A Novel Entertainment.
If life's song is dragging or lacking of tone,
Then come to our party the twenty-eighth of June;
You'll find there more pleasure than most can afford,
Life's song will be finished, you'll find the Lost Chord.

We Endeavorers urge every person to come
And each to bring with them to aid us some:
Two cents for every foot you're tall,
(We'll measure you on door or wall).

And a penny for each inch over give
To show thereby how high you live.
With music and song, refreshments and pleasure,
We'll greet every one at our party of Measure.

Reformed church basement, Friday evening. Come and live long.

THE HAYWOOD TRIAL.

The state in the trial at Boise, Idaho, made dramatic production and proof of the Goddard bomb, and besides offering further contributions of the testimony of Harry Orchard against William D. Haywood, secured a ruling under which a number of the denunciatory articles published in the Miners' Magazine, official organ of the Western Federation of Miners, will be admitted in evidence.

The prosecution in the Steuenberg murder trial offered one of the most important pieces of evidence against William D. Haywood when, recalling Harry Orchard for re-direct examination, it introduced and secured the admission of four letters tending to show that Haywood, during the fall of 1905, when Orchard swears he was engaged on various crimes for the federation leaders, had participated in a plan to deceive Mrs. Orchard the second, of Cripple Creek, as to the whereabouts of her husband.

The Haywood trial was suspended one day that Harry Orchard might be taken to court at Caldwell, and the case against him for murdering Steuenberg postponed to the next term of court.

The prosecution in the Steuenberg murder trial, entering in earnest upon the substantiation and corroboration of Harry Orchard's testimony, showed a continuous thread of evidence connecting George Pettibone's store in Denver with Orchard at San Francisco engaged on the Bradley murder plot, partly another direct line by which it is hoped to show that Haywood engaged and paid Steve Adams for the same desperate work, and added special touches of confirmation to Orchard's general story.

FAILED IN SMALL THINGS.

Congressman Evidently Was No Hero to His Wife.

There is a certain congressman who, whatever authority he may hold in the councils of state, is of comparatively minor importance in his own household. Indeed, it has been unkindly intimated that his wife is "the whole thing" in their establishment.

Representative and Mrs. Blank had been to Baltimore one afternoon. When they left the train at Washington, on their return, Mrs. Blank discovered that her umbrella, which had been entrusted to the care of her husband, was missing.

"Where's my umbrella?" she demanded.

"I'm afraid I've forgotten it, my dear," meekly answered the congressman. "It must still be in the train." "In the train?" snorted the lady. "And to think that the affairs of the nation are entrusted to a man who doesn't know enough to take care of a woman's umbrella!"—Success Magazine.

PURIFIED LIFE INSURANCE.

Benefits from New Law, Which Remains Substantially Unchanged.

Through the influence of Gov. Hughes, the New York Legislature decided to make no radical changes in the new insurance law. It was pointed out by Gov. Hughes that the New York law has already accomplished widespread reforms, with proportionate benefits to policyholders, and that it should be given a thorough trial before any amendments were seriously considered. It is estimated that the cost of the mismanagement of the past did not average more than 20 cents to each policyholder, while the benefits to present and future policyholders will amount to many times more and be cumulative besides. The speed craze of the big companies and the excessive cost of securing new business was the most extravagant evil of the old managements. Under the new regime the cost of new business has already been greatly reduced, along with other economies.

The showing made by the Equitable Life Assurance Society in its report for 1906 was a strong argument against meddling with the new law. In the Equitable alone there was a saving of over $2,000,000 in expenses, besides an increase in the income from the Society's assets amounting to as much more. The ratios of the Equitable's total expenses to its total income was 19.42% in 1904, 17.38% in 1905, and only 14.48% in 1906. The dividends paid to Equitable policyholders in 1906 amounted to $7,289,734, which was an increase of more than 9% over 1905.

While the Equitable made a better showing than any other big company, all reported radical economies and under such conditions the Legislature wisely decided to leave the law substantially as it stands.

Forgetting Something.

When the train that conveyed President Roosevelt through Virginia on his last trip south stopped at Charlottesville, a negro approached the president's car and passed aboard a big basketful of fine fruit, to which was attached the card of a prominent grower.

In course of time the orchardist received a letter of acknowledgment from the White House expressing the president's appreciation of the gift, and complimenting the donor upon his fruit. The recipient of the letter was, of course, greatly pleased, and, feeling sure that his head gardener would be much interested in the letter, he read it to him. The darky who served in the capacity mentioned listened gravely, but his only comment was:

"He doan' say nothin' 'bout sendin' back de basket, do he?"—Success Magazine.

Text Somewhat Apropos.

The Rev. J. B. Hammill, the eloquent preacher of the Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal church, Brooklyn, was preaching at Sayville, L. I., from the text "Look well to your foundations." After repeating the text he leaned heavily on the pulpit desk, which gave way and plunged over the altar rail, nearly hitting the laymen in the front seat and scattering the Bible and the preacher's notes among the holders of the pews. The aged preacher barely escaped a tumble over the altar with the heavy desk.

WENT TO TEA

And It Wound Her Bobbin.

Tea drinking frequently affects people as badly as coffee. A lady in Salisbury, Md., says that she was compelled to abandon the use of coffee a good many years ago, because it threatened to ruin her health and that she went over to tea drinking, but finally, she had dyspepsia so bad that she had lost twenty-five pounds and no food seemed to agree with her.

She further says: "As this time I was induced to take up the famous food drink, Postum, and was so much pleased with the results that I have never been without it since. I commenced to improve at once, regained my twenty-five pounds of flesh and went some beyond my usual weight."

"I know Postum to be good, pure, and healthful, and there never was an article, and never will be, I believe, that does so surely take the place of coffee, as Postum Food Coffee. The beauty of it all is that it is satisfying and wonderfully nourishing. I feel as if I could not sing its praises too loud." Read "The Road to Wellville," in page "There's a Reason."

FOR THE MERCHANT

LITTLE POINTS THAT HELP IN SELLING GOODS.

BE READY FOR OPPORTUNITY

Let the Public Know What You Have to Sell—Never Stop Pushing—A Hint for the Clerks.

Pluck.

How often you hear one business man say of another who has been successful: "Ain't he lucky?" Luck has nothing to do with anyone's success. It is pluck.

Pluck and enthusiasm are the powers which make the winner. With these two qualities, which are invariably found together, a man will succeed.

Business men who have achieved greatness in their line are those who possess an abundance of enthusiasm.

A possession that is better than anything else to a man is that determination of character known as pluck, and an enthusiastic confidence that he will succeed.

To persevere against great odds, and to make a victorious fight in the face of almost impossibilities, it requires pluck which is not governed by impulse.

To cultivate pluck one must encourage steadfastness of purpose. When a thing is begun it should be finished.

The trouble with most of us is not so much that we have a hard row work to increase business in the face of strong competition. But the business is there, and somebody will get it—you or your neighbor, or perhaps your competitor in the next town. Which shall it be? Help your employes increase your business.

Be Business Throughout.

A joke is a joke, but business is no joke, and it is mighty hard to make the two mix.

A man once said: "It pays to advertise most businesses, but mine is different." The sheriff sold him out, and now he works for his successor, who does advertise.

Success.

The secret of most successes lies in the man rather than in the method. Making people want the goods is, after all, about as near the secret of it as there comes to being any secret. Make the public want what you have to sell and the sale is half made.

Epitaph of a failure: "He worked overtime dodging work."

That Man with the Overalls.

When the man with the overalls comes into your store don't turn around and take your time to wait on him. Don't snub the man with the overalls in order to wait upon some elite of your town—that is, if the overall man came into your store first. Your overall man usually stands by the home town. He works in the shops, in the stock yards, in the factories and in the mills. His dollar is just as good as the dollar given to you by the man who tries to put on all kinds of airs in your town. The old American eagle on the silver dollar given to you by the man attired in to hoe but that we dislike hoeing. Opportunity knocks once—and often a dozen times—at every door, but you have no kick against the fates if Opportunity knocks, finds you lost in a pipe dream and turns away never to return.

Turn to and bury the mail-order house monopoly under the sod of local prosperity. You can do it by spending your money with the local merchants, if you give them an opportunity they will treat you fairly, and they, like yourself, represent the interests of the home town.

Bacon said: "The mold of a man's fortune is in his own hands."

All men cannot be captains of industry. All men cannot succeed phenomenally. All men, it seems, cannot succeed even moderately, but all men can make an effort to succeed.

We must not stop striving to reach a higher and better place until we are willing to sink to the bottom. If we simply expect to float and not try to swim we might just as well quit. It would be well for us to keep as a motto before us: "Perseverance and pluck conquer all things," for it bears close relationship to the subject chosen. If we regarded the little opportunities in life more seriously and made the most use of them we would be better able to master the golden opportunities.

Let It Be Known.

You may know that you have the best assorted stock in town, but the public will not know it unless you tell them about it; they are not clairvoyants. First use the newspapers liberally, then circulars, personal letters, talk to them when you can catch them in your store, at their homes—anywhere. The first and last thing to bear in mind about advertising is that it is as wide as human nature in its appeal.

Advertising is the mighty engine of success, and without it the business world would be minus its dynamo of energy.

Push All the Time.

If it pays to push when business is good, it pays to push when business is bad.

If it pays to push when business is bad, it pays to push when business is good.

If it pays to push at all, it pays to push all the time.

Therefore, don't let it die. When everything is coming your way, push to make it come the faster. When everything is going the other way, push to make it come back to you.

Push all the time and you'll feel the better for it, and make more money.

It takes hard thinking and hard overall counts for just as much and screams just as hard as the bird on the dollar turned over by the man who belongs to the "upper ten." Besides, if the man in the overalls wants credit until Saturday night or until the first of the month, you'll stand to win to get the cash from him when he says he'll pay you. Don't give him the marble heart. You want his trade. He needs dry goods and groceries, and he will spend his money with you if you treat him right.

Business Sickness a Common Complaint.

Stuck in a rut, are you? Same old rut, boss doesn't appreciate your efforts. Interest in your business wearing thin at the edges? Eh? Thought so! Well, what are you waiting for?

You know nothing really comes to the fellow who waits, except the "push." Some people never "got there" unless they're pushed.

If you're sick of your job you're doing yourself and your boss a bad turn by hanging on. Start looking around for another job—that'll keep your mind liquid. Wonderful what a pick-me-up job-hunting is to some people.

If you get "turned down" two or three times you'll begin to think what small potatoes you really are after all, and that's good tonic for business sickness—the first sign of recovery, in fact.

Your present job will, maybe, acquire a fresh interest to you, and you'll come at it again like a two-year-old.

If you were born with a square chin and the normal amount of gray matter you'll probably want to get ahead of the procession. There is only one sure way, and that is "know how." A fellow with "know how" never loses interest in his job. He wouldn't get the "know how" if he did.

It's marvelous how interesting business is when you get the proper spirit. Some men obtain more genuine pleasure from business than they do from play. If you want to enjoy business—study it—soak yourself in it, and imagine it's play.

You won't have to imagine long, and when you've got the spirit of the game you couldn't be kept out of it with a pickax.

Fashion Is Ever Changing.

Mrs. Shopper—Is that hat that was $25 this morning the same price still? Milliner—Certainly! Why not?

Mrs. Shopper—Well, it's not such a new style as it was then.—Judge.

THE LIONS OF THE LORD

A TALE OF THE OLD WEST
BY HARRY LEON WILSON

CHAPTER XXXIV.—Continued.

But Prudence was not there, and he wondered with dismay if she had joined the rest of the village and gone out to meet the prophet. He had seen the last of them going along the dusty road to the north, men and women and little children, hot, excited, and eager. It did not seem like her to be among them, and yet except for those before him working about the bowery, and a few mothers with children in arms, the town was apparently deserted.

But even as he waited he heard the wailing alarm of a bugle, and saw a scurrying of backs in the dusty haze far up the road. The Wild Ram of the Mountains gave a few hurried commands for the very final touches, called off his force from the now complete bowery, and a solitary Gentle was for the moment left to greet the oncoming procession.

Presently, however, from the dark interiors of the log houses came the mothers with babies, a few aged sties too feeble for the march, and such of the remaining housewives as could leave for a little time the dinners they were cooking. They made but a thin line along the little street, and follett saw at once that Prudence was not among them. He must wait and see if she marched in the approaching procession.

Already the mounted escort was coming into view, four abreast, captained by Elder Wardle, who, with a sash of red and gold slanted across his breast, was riding nervously, as his seat could be kept only by the most skillful horsemanship, a white mule that he was known to treat with fearless disrespect on days that were not great. Behind the martial Wardle was Peter Peterson, Peter Long Peterson, and Peter Long Peter Peterson, the most martial looking men in Amalson after their leader; and then came a few more fours of proudly mounted saints.

After this escort, separated by an interval that would let the dust settle a little, came the body of the procession. First a carriage containing the prophet, portly, strong-faced, easy of manner, as became a giant who felt kindly in his might. By his side was his wife, Amelia, the reigning favorite, who could play the piano and sing "Fair Blazen on the Rhine" with a dash that was said to be superb. Behind this float of honor came other carriages bearing the prophet's counselors, the apostles, chief bishop, bishops generally, elders, priests and deacons, each taking precedence near the prophet's carriage by seniority of rank or ordination. Along the line of carriages were outriders, bearing proudly aloft the banners upon which suitable devices were printed:

"God Bless Brigham Young!"

"Hail to Zion's Chief!"

"The Lion of the Lord."

"Welcome to our Mouthpiece of God!"

Behind the last carriage came the citizens in procession, each detachment with its banner. The elderly brethren stepped briskly under "Fathers in Israel"; the elderly sisters gazed proudly aloft to "Mothers in Israel." Then came a company of young men whose banner announced them as "Defenders of Zion." They were followed by a company of maidens led by Matilda Wright, striving to be not too much elated, and whose banner bore the inscription, "Daughters of Zion." At the last came the children, openly set up by the occasion, and big-eyed with importance, the boy who carried their banner, "The Hope of Israel," going with wonderful rigidity, casting not so much as an eye either to right or left.

But Prudence had not been in this triumphal column, nor was she among any of the women who stood with children in their arms, or who rushed to the doors with sleeves rolled up and a long spoon or fork in their hands.

Then all at once a great inspiration came to follett. When the last dusty little white-dressed girl had trudged solemnly by, and the head of the procession was already winding down the lane that led to Elder Wardle's place, he called himself a fool and turned back. He walked like a man who has suddenly remembered that which he should not have forgotten. And yet he had remembered nothing at all. He had only thought of a possibility, but one that became more plausible with every step; especially when he reached the Rae house and found it deserted. Whenever he thought of his stupidity, which was every score of steps, he would break into a little trot that made the willows along the creek on his left run into a yellowish green blur.

He was breathing hard by the time he had made the last ascent and stood in the cool shade of the comforting pines. He waited until his pulse became slower, wiping his forehead with the blue neckerchief which Prudence had suggested that she liked to see him wear in place of the one of scarlet. When he had cooled and calmed himself a little, he stepped lightly on,

Around the big rock he went, over the "down timber" beyond it, up over the rise down which the waters tumbled, and then sharply to the right where their nook was, a call to her already on his lips.

But she was not there. He could see the place at a glance. Nothing below met his eye but the straight red trunks of the pines and the brown carpet beneath them. A jay posed his deep shining blue on a cluster of scarlet of sumac, and, cocking his crested head, screamed at him mockingly. The canyon's cool breath fanned him and the pine-tops sighed and sang. At first he was disheartened; but then his eyes caught a gleam of white and red under the pine, touched to movement by a low-swinging breeze.

It was her hat swaying where she had hung it on a broken bough of the tree she liked to lean against. And there was her book; not the Book of Mormon, but a secular, frivolous thing called "Leaflets of Memory, an illuminated Annual for the Year 1847." It was lying on its face, open at the sentimental tale of "Anastasia." He put it down where she had left it. The canyon was narrow and she would hardly leave the waterside for the steep trail. She would be at the upper cascade or in the little park above it, or somewhere between. He crossed the stream, and there in the damp sand was the print of a small heel where she had made a long step from the last stone. He began to hurry again, clambering recklessly over boulders, or through the underbrush where the sides of the stream were steep. When the upper cascade came in sight his heart leaped, for there he caught the fleeting shimmer of a skirt and the gleam of a dark head.

"I Never Would Have Given You Up—I'm Never Going To."

He hurried on, and after a moment's climb had her in full view, standing on the ledge below which the big trout lay. There he saw her turn so that he would have sworn she looked at him. It seemed impossible that she had not seen him; but to his surprise she at once started up the stream, swiftly footing over the rough way, now a little step, now a free leap, grasping a willow to pull herself up an incline, then disappearing around a clump of cedars.

He redoubled his speed over the rocks. When she next came into view, still far ahead, he shouted long and loud. It was almost certain that she must hear; and yet she made no sign. She seemed even to speed ahead the faster for his hail.

Again he sprang forward to cover the distance between them, and again he shouted when the next view of her showed that he was gaining. This time he was sure she heard; but she did not look back, and she very plainly increased her speed.

For an instant he stood aghast at this discovery; then he laughed.

"Well if you want a race, you'll get it!"

He was off again along the rough bed of the stream. He shouted no more, but slowly increased the gain he had made upon her. Instead of losing time by climbing up over the bank, he splashed through the water at two places where the little stream was wide and shallow. Then at last he saw that he was closing in upon her. Soon he was near enough to see that she also knew it.

He began at that moment an extended course of marveling at the way of woman. For now she had reached the edge of the little open park, and as placidly seating herself on a fallen tree in the grove of quaking aspens. He could not understand this change of manner. And when he reached the opening she again astounded him by greeting him with every manifestation of surprise, from the first nervous start to the pushing up of her dark brows.

"Why," she began, "how did you ever think of coming here?"

But he had twice hurried fruitlessly this hot morning and he was not again to be baffled. As he advanced toward her, she regarded him with some apprehension until he stopped a safe six feet away. She had noted certain lines of determination in his face.

"Now what's the use of pretending?—what did you run for?"

"I—run?"

Again the curving black brows went up in frank surprise.

"Yes,—you ran!"

He took a threatening step forward, and the brows promptly fell to a serious intendment of his face.

"What did you do it for?"

She stood up. "What did I do it for?—what did I do it for?"

But his eyes were searching her and she had to lower her own. Then she looked up again, and laughed nervously.

"I—I don't know—I couldn't help it." Again she laughed. "And why did you run? how did you think of coming here?"

"I'll tell you how, now I've caught you." He started toward her, but she was quickly backing away into the opening of the little park, still laughing.

"Look out for that blow-down back of you!" he called. In the second that from him to look upon her in the new light that enveloped them both, still holding her hands.

"There's one good thing about your marriages,—they marry you for eternity, don't they? That's for ever—only it isn't long enough, even so—not for me."

"I thought you were never coming."

"But you said—he saw the futility of it, however, and kissed her instead."

"I was afraid of you all this summer," he said.

"I was afraid of you, too."

"You got over it yesterday all right."

"How?"

"You kissed me."

"Never—what an awful thing to say!"

"But you did—twice—don't you remember?"

"Oh, well, it doesn't matter. If I did it wasn't at all like—like—"

"Like that—"

"No—I didn't think anything about it."

"And now you'll never leave me, and I'll never leave you."

They sat on the fallen tree.

"And to think of that old—"

"Oh, don't talk of it. That's why I ran off here—so I couldn't hear anything about it until he went away."

"Why didn't you tell me you were coming?"

"I didn't think you were so stupid."

"How was I to know where you were coming?"

But now she was reminded of something.

"Tell me one thing—did you ever know a little short, fat girl, a blonde that you liked very much?"

"Never!"

"Then what did you talk so much about her for yesterday if you didn't? You'd speak of her every time."

"I didn't think you were so stupid."

"Well, I can't see—"

"You don't need to—we'll call it even."

And so the talk went until the sun had fallen for an hour and they knew it was time to go below.

"We will go to the meeting together," she said, "and then father shall tell Brigham—tell him—"

"That you're going to marry me. Why don't you say it?"

"That I'm going to marry you, and be your only wife." She nestled under his arm again.

"For time and eternity—that's the way your church puts it."

Then, not knowing it, they took their last walk down the pine-hung glade. Many times he picked her lightly up to carry her over rough places and was loth to put her down,—having, in truth, to be bribed thereto.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Rise and Fall of a Bent Little Prophet.

Down in the village the various dinners of ceremony to the visiting officials were over. An hour had followed of decent rest and informal chat between the visitors and their hosts, touching impartially on matters of general interest; on irrigation, the gift of tongues, the season's crop of peaches, the pouring out of the Spirit abroad, the best mixture of sheep-dip; on many matters not displeasing to the practical-minded Deity reigning over them.

Then the entire populace of Amalson, in its Sunday best of "valley tan" or store-goods, flocked to the little square and sat expectantly on the benches under the green roof of the bowery, ready to absorb the droppings of the sanctuary.

In due time came Brigham, strolling between Elder Wardle and Bishop Wright, bland, affable, and benignant. On the platform about him sat his Counsellors, the more distinguished of his suite, and the local dignitaries of the Church.

Among these came the little bent man with an unwonted color in his face, coming in absorbed in thought, shaking hands even with Brigham with something of abstraction in his manner. Prudence and follett came late, finding seats at the back next to a generous row of the Mrs. Seth Wright.

When they had settled into their seats, the Wild Ram of the Mountains arose and invoked a blessing on those present and upon those who had gone behind the veil; adding a petition that Brigham be increased in his basket and in his store, in wives, flocks, and herds, and in the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

They sang another hymn, and when that was done, the little bent man arose and came hesitatingly forward to the baize-covered table that served as a pulpit. As President of the Stake it was his office to welcome the visitors, and this he did.

There were whisperings in the audience when his appearance was noted. It was the first time he had been seen by many of them in weeks. They whispered that he was failing.

The words of official welcome spoken, he began his discourse; but in a timid, shuffling manner so unlike his old self that still others whispered of his evident illness. Inside he burned with his purpose, but, with all his resolves, the presence of Brigham left him unnerfed. He began by referring to their many adversities since the day when they had first knelt to entreat the mercy of God upon the land. Then he spoke of revelations.

"You must all have had revelations, because they have come even to me. Perhaps you were deaf to the voice, as I have been. Perhaps you have trusted too readily in some revelation that came years ago, supposedly from God—in truth, from the Devil. Perhaps you have been deaf to later revelations meant to warn you of the other's falseness."

THROUGH THE STATE

NEWS GATHERED FROM VARIOUS INDIANA POINTS.

EDITOR IS CHAGRINED

Failure of Rensselaer Scribe's Effort to Land Postmastership Causes Him to Forsake Pen for Fruit Farm.

Rensselaer. — George E. Marshall, editor of the Rensselaer Republican for the last 26 years, has contracted for the sale of the paper, possession to be given October 1. Mr. Marshall is now in Oregon, where has just purchased a fruit farm at Medford, in the Rogue River valley. The farm consists of 76 acres and the price paid was $33,000, or over $400 per acre. This season's fruit crop, which is reserved by the owner, is estimated to be worth $10,000.

It is claimed the property is a 20 per cent. dividend paying investment.

The determination of Editor Marshall to seek a new home in the west is the result of the recent post office fight in Rensselaer. Mr. Marshall had been a bitter enemy of Congressman E. D. Crumpacker in previous campaigns, but during the last he became an ardent supporter of the representative, for which, it is stated, he expected to be rewarded with the Rensselaer post office, but another man was named by Mr. Crumpacker, and Mr. Marshall decided to dispose of his possessions here and seek a new home.

In a long article in the Republican at the close of the post office fight, after deploring the human tendency to sell one's independence for a mess of pottage, he wrote:

"The Republican editor is a recent frightful example of this truth. The particular mess of pottage for which he was willing to sell his independence was the position of postmaster in Rensselaer. We knew right well that we ought not to think of seeking that position, but the $1,500 and perquisites looked as large in our eyes as did the fabulous jackpot of gold under the northeast corner of the rainbow to our boyish vision, and it tempted us and we tumbled.

"Certain kind but mistaken friends told us that our more than a quarter century of faithful work for the Republican party should entitle us to that much reward; Congressman Crumpacker was sounded, and his talk from the first was most encouraging and later amounted to what, from a straightforward man, would have been a distinct promise, but we are not saying that we did not understand the Crumpacker method too well ever to put much reliance on his professions of good will and virtual promises."

Chicago Alumni Pilgrimage.

Valparaiso.—More than 400 members of the Chicago Alumni association made their annual pilgrimage to their alma mater, and with hundreds of citizens gathered at the Valparaiso university auditorium and presented a $5,000 pipe organ to the institution. The presentation speech was made by H. D. Vories, of Indianapolis, and was responded to by President Brown. The visiting guests were given banquets by the faculty. A concert followed the dedication, which was given by Arthur Dunham, Mrs. Ella Turner Meek and W. W. Hinshaw, of Chicago, and Helen Axe Brown, of this city.

No Soda? Then Charivari.

Marion.—To treating mob of hoodlums, $1.85. Added to the other expenses of matrimony bridegrooms must now include a bribe fund to purchase soda and candy for youngsters who otherwise would raise a din about the bridal residence for weeks. When the boys of Marion started to give a charivari for City Attorney Frank Charles he ordered a policeman to buy soda for the crowd, and this satisfied them. John Esler, just wedded, had to repeat the act. Now the boys give it as their ultimatum that no one may live in peace with his bride until their price has been paid.

Accuse Father? No; Suicide.

Huntington.—When his name was called in court, Emery Mosher, aged 23, failed to respond. A deputy sheriff sent out to find him reported that he had committed suicide by shooting. Mosher was to have been a witness in a case charging his father and sister Nora with murder. Rather than face the shame of the trial he took his own life. D. A. Mosher, the father, and his daughter Nora, were charged with the murder of the latter's infant daughter.

The Earliest Anchors.

The earliest anchors of which we have any record were of wood, and gradually, through the iron anchor of one hook and the anchor in the shape of a rake, there was evolved the anchor with the straight thick shank, the two curving arms with flattened extremities and the long cross stock. The process of storing one of these old anchors was a long and laborious one. It was hoisted up to the capstan or windlass; a man was let down by rope to hook on a huge tackle, by which the anchor was then hoisted, still perpendicular, to a stout projecting timber. Then the lower end had to be hoisted up horizontally by another tackle and the whole made fast. In the modern stockless anchor a chain is attached to it at the balancing point, and this is passed through a pulley at the head of the anchor davit. When the anchor is high enough, davit and all swing round until the anchor is over the billboard, where it rests and is secured by chains.—London Globe.

Working in Steel Masks.

The workman wore a steel mask with glazed eyeholes, a rubber suit, rubber gloves and rubber boots, and he carried a pair of tongs of silvery aluminum. "In certain departments of the plant," said the dynamite manufacturer, "all our workmen are dressed like that. They must be. Otherwise they would be smeared with chemicals and splashed with acids that would eat their flesh like liquid fire." "But the aluminum tongs?" "They are for lifting the gun cotton out of its nitric acid bath. Aluminum is the only metal upon which the nitric acid has no effect." He turned to the workman. "Everything all right, George?" he said. "So, so," came a sepulchral answer from behind the mask of steel.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Slang of Other Days.

Slang has always been a fruitful source for the expansion of language, and instances may be multiplied of words now respectable which were once tabooed as vulgarisms. But, on the other hand, there have been many slang phrases in use for centuries which have never become acceptable to the purists. As long ago as 1750 the celebrated letter writer Horace Walpole used to speak of "sitting gusling" and getting "drunk as an owl." Then again in the diary of one of the most prominent woman writers of the eighteenth century, Frances Burney, are found good slang phrases of the American college girl of today, as, for instance, "I sneaked out," "Did you ever know such a load?" and "I had a vile cold."—St. Louis Republic.

Hyperbole.

A Rochester clergyman was accustomed to use scientific terms, which the people did not understand. A deputation waited on him with the request that in the future whenever he used such terms he would explain them. On the following Sunday he used the term hyperbole and added: "As agreed on, I beg to explain this word. Were I to say that at this moment the whole of my congregation are sound asleep it would be hyperbole, but if I say that one-half are asleep that is no hyperbole, but the truth." The next day the deputation again called to say that the minister need not explain technical terms. The people would learn their meaning from a dictionary.—Rochester Herald.

At His Word.

Many postoffice names are queer enough to make one desire an explanation of them. Sometimes the explanation is queerer than the name itself. A minister in Cass county wrote to Washington in behalf of the residents of a growing hamlet, asking that a postoffice be added to its institutions. The request was favorably received, and he was asked to suggest a name that would be acceptable to his neighbors. He replied that they were not hard to please so long as the name was peculiar. The postoffice department took him at his word, and "Peculiar" is the name of the office to this day.—Kansas City Star.

It is not possible for men to be perfectly blessed and happy, except a few.—Plato.

MOSLEM ETIQUETTE.

Always Be in Good Humor and Talk Pleasant Things.

Here are some interesting Musselman injunctions of conviviality, says the London Lancet. The honor of being served first belongs to the invited guest who is in the possession of any high title or who has in any way or sphere distinguished himself. If the host himself is the oldest in the company or has any high decoration of merit, he must first begin the meal without delay in order not to let the others unduly wait. It shows bad upbringing to be in a melancholic mood at table or to speak of disagreeable things or to engage in inappropriate discussions on matters of religious polity. Foremost of all, one must always be in good humor and talk of pleasant things, as did the prophet himself. You must always help yourself from the side of the dish nearest to you and never try to find out the best bits, which ought to be left for other guests. If one of the invited has not much appetite, you must ask him up to three times with some kind chosen words to partake of the meals. A longer insistence would cause enmity and would be most inappropriate. You must never stop eating before others, because in doing so you will embarrass them and cause them to finish quickly in imitating you. Never eat gluttonously, but also never attempt to conceal your good appetite. Always eat little by little. Exaggerated compliments are always misplaced. The host's duty is to make his guests feel as comfortable as possible, encouraging the timid and shy. It is contrary to good taste to address and to fix the attention of a guest when he is eating. Even if the host is not accustomed to eat much he must always try not to finish before others. Should any dish be forbidden to him by his medical attendant he certainly must not partake of it, but must at the same time excuse himself before his guests. It is absolutely necessary to avoid every movement or gesture which is apt to create disgust.

A Mysterious Booming.

A strange phenomenon is that of the so called "guns of Burrisaul" in India. Burrisaul is a station in the Sunderbunds, the marshy delta of the Ganges, a region covered with a vast and luxuriant jungle of tropic vegetation. Here in the rainy season there is occasionally heard a loud, booming noise like the discharge of distant artillery. It seems to come from the south, but if one follows the sound in that direction its apparent distance does not diminish. Travelers have suggested that it may be produced by the heavy surf of the monsoon season thundering on the shores of the bay of Bengal or on an island, but the place of its origin has never been identified, nor has it been explained why the roar of the waves should be heard so much farther inland here than on other coasts.

A GOOD LAWN.

The Best Way to Prepare the Ground and Sow the Seed.

A good lawn may be made either by laying sod or growing seed. If turf is used, the lawn is sometimes ready for use in less time than when seed is used, but practically the difference is very slight. Fewer lawns are made from turf every year. The turf or soil is nearly always obtained from a nearby field. It abounds in coarse grasses and pernicious weeds. The former may be got rid of after considerable trouble, but the latter rarely ever. Sod laid lawns are nearly always uneven, seamy and varied in color and texture. Their cost, too, is much in excess of seeding the lawn down.

A lawn produced from a mixture of good, new, re-cleaned seeds of the finer grasses and clovers is superior in quality and texture to the best sod obtainable. To obtain the best results from sowing, the ground should be carefully dug over—not too deep, six to eight inches will be enough—and nicely leveled off; then sow on broadcast a good fertilizer, 600 pounds to the acre, or about ten pounds to every 15 by 15 square feet. Rake this in and roll it or fatten it with the back of a spade; then sow seventy pounds of some good lawn seed to the acre, or one pound to every 15 by 15 feet. Sow half this quantity walking one way and half walking at right angles to it, so as to get even distribution. Do not sow in windy weather, and be sure to rake the seed in, and after sowing roll it well or beat it flat with the spade. Those seeds that are deeply buried will not germinate, and those that are exposed will be scorched by the sun, blown or washed away or taken by the birds. Whenever necessary to sow in summer it is better to mix with rye or oats to protect the tender shoots from the hot sun.—Suburban Life.

The "Coney" of the Bible.

There is a queer little rock animal found in thousands in all parts of Cape Colony, South Africa, and called by the Dutch "daasje" (pronounced in English "dassie"). This little creature has many other names, such as the coney, daman, rock badger and rock rabbit. It is found also in Syria and is really the "coney" of the Bible, for one of the psalms contains this verse, "The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats and the rocks for the conies," while in the book of Proverbs we read, "The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks." The South African daasje is a pretty gray, furry creature, merry and sun loving, and when taken young makes a charming pet.—Amy Sutherland in St. Nicholas.

The Drawback.

Miss Victorie confides to the janitor's wife that her mistress, who is old and feeble, has promised to remember her in her will if she takes good care of her till she dies. The janitor's wife shrugs her shoulders. "The worst of that is, my dear, that the better you take care of her the longer you'll have to wait for your legacy."—Paris Journal.

The Wily Arab of Tripoli.

Down the street the faint intermittent tinkling of a bell was heard. "Burr-ro!" ("Get out!") in warning rasped the high pitched voice of a camel driver. I dodged quickly into the shop of a silversmith and watched four lumbering camels sapige softly by. To prevent those behind the driver from being stolen the halter rope of each is tied to the tail of the one ahead, and on the tail of the last camel are his flaps and flaps it from side to side tinkles a bell. A wily one of the faithful, not being rich in this world's goods, turned covetous eyes on a nomadic brother who passed through the town leading a string of six camels. "Allah! Allah ured el Allah! Could not the brother spare one of his 'Jinal?' (camels). So, dusting the flies from his eyes and hooding himself with his barracan, he stealthily followed. He was aware that near the New gate the street narrowed and made a double turn. No sooner had the driver and head camel rounded the first corner than the wily one seized the bell attached to the hindmost camel. With a stroke of his knife he severed it from the tail of the animal, and, keeping it tinkling, he quickly fastened it to the tail of the next, cut loose the last beast and—"Allah will!"—made off with his loot.—C. W. Furlong in Harper's.

When "Gill" was "Gell."

Concerning the pronunciation of "girl," it is to be feared that only very careful English people fail to rhyme it with "pearl" nowadays. The song of some years back—"My dear little girlie, with hair so nice and curly, and every morning early"—shows the custom of the great public in our time, though in the "Vilkins and his Dinah" period "girl" was rhymed with "dwell." "Gell" was no doubt the nearest the average man could get to the sound imperfectly represented by "girl" and at any rate was better than the vulgar "gal." But in these days few authors would go to the trouble of writing "girl" to show that a character was peculiar in this pronouncing the word as Thackeray did in the case of Mrs. Bungay. So says a London correspondent.

Pretty Bashful.

At a village church a wedding was fixed for a certain date. The happy morn arrived, and in due course a youthful swain and faire ladye presented themselves at the chancel steps. The service proceeded smoothly as far as the question, "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" Whereupon the supposed bridegroom stammered blushing: "Please, sir, I'm not the right man." "Not the right man," exclaimed the clergyman, aghast. "Then where is the right man?" "He's down at the bottom of the church, sir. He's asheamed to come up."—Church Family Newspaper.

A Russian Pastime.

If the human jaws need some occupation in the intervals of meals and gossip, says Health Culture, masticators could learn a lesson from the peasants of southern Russia, who exercise their teeth on the hard seeds of the Caspian sunflower. There is not a suspicion of a stimulant about it, no chewing gum dyspepsia or navy plug nuisance. It is a pastime and incidentally an excellent dentifrice. In Astrakhan a pint of the requisite seeds can be bought for a quarter of a penny.

A Plausible Inference.

"Miriam," said her mother, "have you ever given young Mr. Stapleford any reason to believe you cared for him enough to marry him?" "He seems to think so," answered the daughter, "because I told him the other evening that he was sending me too many costly flowers and ought to begin to save his money."—Chicago Tribune.

Home Treatment for Women

The Prescription of a Great Physician VALUE PROVEN During Twenty Years of Actual Practice.

Probably one of the most successful medical specialists in the treatment of women's diseases was Dr. Pengelly. He formulated Zoa-Phora by using a number of medicinal ingredients, which experience had shown him to be the best, and combined them in just the right proportions to produce the desired effect on woman's delicate organism. During more than twenty years of actual medical practice, he invariably prescribed Zoa-Phora for the alleviation of pain and for the permanent restoration of health to sick and ailing women. Success to a marked degree attended his treatment of all those diseases and derangements of the genital organs which are peculiar to women only. It is not necessary to enumerate here the various forms of weakness and disease—all women know what they are—which Dr. Pengelly treated so successfully by the use of Zoa-Phora. Further proof of these statements, if desired, and more detailed information as to the results obtained from the use of Zoa-Phora, can be obtained by writing the Zoa-Phora Company, Kalamazoo, Mich. They will gladly answer all inquiries and will send you copies of letters from many women who volunteer words of praise for the doctor's treatment. Within a short time the demand for Zoa-Phora, brought about by the recommendation of women who had been blessed by its use, became so great that the doctor could not personally attend each patient, and now Zoa-Phora is being sold by reliable druggists nearly everywhere. It comes in sealed, sterilized, dollar bottles, already prepared, and compounded in just the right proportions. There can be no mistake if you ask for Zoa-Phora. In each package will be found a copy of "Dr. Pengelly's Advice to Women," a small book giving interesting and instructive information about all diseases of women, and the way to successfully treat them in the privacy of your own home. You need not tell your troubles to any one.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the cramped limbs of chronic cripples, but one that grows back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease. In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

Fish Dying in Lakes.

Thousands of fish in the lakes and streams of Northern Indiana are said to be dying of a peculiar disease.

John E. Rigney, deputy game and fish commissioner, who has within the last few weeks visited all the lakes of Northern Indiana, is authority for the statement that the malady is killing off thousands of ringed perch and sunfish in every lake of any consequence in this part of the state. Fish afflicted with the disease have been shipped to the government hatchery at Detroit with a view of ascertaining the cause and applying a remedy.

Nothing has been seen at Lake Maxinkuckee to show that the disease has reached these waters. Probably the fact that the water of our lake is the clearest and purest in the state has much to do with it.

Of Historic Interest.

An important feature of the development of interest in Indiana history was the Tippecanoe battleground celebration held on June 16, on the celebrated field where General Harrison defeated the kooky followers of The Prophet. Popular speakers made addresses, and Chief Godfrey and representatives of the surviving Indians of the state were present. In fact the whole program was designed to arouse popular interest in the local history of Tippecanoe county, and that county has a great deal of history that is interesting, especially in its early French and Indian associations. It is likewise fortunate in having a number of citizens who are concerned in preserving the memory of these things.

Tricky Even in Small Things.

An Indianapolis inspector of weights and measures disguised himself and waited at a private residence where a Standard Oil agent delivered a supply of four gallons of gasoline. The amount was short a quart and a half, and the delivery agent and his employer were placed under arrest and taken to the police station.

"HOW TO KEEP HEALTHY."

"I am not a believer in too much medicine. Don't take medicine all the time."

MISS MIDDLETON.

Get a good tonic and take it until the old vitality returns then stop. A general tonic and system renovator should be taken in the spring and fall. For this purpose there is nothing better on earth than Cooper's New Discovery, but I advise no one to take this medicine or any other all year long.

Give nature a chance. Establish regularity in movement of the bowels. Drink plenty of water but not at meal time. Chew your food very carefully and eat slowly. Sleep with the window open, don't be afraid of fresh air and do not eat a great deal of grease. Be regular at meals. Go to bed and get up at the same hour each day if possible. Take a bottle of Cooper's New Discovery twice a year and your life should be long and healthy.

Here is what Cooper's New Discovery does for run-down people who need a tonic: "I have been sick for a number of years with stomach trouble and also from back-aches and headaches. Sometimes I became so weak I could not stand on my feet. My food did not seem to nourish me and I could not gain strength. I felt tired to death all the time. Nothing I took helped me, and hearing so much of the Cooper medicines I decided to try them."

Heard Over the Phone.

Who thought, when you and I were young
And ran and romped together,
That we would talk by wires strung
So far across the heather?

Who thought to see a wheel go by,
A woman perched upon it,
Vieing with the birds that fly
In speed as well as sonnet?

Who thought to see an auto-go
By some sly, secret power
Hidden in a dynamo,
At forty miles an hour?

Who thought to hear a graphophone
Sing songs as if 'twas human,
And tell a yarn as any one
Gifted with rare acumen?

Ah! who thinks what God will give
to him,
What gifts he will endow
Those who love and worship him
An hundred years from now!

The Dawning of a New Era

By Susa Young Gates

Daughter of Brigham Young Describes Recent Awakening of Cultured Women in Europe and America—Professional Women the First to Grasp New Opportunities—Humanitarian Efforts in England Hindered by the "Patronizing Method"—Difficulties Encountered by French Women—The Mother the Ideal Woman in Germany—All Striving for Betterment of Society.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

(Miss Susa Young Gates, daughter of Brigham Young, is one of the leading women of the west, and is widely known as a writer and lecturer. She has had a prominent part in the work of the International Council of Women. For years she was the editor and publisher of the Young Women's Journal of Salt Lake City. She is a trustee of Brigham Young University, and for a long period was a member of its faculty. She is also a member of the board of the Utah State Agricultural college. Her fiftieth birthday was recently celebrated by a great gathering of leading citizens of Utah.)

It is impossible that any intelligent person should be ignorant of the fact that women of all classes and in every civilized country have become a force in the history of nations.

The most progressive are wide awake to the tremendous possibilities for themselves as a sex and as individuals. But this is not all. Women of every class and color are rubbing the sleep out of their eyes and trying to catch a hint of the glorious color scheme which paints the dawn of this new era for womanhood.

To know how the cultured women of the world are interesting themselves in humanitarian development, one must ask each country of Europe the separate question, while the United States has an answer peculiar to itself and its conditions.

In the United States the intellectual women are, as a rule, found rather among the professional classes than among the wealthy and social sets. For the strong and intellectual founders of this nation left to their descendants little besides the rich inheritance of energy, integrity, and a love for the beautiful. The daughters and the granddaughters of these great parents have reached out into professional life with the purpose not only of getting money with which to cultivate their native gifts, but as well to make their lives of service to humanity. True, many of these energetic mental pioneers have married into wealth, and their daughters are now certain of the ultra-cultured minority.

When 50 years ago the American woman discovered herself, she first came out so strongly on political and other unpopular questions that she antagonized almost everybody. Then, as she advanced in her methods of preparing the fruit of the tree of knowledge appetizingly, the more courageous among her sex advanced to meet her and dared the terrible opprobrium of "cerulean hose" and "strong minds." At length even the society woman felt the thrill of life pulsating deliciously along her blase nerves, and she said: "I will awake and arise and put on some mental garments of my own; not the bloomers nor waistless sacking of my sisters in the reform movement, but a dashing, purple lined elderdown trimmed royal robe of knowledge, which shall emanate culture as sandalwood perfumes a closed box." All this was to be achieved by the society lady with the greatest expenditure of money and the least outlay of mental effort. Hence arose circles, societies and clubs, which ventured out upon the sea of knowledge in silken barges, touching at every known port between Egyptian prehistoric culture and the folk songs of voyageurs was a delightfully inconspicuous collection of mental curios from every nation and cult.

On the other hand, the professional woman, whose ranks were more and more crowded with the bright, the eager, the progressive and the broad-minded women, addressed one question to the future: "What is there I can do, singly or combined with my sister women, to help this sinistral old world to grow healthy, strong and beautiful?" And the answer is found in the millions of faithful workers in the great reform movements of the day.

A woman is a woman wherever you find her. When the woman with a club found there were other gates to progress besides the one that led from her own selfish domain she declared for all sorts of humanitarian interests, except, perchance, such as would bring her into close contact with the great unwashed multitude. She is still broad enough to make wealth perse the open sesame into clubdom; but her little black ball is quite ready to be dropped at the name of any one whose religion, social standing or color might make her an undesirable addition to the aristocratic club.

Specifically, the cultured women of America, in their organized movements, are showing the excellent taste which is expected of the American woman. Movements are enthusiastically going forward for the betterment of sanitary laws in public and in home life; for civic reform such as is possible for women to grapple with in their present development; for the study of the home life; and of the art and science of bettering conditions within those four dear walls; for reform in temperance; for better conditions for the pauper and the prison inmate; for the study of the child in its relation to home life; and, most aggressive of all, to secure, universally, the ballot for women. These are the lines along which the cultured women of America are moving forward toward the millennium of universal peace and good will.

In Great Britain there is equal enthusiasm and strenuous effort among the women of the nobility, as well as among the professional classes and the laborers; but in that country the lines between classes are very sharply drawn. "Noblesse oblige" is emblazoned on every public or reform movement. The so-called lower classes—which, by the way, are all the classes not endowed with titles—are looked upon by the properly trained aristocrat as his or her wards and proteges. The nobler the woman the better is her sense of duty toward all who were not born with prefixes to their names. With a beautiful spirituality, she devotes herself most unselfishly and grandly to the disipation of the cloud of abuses which is fostered by a monarchical form of government. It is nearly impossible for the American woman to understand the point of view of the English woman, unless she summers and winters on the rain-soaked island which rules so much of the world.

It must be confessed, too, that as long as the professional and working English woman remains in her own country she is quite content to accept all the lovely favors showered upon her by her noble patronesses; but woe to her if she should venture to spend a few years in the United States! Ninety-nine chances to one she will become a more pronounced American than any woman born under the folds of the stars and stripes. The British woman has grown up with the sentiment of patronizing or being patronized interwoven with every fiber of her being, and therefore she shapes all her plans and all her work to give or to win favors. Heeded by a number of high-born dames, the woman's club idea has taken solid root in the soil of the British Isles. Besides, there are numerous guilds and unions formed for every conceivable purpose, but every one of them is dominated by the aristocratic idea of ownership. The English peevishness of to-day counts it very fashionable to be cultured and humanitarian. She gives money and gifts to humanity; she gives her wealth; she imparts of her strength she graces many functions held in the lower walks of life with the sunshine of her awe-inspiring presence; she gives jewels and decorations, fancy work and favors. But there is one thing which she holds jealously sacred to her own class and its aristocratic traditions, and that is her august self. In short, the women of the British peerage, a happy majority of them, are doing all that is possible for aristocratic women to do for the uplifting and betterment of their own race and their own people, and they are very sensibly aided by the professional women and the higher working classes. It is not possible for the British mind to grasp the true significance of internationalism, except it be the internationalism which strengthens British interests and augments British power; this sort of internationalism is the only sort which is really acceptable to the British mind, male or female.

The Scandinavian women who are moving forward toward the betterment of the world come from the professional classes solely. The so-called upper classes of women in Denmark are far more narrow and conservative than their British cousins across the way. But it must be confessed that the Danish women, particularly those who are engaged in the work of the International Council of Women, seem to have less subservency and awe for the traditional aristocracy than do even the same class in England. In Sweden much of the reform work done by the women is centered upon nursing, particularly in the Red Cross class of nursing, and moral reform. But both Norwegian and Swedish women are knocking loudly at the doors of their respective governments for the elective franchise for women, and with more or less success.

The conditions in Austria are much the same as those in Scandinavia, with the further complications that the organized council movement must necessarily deal with the problem of federated states together with their varied conditions and phases of life.

Independent little Holland has a great many broad-minded and progressive women who have developed strong socialistic tendencies. It would have surprised Susan B. Anthony if she had known during the last years of her life how ardently she was loved in the European countries. Her name was one to conjure with, and her presence at any great gathering, such as the quinquennial of the International Council of Women, held in 1904 in Berlin, would have been esteemed by European women as of more worth than the presence of any reigning queen.

In France there is a condition peculiar to that country. There exists so great an antipathy between Protestants and Catholics that many questions of public moment are hampered by sectarian prejudices. Add to this the loose moral status of some of the brilliant women of the French republic, and the consequent antagonism that exists between them and the conservative descendants of the aristocratic cultured classes and you have a problem unique in its character; for so popular has it become in France for women to hold conventions and congresses, that women of the most questionable type use this weapon as a means of adding to their popularity and social influence. Notwithstanding all this, there is a multitude of devoted women workers in France, separated as they may be by prejudice or by caste, who are moving grandly forward in the interests of women and humanity.

The German aristocracy has no idea of humanitarian work beyond that which has for its ideal the domesticity of the individual family life. The old style German marries that his wife may rear sons for the German army or for German commerce. If she accomplishes that, nothing more, either here or hereafter, will be required of her. But the German professional women who have had to go into the arena of life to win bread or a laurel wreath have learned that not man alone owes a duty to the state besides that which he owes to his own hearthstone, but that woman, as well, may broaden her interests and individualize her life by acknowledging a debt to the state and to the world. If she have children, sufficient unto her strength will be her duty in the home; but if she have none—and how many thousands there are who have none—why cannot she devote her energy and strength to some great and good cause?

This is the thought that grows apace throughout all the European countries. With all her limitations and restrictions, the European woman, when she does come out of her traditional environment and offers a friendly, helping hand to the reforms of the world, is a strong, noble and beautiful character—perhaps stronger, perhaps nobler, because the fight she wages is keener and more deadly to her own tender sensibilities than any struggle endured by us in America. If a man longs for drink but withholds his appetite, he is more surely temperate than the one who knows no desire; and the swimmer is stronger who battles with a strong current. Thus, indeed, the European woman may be greater in her greatness and stronger in her strength, notwithstanding all her traditional limitations, than would be her sister in America. We may not sympathize with the European point of view as to the classification of society, nor may we agree with Europeans in their patronizing methods of dealing with their sister women; but we cannot withhold our admiration and esteem when we see their unselfish devotion to principle as

AN UNHEATED WAX-PRESS.

How to Construct Such a Press Entirely of Wood.

The drawings shown herewith make the construction of my wax-press plain writes a correspondent of Gleanings in Bee Culture. To begin rendering wax, first put the cleated rack into the bottom of the press. Take a burlap sack that is big enough to hold 100 pounds of bran and rip the seam in one side and the bottom. Spread this burlap sheet over the press; push it down in and see that it fits well into the corners, letting the edges hang out over the top. Now take a whole sack and put it into the press with a hoop in the top to hold it open. Now dip into your tub, full of boiling comb; take the hoop out of the sack; push it down with a stick to make it fit on the bottom and in the corners. Fold up the mouth of the sack and the sheet over it. Put the follower on, with the blocks on top. Swing the cross-bar over and push the screw up through the hole in it. Put on the handle and turn both handles down, one at a time.

After the wax is pressed out, take off one handle; let the screw slip down even with the top of the press and unfold the first burlap so it hangs over edges. Now get hold of the top of the sack and pull it up some so it can cool a little. Then empty out the slumgum, put the sack back, and fill it again as before.

To boil the comb, use a four-hole stove with all the lids off. Put on a big tub containing two buckets of water, and add the comb as it boils, until the tub is nearly full. The water and free wax flow out of the press immediately, leaving only the slumgum to press.

HELP FOWLS TO LAY.

The Reasons Why Green Bone Makes Eggs.

It is not enough that a given food contain a certain per cent. of lime or a certain per cent. of phosphates; it must also be decided whether these different chemicals can be assimilated by the hen. Dalton, who is indisputable authority, says: "It is well known that inorganic substances, although they afford the necessary material for vegetation, are not sufficient for the nourishment of animals, which depend for their support upon elements already combined in the organic form, by the action of the sun's rays and plant life."

That market bones produce wonderful results when fed to poultry is indisputable. The lean meat and gristle form the white of the egg and about 15 per cent. of the yolk. The marrow and other fat on the bones supply the remainder of the yolk.

The lime phosphates in the bone yield all the necessary lime, salts for the shell and the necessary phosphates for the interior of the egg. When it is considered that all the above substances are found in green bone in a specially digestible condition, far more so than any food supplied by dry meat, corn or wheat, is it surprising that such glowing reports are so often heard about this new food for poultry?

With modern machinery obtainable on easy terms, poultry men should feed more liberally of green cut bone, especially to pullets and cockerels during the cold winter months when other

VALUE OF A GOOD COOP.
Day When the Old Barrel Can Be Used With Profit Is Past.

In years gone by a farmer turned a decrepit barrel on its side and drove vertical stakes down in front of it to serve as a coop for the hen and brood. If he thought to bore several holes in that part of the barrel nearest the ground so that the water could drain out, he prevented the possibility of a heavy rain flooding the quarters and drowning the chicks.

In later years the up-to-date farmer has adopted more modern and more practical quarters for the little chicks and the broody hen. Sometimes the adoption of a good coop means the successful rearing of strong, healthy youngsters instead of stunted birds which can never be more than culls.

The brood coop of the present day protects the brood from wind in cold weather, from driving rains in all seasons and is also capable of admitting a goodly supply of pure air. It is also so constructed that it may be easily cleaned. Most of them have fronts of vertical slats and if they are equipped with tight floors these floors should be made removable in order that the floors may be easily cleaned. If the floors, however, are not nailed to the coops, the latter may be lifted off and the floors cleaned readily. Again if no floors are used but the coops are allowed to sit directly on well-drained ground, cleaning the coop is simply a matter of moving it to a fresh location every morning.

The interior of a coop should always be dry, says The Farmer, and it is advisable therefore to cover the roof and sides with some sort of waterproof material; for example, some of the prepared roofings or tar paper. To prevent the entrance of animals that would kill the chickens a stout frame covered with fine mesh wire netting may be made to be placed in front of the coop at night so that protection may be afforded without cutting off the supply of air.

An ordinary packing box with each of its dimensions about two feet may be made into a satisfactory coop by covering it with roofing fabric and providing it with a slat front, etc.

POULTRY NOTES.

Sunflower seed makes good poultry food. Raise some this season. Thoroughly cleanse and whitewash the poultry house this month.

The time spent in learning how to prevent poultry diseases will save twice the time needed to effect a cure. Beekeeping gives open-air exercise, brings one into contact with the beauties of nature, and is an interesting, fascinating study.

If the reader is not able to own a green bone cutter, he can take a sharp hatchet and cut up the green bones into particles, which the birds can eat.

Do not put more than 50 chicks in one flock in any brooder, no matter how much room the machine may provide. Fifty is as many as will do well together.

Do not feed all the skim milk to the hogs. It is a valuable food for eggs and growth and may be used to mix the mash or may be given to drink in addition to water.

Lice breed faster as warm weather comes on. To combat them paint the roost and roost supports frequently with some of the best liquid lice killers, or with kerosene.

The difference in the consumption of honey, when wintering in the cellar compared with wintering out-of-doors, is only from the fact that the temperature is more uniform, and therefore the bees keep more quiet.

Overfeeding and underfeeding should both be guarded against by the beginner in poultry raising. Overfeeding is certain death, while underfeeding is death to development and growth. Both are unprofitable and should be avoided.

GOOD FEED RACK.

One Which Will Prevent Poultry From Wasting Feed.

A serviceable feeding rack, shown in the illustration, is designed to prevent waste of feed given to poultry and to keep water from being soiled, says Orange Judd Farmer. It consists of a crate and a base tray of any desired size. The tray has two cross pieces beneath to prevent warping and a rim of two-inch stuff. The crate is made of lath, say one foot long, nailed to a top consisting of a board one inch thick and a base frame of wood 1 1/2 by one-half or three-fourths. The cover may or may not have the hinged trap door, as shown in the drawing. Water or feed, or both, may be set under the crate without fear of loss or pollution.

CLERK SHORT $30,000

MILWAUKEE COURT OFFICIAL IS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY.

READY TO PLEAD GUILTY

Frank Woller Admits He Embezzled Large Sum—Caught in Wheat Slump Six Years Ago.

Milwaukee.—Frank E. Woller, clerk of the municipal and district courts, was arrested Thursday afternoon on a warrant signed by Judge Neelen, charging him with embezzlement on January 2, 1907, of $30,000. The warrant was served by District Attorney McGovern personally. Woller will be taken to court Friday and will plead guilty and receive his sentence.

The discovery of the shortage was made Wednesday afternoon when J. C. Chandler, an expert in the employ of the city, reported to City Comptroller Bechtner that the books of the clerk were in perfect condition but that he had been unable to secure from Woller a satisfactory showing as to the amount on hand. Mr. Bechtner went to the First National bank and discovered that while Woller should have something over $29,000 to the credit of the bail deposit fund there was only $990 in the fund.

When seen after his arrest Woller said:

"This is of old standing. It extends back six years or more, when I was in the commission business with a Chicago man, and I have been trying to cover my shortage ever since. I don't know how much it is. The comptroller knows that."

"At the time that wheat took an awful tumble I lost money as well as the rest. I had this big bank account, and I borrowed from Peter to pay Paul, expecting to be able to cover the shortage in time to prevent a discovery."

"I have always kept my books straight. The only discrepancy is that the balance on the books is in excess of the real balance in the bank."

DES MOINES TO TRY NEW PLAN.

Adopts Modification of Commission System of Government.

Des Moines, Ia.—By an overwhelming majority the citizens of Des Moines Thursday adopted what is known as the Des Moines plan of government, a modification of the commission form of government, adopted some years ago in Galveston, Tex.

The new plan provides for an elimination of the ward system, with its aldermen, mayor and other elective officers, and the election by the city as a whole of five commissioners, all of whom shall give their entire time to city affairs, one as mayor and the other four as heads of department. All other offices are made appointive.

JOHN D. BREAKS SPEED LIMIT.

Rockefeller, Stopped by Constable, Pays Fine for Chauffeur.

New York.—John D. Rockefeller's automobile, in which Mr. Rockefeller was being hurriedly driven to his country home Thursday, was stopped by a constable at Elmford and the chauffeur was subsequently fined $25 for exceeding the speed limit. Mr. Rockefeller paid the fine.

Mr. Rockefeller was on his way from this city to Pocantico Hills when his car was halted. According to the constable the machine was making 30 miles an hour when he caught its speed over a measured course.

WIRE STRIKE AT FRISCO.

Operators Will Quit Despite Executive Committee's Order.

Chicago.—The strike of the telegraph operators, it was announced at one o'clock Friday morning, would begin at one o'clock Friday afternoon at San Francisco and Oakland, on a demand for a 25 per cent. increase in wages.

President S. J. Small, of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America refuses to abide by the decision of the executive committee in New York Thursday afternoon to call off the strike.

FIVE KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

Terrible Accident Near Naples—Italian Prince Among Victims.

Naples.—A most appalling automobile accident occurred at Calanello, about 100 miles distant from Naples, Thursday, five men being killed. The motor car, which was going at high speed, ran into a rock and was demolished. Among the killed was Prince Pescara, a member of the Italian nobility and related to the Spanish royal house, on account of whose death the aristocracy of the whole of lower Italy will be in mourning.

Sentenced For Land Frauds.

Omaha.—Thomas H. Huntington and Ami B. Todd were sentenced by Judge Munger in the United States district court Thursday to pay a fine of $1,000 each and to be imprisoned in the Douglas county jail for three months. Fred Hoyt was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000 and to stand committed to the Douglas county jail until the fine is paid. The three men were convicted of conspiracy to defraud the United States out of possession and title to large tracts of land.

SUFFERED TORTURES.

Racked with Pain, Day and Night, for Years.

Wm. H. Walter, engineer, of Chatsworth, Ill., writes: "Kidney disease was lurking in my system for years. I had torturing pain in the side and back and the urine was dark and full of sediment. I was racked with pain day and night, could not sleep or eat well, and finally became crippled and bent over with rheumatism. Doan's Kidney Pills brought quick relief, and in time, cured me. Though I lost 40 pounds, I now weigh 200, more than ever before."

GOOD IDEA FOR MATCHES.

Double Enders Popular Among Smokers in Mexico.

"Mexico may be behind us in some things, but she has outlashed to the wheel when it comes to making matches," said a man just in from the land of the Montezumas as he handed out a wax lucifer with a head on each end.

"I saw nothing but double ended matches while I was away, and I can tell you that they save one's record with the Recording Angel. If you dig down in your pocket and find one match the chances are that you are sure of a light, because if one end goes out the other is left. These old time matches, just revived, that splutter brilliant sparks may be all right when it comes to pleasing the baby, but the fellow who puts on the market a double ended match will find a ready demand."

BLACK, ITCHING SPOTS ON FACE.

Physician Called It Eczema in Worst Form—Patient Despaired of Cure—Cuticura Remedies Cured Her.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black spots all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of ——. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in the worst form. Their treatment did me no good. Finally I became despondent and decided to discontinue their services. My husband purchased a single set of the Cuticura Remedies, which entirely stopped the breaking out. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that every spot was entirely gone. I have not felt a symptom of the eczema since, which was three years ago. Mrs. Lizzie E. Would Take What They Had.

A gentleman purchased at a post office a large quantity of stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers and other postal requisites.

Finding them somewhat difficult to carry, he asked one of the counter clerks if he could supply him with a small quantity of string.

"We are not permitted by the department to stally string," was the reply.

"Then give me a bit of red tape," was the sarcastic retort.

The string was supplied.

MRS. SADIE ABBOTT MRS. FREE MCKITTRICK

Women for the most part spend their lives at home, and it is these women who are willing and ambitious that their homes shall be kept neat and tidy, who do their own cooking, sweeping, dusting and often washing, ironing and sewing for the entire family, who call for our sympathy.

Truly the work of such a woman is "never done" and it is any wonder that she breaks down at the end of a few years, the back begins to ache, there is a displacement, inflammation or ulceration of the abdominal organs, a female weakness is brought on, and the struggle of that wife and mother to continue her duties is pitiful.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, is the exact medicine a woman needs whose strength is overtaxed. It keeps the feminine organs in a strong and healthy condition. In preparing for childbirth and recuperating therefrom it is most efficient. It carries a woman safely through the change of life and in making her strong and well assists her to be a good wife and mother.

HUSBAND WANTED.

Fulton County Woman Seeks Aid of Law for Recovery of Spouse.

The sheriff of Fulton county came to the lake on Saturday in quest of John J. Trimble whose wife is seeking recompense for having been deserted by him six years ago. Trimble was supposed to be in camp at the south end of the lake with two brothers, but the sheriff failed to locate him, and the brothers denied knowledge of his whereabouts. A warrant was then sent to Sheriff Voris of Marshall county. That officer made his appearance on Tuesday afternoon and took into custody one of the brothers who seemed to answer the description given of John, but when he was identified by Schuyler Overmyer he was released. At 11 o'clock Tuesday night the sheriff, in company with Marshal Woods and L. C. Wiseman, made another visit to the camp, but Johnny was not on the spot. The case will now be dropped so far as the Marshall county officer is concerned.

The brothers claim that Mrs. Trimble offered to stop proceedings if her husband would pay her $600, and that when he agreed to this she raised the amount to $1200, and on his yielding to this demand she took another inventory and made his value to her $2200. Then was when John balked and took to the woods.

Wheat Two Weeks Late.

An unusual feature of the wheat crop this year is the fact that it will not be ready for harvesting for two weeks later than the usual time. By the Fourth of July last year the grain was almost all in shock, but this year it will not be ready to cut before the 18th or 20th of July. It is just beginning to head out, and after this it usually requires about six weeks time to ripen. Wheat is doing well and it is thought now that there will be four-fifths of a crop.—Logansport Pharos.

Chicken Hawks Troublesome.

On account of the large number of chicken hawks that have caused considerable trouble throughout the state this season, Deputy State Game Commissioner Earle advocates the levying of a state bounty of 50 cents for each hawk killed. He will see that the next legislature is asked to pass such an act in favor of the farmer. The present game laws do not protect the hawks, but fail to levy a bounty on their heads so that their extermination may be promoted.

A Funeral Suggestion.

An Illinois preacher has evolved a very sensible idea about funerals. He would have simple house services, no flowers on display, no singing, no last look, only a few words by the preacher. But how about doing away without the last, and having merely a simple prayer in which the petition is for comfort, not advice to God how to deal with the sorrowing nor with the departed?—Elkhart Review.

HOMES AT WINONA.

A Summer Resort Being Turned Into a Place of Winter Residences.

Home-building at Winona lake is making this retreat one of the unusual communities of Indiana. The present season is being marked by the erection of a number of dwellings, some of them on a pretentious order. During its earlier years, Winona lake was looked upon as a summer resort and the cottages were built only for warm weather use. But of late years it has become a popular place for families with children to educate, the children being placed in the Winona schools, and the homes are being made more enduring that they may withstand the wintry weather. Last winter nearly 100 families spent the cold season at this place and the number would have been larger had more cottages been available. There is a graded school available so a child may begin in the primary grade and in a period of years go through the Winona schools to a point where the pupil is ready for college. There is an academy for boys and a school for girls and a special instruction is given in farming in an agricultural institute.

Not all the permanent inhabitants at Winona lake go there for the schooling. Some are people of means who have sought the seclusion of the place that they may live in peace and comfort. The year-round population have an inter-denominational church with a permanent pastor.

Winona assembly has spent nearly $300,000 in drainage and water systems, and other permanent improvements since it began its work thirteen years ago. The newer homes are heated by steam and lighted by electricity, both of which are obtained from the power house of the Winona interurban lines. The demand for cottages for summer use this year has been equal to the supply.

The hotel facilities at this summer resort have been increased by the completion of the Presbyterian building which opens its doors in July. It is a handsome stone and brick structure, with over 100 guest rooms. It is on high ground and commands a beautiful view of the lake. It was built entirely by Presbyterian money, the stock being owned by a large number of people over the United States. Winona lake now has a hotel capacity equal to a city of many people and thousands of visitors can be taken care of during the summer season.

ROBBERY IN PARIS CAFES.

No Prices on Bills of Fare, and Waiters Impose on Guests.

"I tell you," said the returned European traveler, taking up the bill of fare, "it's a good deal of relief to get to a place where one can know the exact cost of things to eat and drink. When on the other side I narrowly escaped nervous prostration because of the latitude in the prices of items on the menu. Paris is about the worst offender among European cities in this respect. In restaurant after restaurant these prices are omitted from the bill of fare simply to give an opportunity to rifle the pockets of the unwary. Take my advice and have as close an approach to an ironclad agreement as possible with your garcon regarding the 'demittion total' of your meal before giving your order. If you don't, there's trouble and pecuniary loss ahead. The waiter, with the connivance of the proprietor of the cafe, will do all he can to impose upon you.

"One tragic story that I can vouch for may be of interest to American tourists. It shows one variety of restaurant robbery in Paris illustrating accidentally French ingenuity. An American woman gave a small luncheon at a well known place to a half dozen friends. She had no intention of making it an elaborate affair. She knew French ways and had a careful estimate made of the cost of the repast ordered. After the second course she noticed that the waiters were pressing upon her guests delicacies for which she had not stipulated, and she observed, too, that a point was made of asking each person if she would have some of this, that or the other thing. Of course the winks were accepted. These extras were succeeded by others, the poor hostess not being able to feel she was unable, which amounts to the same thing to stem the tide rapidly overwhelming her pocketbook. When she had a stormy session with the proprietor she could get no satisfaction. The things were offered; they were eaten. 'Of a surety, madame had ordered them, else they would not have been served. It is impossible that madame would wish to have consequences most unpleasant?' She wisely paid the bill, but the experience cost her dear.

"So, you see, holdups are not confined to our beloved country. In fact, I think that our polite contemporaries over the Atlantic know things 'about the game about which our desperadoes are in entire ignorance."—New York Press.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Trouble comes natural to some people, just like freckles or curly hair.

How differently our side of a fuss sounds when presented by our enemies!

The chances are if people distrust you the fault lies largely with yourself.

Changed His Motto.

A southern representative in congress is reputed to be of such a persuasive manner that, no matter what party may be in power, he outdoes his colleagues in procuring favors for his constituents.

One afternoon the statesman was met by a newspaper man. "Well, major," asked the latter, "how many appointments and appropriations have you arranged for today? We all know your way of getting everything that you go after."

"Nothing today," responded the representative rather wearily. "My experience this time reminds me of the old Confederate soldier that I knew in Tennessee. 'I went into this war,' said he, 'with the motto 'Veni, vidi, vici,' and I came out vice versa.'"—St. Louis Republic.

How They Fooled the Preacher.

When our grandmothers arranged to have chicken for Sunday dinner—for the preacher—they picked out the biggest and fattest and toughest old hen on the place Saturday afternoon and had the boys and dogs "run her down."

A tough old hen that is chased all over the place and frightened out of her life is as tender as a spring lamb when cooked. Fright makes any animal, bird or fowl tender, so the books say, and it appears from this that our grandmothers knew what they were about when they had the tough old hens chased before killing.—El Dorado (Kan.) Republican.

An Ancient Superstition.

It is a historical fact that a cock was publicly burned at Basel in August, 1474, for the diabolical crime of laying an egg, the egg being also burned lest it should produce a cockatrice or fiery flying serpent. "On the Thursday before St. Lawrence's day," writes Gross in his "Kurtze Basler Chronik," "they burned a cock on the Kolenberg, together with an egg which he had laid, for they feared that a dragon might be hatched therefrom. The executioner cut open the cock and found three more eggs in him, for, as Vicentius saith in the sixth book of his 'Speculum Naturale,' it hath always been held that a cock in his old age may lay an egg, whence ariseth a basilisk if it be hatched out on a dung heap by the serpent called coluber. Wherefore the basilisk is half cock and half serpent. He saith also that certain persons declare they have seen basilisks hatched from such eggs."—Cornhill Magazine.

Against the Middle.

When Bill, the ranchman, came to New York to play the races he put up at one of the most expensive hotels in the city and took one of the most expensive rooms. Then he went broke. The proprietor of the hotel and the clerk held a private consultation.

"We will let him stay here," they decided, "but from now on we will feed him liver and bacon until he pays his bill. Nothing does he get in this house from now on but liver and bacon."

They fed Bill liver and bacon for breakfast, dinner and supper for about three weeks. Then his luck turned. He forthwith walked out to a strange cafe to get something to eat. He looked over the bill of fare.

"What's this in the middle?" he asked. "Liver and bacon?"

"Yes, sir," the waiter answered. "Give me everything on the bill of fare both ways from liver and bacon," ordered Bill.—New York Press.

Plaster of Paris.

For experimental purposes and where but a few castings of medium and light weight are required plaster of paris has many good advantages as a material for pattern making. It is light, it can be given a smooth surface, it is easily given any required shape and it can be added to indefinitely. While it is brittle, this is more than offset by the saving in first cost and the quickness with which the pattern may be prepared. Plaster of paris sets in from three to six minutes, but if for any reason it is desired to keep the mass plastic for a longer period one drop of glue to a five gallon mixture will keep it soft for a couple of hours. Plaster of paris mixed with cold water has an expansion of about one-sixteenth of an inch to the foot when hardening. Should this be undesirable mix with warm or lime water, and there is no expansion.—Machinery.

Bamboo Sap in India.

In India the sap of the female bamboo is used for medicinal purposes. "Tabasheer," or "banalochan," is sold in all Indian bazaars, as it has been known from the earliest times as a medicinal agent. It is also known in Borneo and was an article of commerce with early Arab traders of the east. Its properties are said to be strengthening, tonic and cooling. It has been analyzed and has been shown to consist almost entirely of silica, with traces of lime and potash. From its remarkable occurrence in the hollows of bamboos the eastern mind has long associated it with miraculous powers.

A Court Fool's Joke.

Scogan, the famous court jester of Edward IV., dearly loved a practical joke. Once he borrowed money of the king and when the day for payment came was unable to make good his word. He feared the king's anger and decided to appease him by a joke. Feigning death, he had his friends carry his body before Edward. The king fell a ready victim to the deception and in his lamentations over the supposed dead fool said he freely forgave the debt. Scogan immediately sprang to his feet, exclaiming, "The news is so revivifying that it has called me back to life."

Bill Nye and Maartens.

In the spring of 1896 the distinguished Dutch novelist known by the pen name of Maarten Maartens was elected an honorary member of the Authors' club of New York, says the Bookman. When the name Joost Marius M. Van der Poorten-Schwartz came to the attention of the membership committee there was a gasp of astonishment. Finally the late Bill Nye came to the rescue with the suggestion that the first half of the name should be acted on at once, but that the last half should be held over until the autumn, when the weather would be cool.

His Choice.

A witty member of the legal profession was once a guest at a dinner remarkable for its meagerness. The dining room had been newly and splendidly furnished. Some of the guests congratulated the host on his taste in decoration.

"For my part, I would rather see less gilding and more carving," said the wit.

Conscientious.

PROMISING GERANIUM.

Telegraph One of the Newer Varieties—Specimens in a Four Inch Pot. Geraniums seem to be receiving some of their old time favor. Among the recent acquisitions is Telegraph, illustrated by Gardening, which says that

NEW GERANIUM TELEGRAPH IN FOUR INCH POT.

It is "the result of crossing the varieties Mrs. E. G. Hill and the Wonder. It is said to be a strong, free grower the leaves dark green with a heavy zone. The flowers are very large, single and of a rich deep orange corise color. With the originators it has proved to be an excellent bedder and useful alike for conservatory and window decoration. This geranium has received certificate of merit from prominent horticultural societies.

Uncommon Garden Plant.

At first sight of the potentilla one is instinctively exclaims, "Why, that is a strawberry plant!" The family relationship is strongly marked. The potentilla has the characteristic leaf of the strawberry, its trailing habit, and the showy flowers are the same shape. One scientist has, I believe, made the statement that the wild potentilla is the original stock from which all the useful and noble members of a family which includes the apple and the rose have been derived. The color range through shades of red and yellow. There is a pretty wild rose pink, some vivid scarlets and crimson, maro and yellow from straw color to orange. Some varieties have flowers as double as little roses; others are single (semidouble).—Floral Life.

CLERK SHORT $30,000

MILWAUKEE COURT OFFICIAL IS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY.

READY TO PLEAD GUILTY

Frank Woller Admits He Embezzled Large Sum—Caught in Wheat Slump Six Years Ago.

Milwaukee.—Frank E. Woller, clerk of the municipal and district courts, was arrested Thursday afternoon on a warrant signed by Judge Neelen, charging him with embezzlement on January 2, 1907, of $30,000. The warrant was served by District Attorney McGovern personally. Woller will be taken to court Friday and will plead guilty and receive his sentence.

The discovery of the shortage was made Wednesday afternoon when J. C. Chandler, an expert in the employ of the city, reported to City Comptroller Bechtner that the books of the clerk were in perfect condition but that he had been unable to secure from Woller a satisfactory showing as to the amount on hand. Mr. Bechtner went to the First National bank and discovered that while Woller should have something over $29,000 to the credit of the ball deposit fund there was only $900 in the fund.

When seen after his arrest Woller said:

"This is of old standing. It extends back six years or more, when I was in the commission business with a Chicago man, and I have been trying to cover my shortage ever since. I don't know how much it is. The comptroller knows that."

"At the time that wheat took an awful tumble I lost money as well as the rest. I had this big bank account, and I borrowed from Peter to pay Paul, expecting to be able to cover the shortage in time to prevent a discovery."

"I have always kept my books straight. The only discrepancy is that the balance on the books is in excess of the real balance in the bank."

DES MOINES TO TRY NEW PLAN.

Des Moines, Ia.—By an overwhelming majority the citizens of Des Moines Thursday adopted what is known as the Des Moines plan of government, a modification of the commission form of government, adopted some years ago in Galveston, Tex.

New York.—John D. Rockefeller's automobile, in which Mr. Rockefeller was being rather hurriedly driven to his country home Thursday, was stopped by a constable at Kimsford and the chauffeur was subsequently fined $25 for exceeding the speed limit. Mr. Rockefeller paid the fine.

Mr. Rockefeller was on his way from this city to Pocantico Hills when his car was halted. According to the constable the machine was making 30 miles an hour when he caught it speed over a measured course.

Operators Will Quit Despite Executive Committee's Order.

Chicago.—The strike of the telegraph operators, it was announced at one o'clock Friday morning, would begin at one o'clock Friday afternoon at San Francisco and Oakland, on a demand for a 25 per cent. increase in wages.

President S. J. Small, of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America refuses to abide by the decision of the executive committee in New York Thursday afternoon to call off the strike.

FIVE KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

Terrible Accident Near Naples—Italian Prince Among Victims.

Naples.—A most appalling automobile accident occurred at Cananello, about 100 miles distant from Naples, Thursday, five men being killed. The motor car, which was going at high speed, ran into a rock and was demolished. Among the killed was Prince Pescara, a member of the Italian nobility and related to the Spanish royal house. An account of whose death the aristocracy of the whole of lower Italy will be in mourning.

Sentenced For Land Frauds.

Omaha.—Thomas H. Huntington and Ami B. Todd were sentenced by Judge Munger in the United States district court Thursday to pay a fine of $1,000 each and to be imprisoned in the Douglas county jail for three months. Fred Hoyt was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000 and to stand committed to the Douglas county jail until the fine is paid. The three men were convicted of conspiracy to defraud the United States out of possession and title to large tracts of land.

SUFFERED TORTURES.

Racked with Pain, Day and Night, for Years.

Wm. H. Walter, engineer, of Chateworth, Ill., writes: "Kidney disease was lurking in my system for years. I had torturing pain in the side and back and the urine was dark and full of sediment. I was racked with pain day and night, could not sleep or eat well, and finally became crippled and bent over with rheumatism. Doan's Kidney Pills brought quick relief, and in time, cured me. Though I lost 40 pounds, I now weigh 200, more than ever before."

GOOD IDEA FOR MATCHES.

Double Enders Popular Among Smokers in Mexico.

"Mexico may be behind us in some things, but she has unshined to the wheel when it comes to making matches," said a man just in from the land of the Montezumas as he handed out a wax lucifer with a head on each end.

"I saw nothing but double ended matches while I was away, and I can tell you that they save one's record with the Recording Angel. If you dig down in your pocket and find one match the chances are that you are sure of a light, because if one end goes out the other is left. These old time matches, just revived, that splotter brilliant sparks may be all right when it comes to pleasing the baby, but the fellow who puts on the market a double ended match will find a ready demand."

BLACK, ITCHING SPOTS ON FACE.

Physician Called It Eczema in Worst Form—Patient Despaired of Cure—Cuticura Remedies Cured Her.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black blotches all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of ——. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in the worst form. Their treatment did me no good. Finally I became despondent and decided to discontinue their services. My husband purchased a single set of the Cuticura Remedies, which entirely stopped the breaking out. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that every blotch was entirely gone. I have not felt a symptom of the eczema since, which was three years ago. Mrs. Lizzie E. Sledge, 549 Jones Ave., Selma, Ala., Oct. 28, 1905."

Would Take What They Had.

A gentleman purchased at a post office a large quantity of stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers and other postal requisites.

Finding them somewhat difficult to carry, he asked one of the counter clerks if he could supply him with a small quantity of string.

"We are not permitted by the department to supply string," was the reply.

"Then give me a bit of red tape," was the sarcastic retort.

The string was supplied.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Haire's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Haire's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the weakened and ailing nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. HAIRE & CO., Toledo, O. WORKING WOMEN, WHAT THEY SHOULD KNOW

MRS. SADIE ABBOTT MRS. PREE MCKITTRICK

Women for the most part spend their lives at home, and it is these women who are willing and ambitious that their homes shall be kept neat and tidy, their children well dressed and swept, dusting and often washing, ironing and sewing for the entire family, who call for our sympathy.

Truly the work of such a woman is "never done" and it is any wonder that she breaks down at the end of a few years, the back begins to ache, there is a displacement, inflammation or ulceration of the abdominal organs, a female weakness is brought on, and the struggle of that wife and mother to continue her duties is painful.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, is the exact medicine a woman needs whose strength is overtaxed. It keeps the feminine organs in a strong and healthy condition. In preparing for childbirth and recuperating therefrom it is most efficient. It carries a woman safely through the change of life and in making her strong and well assists her to be a good wife and mother.

Mrs. Sadie Abbott, of Jeannette, Pa., writes: "I suffered severely with pain every month and also a pain in my left side. My doctor prescribed for me but did me no good; a friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I wrote you in regard to my condition. I followed your advice and am a perfectly well woman. The pains have all disappeared and I cannot recommend your medicine too highly."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

Mrs. Pree McKittrick, of La Farge, Wis., writes:

"For six years I suffered from female weakness. I was so irregular that I would go from three weeks to six months, so I thought I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

"Now I am once more well and can do my work without a pain. Any one who wishes, can write to me and I will answer all letters gladly."

Women should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of female ills. Every suffering woman in the United States is asked to accept the following invitation. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of her vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.
