses, cloaks, etc., adopt the following plan: Place one piece of the material on a smooth deal table and the other above it. Smooth lightly into place, and at one end of the seam pin a tape measure to the stuff and through into the wood. Draw this down to the other end of the seam and again stick in a pin. Then with long thread tack by the edge of the tape measure, and in seaming use these stitches as guiding lines.

Knit Jacket Useful.

A sweater, or knit jacket, is a necessity to the woman who indulges in out of door sport in cold weather. They are also useful to wear under a coat otherwise too tight and may be found of value throughout the year. A single-breasted coat, knit in close basket stitch, in warm, rich red, is made with loose, straight fronts like a double-breasted coat and is finished with scarlet collar and cuffs, also knitted. Spangled jackets are to be had at Teaching Calves.

A subscriber has trouble in teaching his young calves to drink. We confess that this is not one of the easy things to do, especially if we are in a hurry and want to accomplish the feat quickly. A little patience is necessary. Bear in mind all the time that the young calf is not very different from what we were at an early period in our history, and we do not know but what it may truthfully be said of some of us that this continues to be our normal condition. Gently place the calf's nose into the milk, which must always be blood heat. Put a very small amount of milk in the pail, or receptacle in which your calf is fed, one-half inch is sufficient, and push the little bovine's nose down onto the bottom of the pail. It will soon learn that you are performing a friendly act, and will get a taste of the milk and begin to suck, sip and bunt the bottom of the pail. Add to the milk and continue the good work until the calf gets enough. Do not put in enough to cover the nostrils. One or two such lessons and the calf will rapidly take care of all the milk that it should have.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

$15 Live Weight.

We present herewith an illustration of Funk's Choice. He won the grand championship over all competitors in the dressed carcass competition at the International Live Stock Show, 1904. Funk's Choice was fifteen-sixteenths pure-bred Angus; 30 months old and sired by Royal Judge 20371; dam Heather Lass 6568. He, together with twenty-five others, was put in the feed-lot about January 1, 1904, and was gradually brought up to full feed of Funk's High Protein Corn, being fed twice a day, and was allowed the range of a twenty-five acre pasture. This steer was not halter-broken until ten days before the International Live Stock Show and at no time was he picked out from the other steers in the herd for any special attention, that is to say, he was not pampered or stalled, but was fed as thousands of other cattle are fed upon the Funk farms.

Cure for Spavins.

There are two forms of this disease—bog and bone spavin, each of which must be treated differently. For bog spavin, take iodine tincture, one ounce; acetone tincture, one ounce; oil of cedar, one ounce; spirits of ammonia, one ounce, and chloroform, one ounce. This, when mixed thoroughly, should be used twice a day for three days, then apply a hot bran and vinegar poultice, leaving it on over night. Continue until the swelling is removed, then wash with warm soapsuds, after which apply the tincture of iodine twice a day, leaving the animal at rest until cured. For bone spavin, take quicksilver, two ounces; nitric acid, two ounces; black antimony, two drams; cantharides powder, one dram; sulphuric acid, two ounces, and prepared chalk, two drams. Stir the mixture until cool in a bowl or mortar. Apply at one hour intervals from five to seven consecutive hours, or three applications may be made at three-hour intervals to hasten the reduction. The hair should be clipped off close to prevent the place from becoming a sore.—Denver Field and Farm.

Fruit for Horses and Cows.

We are asked if it pays to feed fruit to farm animals. Does it pay for you and your family to eat apples and other fruits? If it does, it will pay to feed fruits to your horses, cows, etc. Our horses and cows are crazy for apples, and as we always give them some fruit they always have an expectant look when we come near them. (In feeding apples to cows they should be spiced in half to avoid choking.) True a pound of apples will not nourish a horse as will a pound of oats, but this is no reason why fruits may not be helpful to animals. It is said that no germs can exist in the stomach while fruit acids are present. Yes, feed your animals fruits, but not in excess, and do not feed green fruits, since you would not eat them yourself.

Syrup for Horses.

Scientific tests in substituting treacle for oats and other cereals in feeding horses have yielded surprising results. It is now definitely established that as a horse diet there is magic in treacle. With this syrup on his bill of fare, the horse rapidly takes on solid weight, develops prodigiously in muscular energy, grows a glossy coat, and enjoys unimpaired health. For these animals, therefore, treacle is declared to be both a tonic and health food. In addition to the many desirable results, a treacle diet reduces the cost of breathless finality. "You thought that I—I was like those—those other women in the camp. And what are you thinking of me now? Do you dare to dream that the king—" Turning, she confronted the old warrior fiercely. "Thorkel Jarl, I ask you to tell the Lord of Ivarsdale as quick as you can what the king wants with me."

"That I will not do," the Jarl said quickly. "You know no prudence, maiden. The Lord of Ivarsdale is also English; a mishap might occur."

She flung the words at him: "I care not if I lose Canute his crown; if you will not risk it, I will tell him that the king settles to-night with Edric of Mercia and his men, and that it is to witness the punishment of my kinsmen's murderer that he has sent for me. As for my camp life, ask Rothergar himself, or Effveia, or the king, or any soldier of the host! Of them all, you alone have thought such thoughts of me." She flung up her hands against him in a kind of heartbroken rage. "You! To whose high-mindedness I trusted everything I have!" Hiding her face, she ran from them, sobbing, into the house.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Twilight of the Gods.

As she had seen it from the gallery where the king's soldiers had hidden her, Randalin saw again the great stone hall, enshrining a feasting table around which a throng of nobles in their gorgeous dresses and their jewels and their diadems made a glittering halo. At the farther end, the king sat in his shining gilded chair. Just below her was Edric of Mercia with Norman Loofwinsson beside him. The light from the taper which a page was holding behind Norman of Baddeby fell upon the puffed collar that was his principal ornament. The collar had been her father's; she could not look at it without seeing again his ruddy old face with its grim mouth and faded kindly eyes. Beside this vision rose another—the vision of this beloved face dead in the moonlight, with Fridtjof's near it, his brave smile frozen on his young lips. From that moment, softness and shrinking died out in her bearing as out of her heart, and her blood was turned to fire within her—the liquid fire of the North.

Tom Lawson's Campaign.

Tom Lawson's "Frenzied Finance" is creating quite a stir among some of the more prominent trust magnates. The ones who are being hit the hardest are saying the least. Apparently Mr. Lawson has not only all the trumps but the whole deck of cards in his hand and is supposed to know how to play them at the proper time, otherwise legal proceedings would be entered at once against a man of Lawson's financial standing. In this case as in many others the "Press" of the country will be called upon to fight the battle of the trusts, not by a direct answer, reason or logic, but by ridicule and abuse. Some of the more prominent papers have already set at work their ablest cartoonists and are picturing Lawson in absurd positions with ridiculous surroundings, while some of the smaller ones are saying a few smart things at Lawson's expense. The course to be pursued by the trusts is outlined and a subsidized press is to convict a man for exposing their nefarious methods of robbing the people, not by legal proceedings but by the use of ridicule, which is the most dangerous weapon that can be placed in the hands of those called upon to defend race, that will admit of no defense in law or reason.

Warsaw Officers Receive Reward.

The reward offered by Dr. Babcock, of Rochester, for the recovery of his stolen race horse a few weeks ago has been settled, although the amount of the reward originally offered for the recovery of the property dwindled considerably. After figuring the amount down to about $49 it was divided between marshal W. A. Wimbrenner, night officer Douglass and Ted Ryland. The latter is an employe at Haffer Bros. barn and in examining the contents of the buggy, which had been brought to the stable by officer Douglass, Ryland found an envelope which bore the address of Dr. Babcock. Each received a little over $16.—Northern Indianan.

Dr. Babcock is well known to the people of Union township as he practiced medicine at Maxinkuckee for a number of years and owned some fine horses then.

Measures for Safety Needed.

The question of safe transportation over the railroads of the United States comes very close to the Federal Government, when as General Wynne says during the last fiscal year there were 378 accidents to trains hauling the mails. This averages more than one for each day. The total loss of postal clerks employed in the service by death and injury amounted to 460 men. If this loss of life and limb continues the Government will be justified in taking stringent measures.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Absolutely Harmless.

The fault of giving children medicine containing injurious substances, is sometimes more disastrous than the disease from which they are suffering. Every mother should know that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly safe for children to take. It contains nothing harmful and for coughs and croup is unsurpassed. For sale by T. E. Slattery.

If you are thinking of making a sale see Sellers and McFarland in regard to terms and dates. Effort, interest and enthusiasm are marked features of all sales conducted by them.

An agreeable movement of the bowels without any unpleasant effect is produced by Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For sale by T. E. Slattery.

TRIBUTE TO HON. C. H. REEVE

Hon. John B. Stoll's Appreciation of Distinguished Plymouthite.

The South Bend Times pays the following glowing tribute to the character and worth of Hon. Chas. H. Reeve. It says:

To the death roll of Indiana's distinguished citizens was added Tuesday afternoon the name of Charles H. Reeve, for perhaps more than half a century an honored resident of Plymouth. The approach of the end of his eventful career has been visible for some time. It has not been a matter of weeks or months. For half a decade he was almost helpless, but his nature was such as to impel him to keep on moving about as long as his frail limbs were at all responsive to his iron will.

Charlie Reeve was an extraordinary man. Few just like him have been seen on the stage of human activity. In his make-up were embodied genius, originality, firmness, fearlessness, eccentricity and peculiarity. His mind was ever active. From his very boyhood days he was a striking illustration of energy. Only during the hours of sleep did he permit his vigorous mind to be given over to rest.

Gruff at times, imperious and impetuous at intervals, he was yet a man of consideration, of gentleness, and always of high-mindedness. Mere cunning he despised with all the intensity of his nature. Cupidity he held in utter contempt. Dishonesty he loathed and condemned with unsparing severity.

It was always a treat to spend a few hours with Charley Reeve. He was so interesting, so unique, so alive to everything that pertained to human activity and achievement, that hours spent with him seemed like mere minutes.

How strange it will seem, for a long time, to think of Plymouth without its Charley Reeve.

PARKS MAY HEAD THE SENATE

Plymouth Man Has Chance to Be President Pro Tem.

An Indianapolis dispatch says: The hopes of Senator E. E. Hendee's friends to make him the unanimous choice for president pro tem of the senate took a sudden drop when a full-sized boom was launched for Senator John W. Parks, of Plymouth. Until Park's friends put him in the race Hendee was the only candidate for the place.

It was learned last night that several senators met in conference in this city several days ago to pick a candidate to oppose Hendee. They wanted a senator who was of the variety of timber to do credit to the office of governor, in case circumstances should arise that he would succeed to the office. Parks was their choice. They went to him and proposed that he become a candidate. He demurred. He believed, he said, that the office should seek the man, not the man the office.

Nevertheless he came to Indianapolis yesterday and last night was not turning a deaf ear on to those of his political friends who assured him of their support. Among those who conferred with him were Senator Daniel L. Crumpacker, of Westville, and Senator Thad M. Talcott, of South Bend. Both are understood to be enthusiastic supporters.

Stomach Troubles and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are the best thing for stomach troubles and constipation I have ever sold," says J. R. Cullman, a druggist of Porterville, Mich. Slattery.

GERMAN GLEANINGS.

More than $9000 enter ply the streets of Berlin.

Of the 521 new residence buildings erected in Berlin last year no fewer than 500 were five story and four six story apartment houses.

There will be a great gathering of the Von Bismarck family at Berlin soon. The chief of the house is the chancellor of the German empire.

In the German navy wounded sailors are put into bags when they have to be carried up ladders or lowered through narrow hatchways to reach the hospital.

Police Captain Heide of Potsdam, Prussia, has provided some of his men with rubber shoes to enable them to approach noiselessly and see whether the patrolmen are doing their duty.

A Grim Tragedy.

is daily enacted in thousands of homes as Death claims in each one another victim of consumption or pneumonia. But when coughs and colds are properly treated, the tragedy is averted. F. G. Huntley of Oaklandon, Ind., writes: "My wife had the consumption, and three doctors gave her up. Finally she took Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, which cured her, and today she is well and strong." It kills the germ of all diseases. One dose relieves. Guaranteed at 50c and $1.00 by T. E. Slattery, druggist. Trial bottle free.

Lone Star States.

In the course of conversation at a club the other evening a man referred to "the Lone Star State."

"What state do you mean?" he was asked.

"Why, Texas, of course."

"Well," he was told, "do you know that there are no fewer than five independent sovereign states which use a lone star on their national flags today? They are Turkey, Chile, Cuba, Liberia and the Kongo Free State."

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pennsylvania. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by T. E. Slattery.

New Year's Greetings.

Persia—"Mouhabek hayshed!" ("May it be prosperous to you.")

Japan—"Shinen one dote!" ("I wish you a happy New Year") and "Banzai raku!" ("Good luck for a thousand years.")

China—"Kung hi! Kung hi!" ("I respectfully wish you joy") and "Shih! Shih!" ("May the new joy be yours.")

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Corn Walker, of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about it being the best. No other will cure so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale by T. E. Slattery.

Variety in Teapots.

A Washington woman has a collection of teapots large enough to fill a whole room. There are in this collection over 300 pots of china, copper and earthenware. Some of them are in the form of dolls, monkeys, elephants and tigers. Others are in the form of houses, temples and towers. Others still are in the form of fans, walking sticks, bracelets, birds and flowers.

of ague and malaria can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters. This is a pure, tonic medicine of especial benefit in malaria, for it exerts a true curative influence on the disease, driving it entirely out of the system. Dragging Pains 2825 Keeley St.

CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groin. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Maudie Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

We wish Mr. Wright and his amiable wife many years of pleasure and contentment.

New York dispatch: Orestes A. Weed of Boston and Benjamin J. Riley of Brookline, Mass., came to this city under an agreement entered into in Boston to commit suicide together.

Weed is dead, leaving a wife and two children, but Riley did not become unconscious immediately from the effects of the morphine which they both took, and, repenting his action, he alarmed the guests of the hotel by his cries and he was hurried to a hospital, where his life was saved, and he is now glad of it. He is single.

They had been friends since boyhood, but saw each other only occasionally, and their meeting in Boston was accidental. There they discussed their ill fortune, canvassed their prospects for the future, and decided that life was not worth living.

The two men were taken from the Grand Union hotel here suffering from morphine poisoning. Weed died at the hospital after the physicians had tried for hours to save him.

Neither Is Fortunate.

Riley was revived and was transferred to the prison ward of Bellevue hospital, where he is held on a charge of attempted suicide. It is thought that he will recover. According to Coroner Scholer, Riley made the following statement:

"Weed and I have been chums since boyhood. We knew each other well, and when we became older we separated and met only occasionally. We saw each other at least three or four times a year, and last Sunday we happened to meet in Boston. We chatted for some time and told each other of the trials we had encountered during the past six months. Both of us had met with bad luck and we were both what you may term as down and out. Neither of us had anything that gave any promise, and we were downhearted."

Both Want to Die.

"In some manner, how I do not know, our talk drifted to suicide, and one of us proposed, I can't tell which one, that we should commit suicide together. Both of us agreed, and then we made preparations to die."

Riley then told the coroner of how they left Boston and came to this city. They went immediately to the Grand Union hotel, where they registered and were assigned to a room. Riley said that in their room he and Weed discussed the best methods of ending their lives, and it was finally decided to take morphine. They left the hotel late in the afternoon together, he said, and went to a drug store, where they purchased the poison.

"We were to die that night," the man continued, "but one of us proposed to put it off for a few hours. We had some money and we decided to spend that before we died. Then, too, we were very nervous. We went around the city, and visited several of the theaters, and also drank heavily."

Regrets Rash Deed.

Riley then stated that they went to the room on Tuesday shortly before midnight, and that each took morphine. When he had finished his story he was told by the coroner that Weed had died. Riley then said:

"I am now awfully sorry that I tried to die. I want to live, and in the future will do my best to earn my living. I am awfully sorry to hear that Weed is dead. He was a fine fellow, and was married and had two children."

Mrs. Weed was notified, and came on from Boston at once. Mrs. Weed stated that she will take the body after the autopsy to Boston for burial.

WEALTHY MAN MARRIES NURSE

Romance Beginning in Philadelphia
Hospital Leads to Wedding.

Weaver, son of a millionaire manufacturer of Columbus, Ohio, lost Miss Emma Parker to the altar. She nursed him through a long sickness and the courtship may be said to have commenced over a cup of chocolate served the sick man after a very trying night.

SEES MENACE TO TRADE IN SILVER SHORTAGE

Coinage of Standard Dollars Exhausts the Supply of Bullion at the Mint in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa., special: John H. Landis, superintendent of the United States mint in this city, announced that the available silver bullion of the country has been exhausted.

Unless congress takes prompt action to relieve the situation by authorizing the purchase of more silver bullion for coining purposes, or by accepting a suggested temporary remedy, he said, commerce will be greatly hampered next year as a result of a $10,000,000 shortage in small silver coin.

The prevailing conditions of the country's collateral, also, entail wholesale discharges of mint employees, to take effect on Jan. 1, and unless relief is obtained from congress the regular mint force will be cut down to a nominal number within the next few months.

"Silver bullion," said Mr. Landis, "has been exhausted because of the coining of our useless hoard of standard dollars, for which there has never been any real popular demand."

"At the same time, with the available silver bullion there is an urgent demand for $11,000,000 minor subsidiary coin, without which the country's commerce will be greatly hampered next year. The government is, therefore, facing conditions which will compel it either to go into the markets and resume the purchase of silver bullion for coining purposes or else recoin a portion of its stock of silver dollars into subsidiary silver coin."

JAPANESE OCCUPY FORT ON RIHLUNG MOUNTAIN

Besiegers Enter Through Breaches in Wall Made by Exploding Tons of Dynamite.

Tokio cablegram: The Japanese occupied the entire fort on Rihlung mountain at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday.

Rihlung mountain is almost due north of the old town of Port Arthur and is just west of the fort captured on Keelung mountain last week.

The fort was first destroyed by an explosion of several tons of dynamite, which opened breaches in the walls. An infantry attack followed.

The two strong forts on Banjusan mountain, between Rihlung and the railroad, are now the objects of Japanese sapping and mining operations. It is believed their capture is only a matter of a few days.

The old Keelung fort already in the hands of the Japanese Rihlung fort commands the full sweep of both old and new towns of Port Arthur, the harbor and dockyards and the forts of Golden and Electric hills.

Duluth, Minn., dispatch: For the eighth time in twenty-five years the St. James hotel has been gutted by fire.

Sixty-five guests, including members of two theatrical companies, were asleep in the hotel at the time of the fire, and many of them had narrow escapes from death or injury.

Firemen carried out many of the guests clad only in their night clothes. The weather was not so severely cold, and there was not much suffering.

The fire, which is supposed to have been of incendiary origin, caused a loss of $25,000.

His dog jumped on a large belt and was being carried into the machinery. Thornburg rescued the dog, but his clothing became entangled in the machinery and he was killed.

HORTICULTURE

A Bee Box for Winter.

"I do like my bees. If the reader has a nearly continuous supply of as fine honey as I have on my table right along he would like his bees. Bees are useful otherwise. That is why I plead for winter protection for bees. They deserve it. They really pay for it. They sweeten our lives even if they do sting now and then. Let us reciprocate by tempering the bitterness and severity of the blizzards that may come upon them." Mr. Greiner makes this plea in Farm and Fireside for the little insects he likes so much and then gives the accompanying illustration.

Winter Protection for Hives.

ing account of how he insures the safety and comfort of his bee colonies:

In the illustration the hives are shown as they are in the open season. I leave them standing on the platform, which afterward serves as the bottom for the box in which the stands are increased during the winter. If one or more of the hives have been moved away or separated during the swarming season I gradually move them closer together again and finally place them as the illustration shows. When cold weather approaches the casing is put around the hives. The front, rear and sides each are separate, being put together with screws.

My bee box (see picture) is five feet long and two feet three inches wide. The front is two feet high and the rear eighteen inches high. I fill the box with chaff or cut straw, packing it closely around the beehives, then remove the tops, or covers, of each hive and also the honey board, covering the frames instead with a cushion or piece of thick cloth or blanket. The space between the hives and the cover, or roof, of the box is then filled with chaff, etc., and well pressed down. Finally the cover is screwed on, and the job is done.

The top, of course, is slanting enough to shed rain. I cover mine with tarred felt. Bees thus protected are in good shape, and, if well provided with honey at the beginning of winter and have a young or strong queen, are likely to pass through the severest winter unharmed and to be ready for another season of work and usefulness when spring comes.

Progress in Gardening.

What an advance has taken place in gardening is well illustrated in the difference in the yield per acre of onions in some gardens of today and those of the old-timer. It used to be considered that 600 bushels an acre was a good crop, but not any longer. A Michigan gardener is credited with a harvest of 966 bushels this fall, but in this day of new and improved methods of culture the yield is not remarkable, as yields of even 1,200 bushels have been secured. Many of the large-rooted vegetables make the most of their growth during the cool months of the autumn. Carrots, parsnips and beets are of the number. During the summer their energies are given to the growing of top in which is stored a large amount of raw material that is prepared by the sun for use later in the growth of the root. When the top begins to ripen and die it is evidence, if the plant is healthy, that the foliage is being deprived of its store and that the root is profiting thereby. For this reason such roots should be left in the ground till the top is dead, or as long as it is safe to leave them. Here is an instance where "haste makes waste." Parsnips, one might wonder when they stop growing, or if they keep at it all winter. What appear to be small roots in the fall prove to be large fellows when dug in the spring.

Salt as a Fertilizer.

What is the value of salt for garden plants? Some years ago much was said about it as a fertilizer. Large quantities of refuse salt were sown on all kinds of farm crops. Little is heard about it now. It seems to have been a disappointment.

Some kinds of plants will tolerate large applications of salt, but that it is of any great benefit is seriously questioned. Other plants, as is well known, are injured. Many gardeners sow large quantities of it on asparagus. Tea kale is another vegetable that receives a dressing of salt. Is it of any use except to keep down weeds?

It is held that chlorine is essential to plant growth, but the amount needed is exceedingly small. Possibly there are soils that do not contain enough of it; though it may be doubted that any such are in cultivation. At any rate, the value of salt as a fertilizer is likely to be more fanciful than real.

Shouting Their Praises.

Kirkland, Ill., Jan. 2nd.—(Special)—Cured of the terrible Rheumatic pains that made him a cripple for years, Mr. Richard R. Greenhon, an old and respected resident of this place is shouting the praises of the remedy that cured him, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I had the rheumatism in my left limb so that I could not walk over ten to fifteen rods at a time, and that by the use of two canes," Mr. Greenhon says. "I would have to sit or lie down on the ground when I was out trying to walk and the sweat would run down my face, with so much pain. I could not sleep at night for about five or six weeks."

"I tried different doctors' medicines, but they were all no good. Then I sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills and almost from the first they brought relief. By the time I had taken fourteen boxes of them my rheumatism was all gone and I can truly say I feel better than I have in the last twenty-five years."

Pictureque Senator Stewart.

With his flowing patriarchal beard, white as a snow bank, and massive figure, but little bent in spite of his three score years and seventeen, Senator Stewart of Nevada is a man whom visitors in the senate galleries look at more than once. Generally he is enveloped in a capacious frock coat that falls to his knees and adds to his stately appearance. But of late the senator has adopted a more conspicuous attire. He wears a dinky little blue coat, not half as long as his coats of former days, and a waistcoat white as his linen shirt front or his abundant beard. The doorkeepers have been on the point of stopping the Nevanadan more than once, thinking it altogether a different man.

Taking Up Public Land.

More than 22,824,299 acres of the public lands were turned over to private individuals last year. This means that an area almost equal to that of the state of Indiana has within that time been added to the productive regions of the United States. Most of these newly opened lands were homesteaded by farmers.

Metal Coops.

At a state fair recently the writer saw some coops made out of metal, the parts being adjustable. The idea is a good one. It is not necessary to go to the patent men to buy, but any man of intelligence can invent a metal coop for himself with side and ends as well as floors adjustable. Such a coop has several advantages over the wooden coop. It should last forever, if properly painted and taken care of. No rat can gnaw a hole through such a coop, nor are there permanent crevices in which lice can collect. They have no pores to fill up with disease germs, to subsequently breed disease. They may be scalded out frequently or may be subjected to a degree of heat that will destroy all life. If the metal floors come into contact with the wet ground they do not get damp.—Farmers' Review.

Buffinton's Poultry.

Buffinton's strain of Partridge Plymouth Rocks was made by crossing Partridge Wyandotte males with Partridge Cochins females, writes Rowland G. Buffinton. Others were making the same variety under the name of Golden Plymouth Rock. We purchased some of this stock, also some first cross hens of Mr. Brackenbury of New York, to put with our stock, and we have on our farm the largest flock of extra quality birds in the country. We do not claim for this variety to be better than all others, but it makes a valuable addition to the American varieties. They lay as well as the Barred and White Plymouth Rocks, and, owing to the Cochins blood, make one of the best market fowl. This variety has not been as hard to perfect as some other breeds; the penciling was already made; most all the males have yellow legs, but a larger percent of females still have the willow or dark shade on shanks, and this season nearly all of my birds are free from feathers or stubs on shanks.—Farm Poultry.

Clean and Pure Feed.

Poultry that are fed grain receive pure feed, but it is not by any means advisable to make grain the sole ration of the poultry. Soft feeds will have to be fed to some extent and troughs must be used for this kind of feed. Where the residue is left to sour the fowls will show no effects in time. Fermented feeds do not appear to be readily digested by poultry. Carelessness in the matter of cleaning the troughs may cost the poultry owner dear. It requires some effort to have the feeding and watering vessels always clean, but it is the only thing that should be done. Spoiled food is a disease breeder and it should not be permitted within reach of the fowls.

Sand in the Food.

Sand is no substitute for gravel, and the mixing of sand in the food is useless. When coarse grit is swallowed by the fowl it is voided before it becomes as fine as sand. Grit provides the mechanical appliances for grinding the food in the gizzard. It really cuts the food, hence the sharper the edges the more it is preferred by poultry. When the grit becomes worn until round and smooth it is passed on as useless. In using grit, therefore, endeavor to secure that which is hard and sharp. Sand is of no value whatever as grit.—Poultry Keeper.

Keep Chickens Healthy.

Whenever you see a chicken walking about slowly with its neck brought back between its shoulders you may depend upon it that there is something the matter with it. It is either lousy, sapped by mites, or half-starved or afflicted by all these at once. Mites are the worst, save perhaps, starvation. The poor biddies go about as if they were on their last legs and desperately sick. A little knowledge, assisted by a little work, will prevent all this. Nobody should be allowed to raise chickens who is too lazy to take the pains necessary to keep them healthy.—Homestead.

Importance of Breed.

While it does not pay the farmer to give much attention to mere fancy points in poultry it does pay well to give close attention to their breeding. Results can be obtained so quickly in breeding fowls that they give the farmer a fine opportunity to study the principles of breeding in a practical way. Moreover, it pays much better to keep pure-bred fowls than scrubs, provided the right breed is Clement W. Andrews, of Chicago, during the convention of the American Library association at St. Louis, visited a number of St. Louis factories.

In one of these inspections, noon struck in the cardroom of a certain mill, and all the cardroom boys put by their work and disappeared as if by magic.

Railroading in East Africa.

A collision recently occurred on the Uganda railway, British east Africa, that would be possible nowhere else on earth. A huge bull rhinoceros rushed out of the bush and charged at full speed the so-called "up mixed" train, which was slowing down as it approached the station Sultan Hamud, 213 miles from Mombasa. The train was stopped and the "rhino" was discovered about 100 yards down the track. Slowly he returned to the jungle and was lost to sight. He did not escape unharmed, for pieces of his thick skin were found adhering to the train, but the fierceness of his assault smashed the engine stop and splintered the inch and a half footboard of the first carriage.

HABIT'S CHAIN

Certain Habits Unconsciously Formed and Hard to Break.

An American philosopher estimates that the amount of will power necessary to break a life-long habit would, if it could be transformed, lift a weight of many tons.

It sometimes requires a higher degree of heroism to break the chains of a pernicious habit than to lead a forlorn hope in a bloody battle. A lady writes from an Indiana town:

"From my earliest childhood I was a lover of coffee. Before I was out of my teens I was a miserable dyspeptic, suffering terribly at times with my stomach."

"I was convinced that it was coffee that was causing the trouble and yet I could not deny myself a cup for breakfast. At the age of 26 I was in very poor health, indeed. My sister told me I was in danger of becoming a coffee drunkard."

"But I never could give up drinking coffee for breakfast although it kept me constantly ill, until I tried Postum. I learned to make it properly according to directions, and now we can hardly do without Postum for breakfast, and care nothing at all for coffee."

"I am no longer troubled with dyspepsia, do not have spells of suffering with my stomach that used to trouble me so when I drank coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Every housekeeper should know that if they will buy Defiance Cold Water Starch for laundry use they will save not only time, but because never sticks to the iron, but because each package contains 16 oz.—one full pound—while all other Cold Water Starches are put up in 8-ounce packages, and the price is the same, 10 cents. Defiance never sticks.

PINKHAM:—Gradual loss DEAR Mth and nerve force told me something was radically wrong with me. DAIRY NOTES

The True Dairyman.

The writer has known men to go into dairying because they believed it possible to make money out of it. They had a perfect hatred of the business and endured it much as the prisoner does his chains. The only man that should go into the business of dairying is the man that likes the business and has a deep interest in the success of all dairy effort. He should be a man that likes to care for live stock and has an ambition to own the best he can procure or breed. He also has an ideal in his mind of the kind of a dairy cow he wants and tries to get her. The true dairyman will learn enough about his cows to learn how to test them and fix in his own mind their relative merits. He will in no sense become a breed mixer, but will strive to make the most of the work of the old founders of the breeds.

The true dairyman cares about the kind of a barn he keeps his cows in and is forever trying to improve the conditions under which his cows are kept and milk produced. He takes measures to keep everything clean and sometimes boasts that if a man is blindfolded and led into his cow stable he will not suspect where he is. He has become an expert on the compounding of rations or is in process of becoming one. He has made himself familiar with the elements of growth and the foods required for milk production. In short he has discovered that the dairy world is a large one and that the interests are so varied that a man may spend a life time in learning about them.

The Cow Feed Bill.

All intelligent dairymen and farmers are agreed that the milk cow to be the most profitable must have protein foods to balance the rations with corn or corn meal, silage, etc. Cotton seed meal and linseed meal are rich in protein, but expensive foods for this purpose. Alfalfa is also very rich in protein, and as the growing of it is increasing rapidly it may soon supply this need, and farmers may then grow their protein as well as corn for silage. In referring to this subject the Jersey Bulletin:

"The northern dairyman sees the profit in bran and by products of the milk slipping away from his reach, and if such prices are to be fixed thus by the demand, then the butter fat will have to be made by a cheaper substitute. Something will have to fill the place of bran. As a by-product of wheat for dairy cows it can not be surpassed. Alfalfa is about equal to wheat bran in analysis, but there is always some indigestible matter about forage crops that 'stands in the light' of modern dairymen.

Silage looks as feasible and likely a plan as any to solve the problem. This in combination with some cheap but efficient concentrate, would materially benefit the producer. There is no question but corn silage is the ideal cheap feed; but how to grow some other crop along with it, and sell them readily so as to balance up the ration, is not yet solved. This is difficult to do, although easy to look upon."—Indiana Farmer.

The Milkmaid's Hands.

The milkmaid's hands should be washed and dried just before milking. The custom of sitting down to milk without washing the hands is a bad one, yet it is one that has become well-nigh universal. Men brush the cows, clean out the barn, sweep the floor, handle feeds, and then take the pails and sit down to milk. Their hands have become hard and dry in the various operations, but they soften them by milking a little milk into their palms and rubbing on the teats of the cows. This is not a desirable thing to do, as it merely plasters the invisible dirt onto the teats, and the same in a short time becomes dry enough to fall into the milk. The custom of washing the hands before milking is not one easy to establish, for usually only cold water is obtainable in the barn. A trip must be made to the house in most cases. The only solution of the problem is to carry to the stable a pail full of warm water just as milking is about to begin. The washing of the hands is of enough importance to justify the producer of the milk taking some trouble to see that it is done. We realize the fact that in the case of milk intended for city delivery it is about impossible to get the milkers to go to the trouble of taking the precautions mentioned. They say that their milk is to be poured into cans that contain dirty milk from other farms, and that it would therefore spoil just as quickly anyway. This shows something wrong in our practice of producing milk for public consumption.

Brush Your Cows.

Dairymen should practice brushing their cows daily. No fifth should be allowed to remain on their sides or udders. It not only causes discomfort to the cows, but it is impossible to get pure, sweet, clean milk or make butter if the cows are filthy.

It has been fully demonstrated that cows will not give their usual supply of milk without the conditions are favorable. Boisterous language should not be permitted. The stables should be cleaned daily, proper bedding provided, in fact, all the details should Duty Served.

Some few days ago a policeman was sent to serve a summons on a notorious poacher. This person, who lived alone and had evaded service successfully for some time, was the owner of a male goat. My friend, whom I will call Mac, went to the defendant's house; but the wily poacher, observing his approach, had fled, leaving the door unfastened. Mac saw the goat tied up in a corner, entered, and solemnly read the summons to him, after which he stuck the copy on his horns. He then went home and endorsed the paper thus:—

"Served by leaving a copy of this summons in defendant's residence at —, with an inmate," etc.

When proving service Mac was asked by the magistrate:

"Was the inmate of age?"

"Your worship," said my friend, laying his hand on the middle button of his tunic, "he had a beard down to that."—London Tit-Bits.

A GREAT INSTITUTION.

It is unusual that a single institution in a city of 3,000 people will overshadow in importance every other interest, but such is the case with the American School of Osteopathy, and A. T. Still Infirmary at Kirksville, Mo.

A stranger in Kirksville is immediately impressed with the idea that the town is sustained by this institution. In fact, Kirksville has been made what it is today by Dr. Still and his famous School and Infirmary. It is the largest patronized unendowed institution of its kind in the United States.

Dr. Still's school enrolls over 700 students each year, and each student is required to attend four terms of five months each before completing the course of study. There are over 2,000 graduates and they are practicing in every state and territory of the Union. About two-thirds of the states have passed special laws legalizing the science.

The school teaches every branch taught in medical colleges except "drugs" and osteopathy is substituted for that. So thorough is the teaching in anatomy that over one hundred human bodies are dissected yearly by the students. At the infirmary, patients from every part of the country and with almost every form of disease are constantly under treatment. For the past fifteen years almost every train coming to Kirksville has brought some new sufferer hoping to find relief by the science of Osteopathy. By the thousands who have left the institution benefited by the treatment, the science has been heralded to the world as a safe and rational method of cure. Several years ago a free clinic was established in connection with the practice department of the school and this is still in operation. Hundreds of the worthy poor, who are unable to pay for treatment, are treated every afternoon by the senior students free of charge.

AGRICULTURE

Bees Carry Clipped Queen.

"I will give you the proof of a statement I made two or three years ago, namely: that sometimes, at swarming-time, bees do carry a clipped queen," remarks Gustave Gross in the American Bee Journal. "A friend of mine lived a swarm which, on the next day, left the hive and started for the woods; he being present at the time drove them back by throwing water on them. After a while they came out again and then he clipped the queen. But the next day they left for the woods; his family noted the direction they took, and about a week after he hunted them up, cut the tree down and there was his clipped queen. At that time there were no bees nearer than four miles. The tree he cut down was a quarter of a mile from the yard."

"As I clip all my queens whenever a swarm issues while I am in the yard, I hasten to the hive in order to cage the queen, so as to make sure of her. It has twice happened that I did not see the queen, but afterward found her on my hat. How did she get there?"

"Several times also I have seen the queen come out last of all, one or two bees bringing her out 'by the ear,' so to say. In such cases I have caught her and put her in a cage. But next time it happens I shall watch to see what the bees do."

Expense of Growing Wheat.

The expense of growing an acre of wheat varies greatly in different localities, the price ranging from $7.50 to $12 throughout the arid region. On large areas such as farmers usually seed, the cost need not exceed $7.75 an acre in any irrigated locality. With this reduction in the expense, the profits would be largely increased, providing equally good yields were secured. The profit depends primarily on the cost of production, but it varies principally with the yield and the market price realized. While it varies widely the average is probably close to ten dollars an acre which is enough to pay at least forty per cent on the market price of lands or over ten per cent on a valuation of $100 an acre. While wheat growing on the non irrigated acres such as we see in the Divide country is not annually so great as in the irrigated districts the profits are often quite as good when a favorable season comes around as was the case this year but the figures we give apply particularly to irrigated lands. Many of our irrigated farms have netted fully $20 an acre for a period of years when alternated with alfalfa and spuds as rotation crops.

Making Ready for Alfalfa.

Alfalfa fields and lands intended for other crops could be irrigated and filled with moisture this winter with profit. The water that runs by is doing the farmers no good. Turn it on the land, where it will be stored up against next summer's need. It is a great mistake to turn the water off from the canals as soon as the growing season is over, as is generally done throughout the west. The water can be safely and profitably run on the land so long as it soaks in without freezing. This of course can not be done where alkali deposits have been brought to the surface to ruin the land. We believe the day will soon come when no water will be allowed to run to waste, but will be stored in the soil for the needs of the coming crop, whether fruit, hay, grain or vegetables. The government proposes to construct expensive deservoirs for storing irrigating water. While awaiting their completion would it not be well for every farmer to practice for future need. We know from experience that this will pay handsomely on nearly every farm in the west.—Denver Field and Farm.

Limited Capital.

When one has had no experience he should begin with the lowest risk. If the capital is small, it is better to rent for a year or two than to buy. If one buys he reduces his working capital, and should he be unsuccessful he must stay on the farm until he can sell it, while if he rents he can return the farm to the owner, and leave. It is claimed that if one buys he can when beginning get everything ready for a permanent stay, which is true, but that is just what an inexperienced person should not do. He should start in a small way, and add to his capital by increasing his flocks every year, so that by the time he has a large number of fowls he will know much more than when he began. He can then take his fowls to a purchased farm and feel that he has made a good beginning.—Farm and Fireside.

Cracked Corn.

Corn is cracked simply for convenience of feeding to chicks. It is best to allow the gizzard to reduce it. While corn contains about eleven per cent of protein, five per cent of fat, seventy per cent of starch, two per cent of crude fiber and one and one-half per cent of mineral matter. The rest is water. There is no difference in whole or cracked corn, the loss of fine material being some of the starch, and the starchy matter of the outer skin, which is silicious and of no value. Cracking the corn only reduces it in

SISTERS OF CHARITY

Uses Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

In every country of the civilized world Sisters of Charity are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never failing safeguard.

Dr. Hartman receives many letters from Catholic Sisters from all over the United States. A recommendation recently received from a Catholic institution in Detroit, Mich., reads as follows:

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir: "The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured."

—Sisters of Charity.

The young girl was under the care of the Sisters of Charity and used Peruna for catarrh of the throat with good results as the above letter testifies.

The following letter is from Congressman Meekison, of Napoleon, Ohio:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen: "I have used several bottles of Peruna, and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head, and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first man to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.
