

PERSONAL POINTERS

Brief Mention of Culverites and Their Friends Who Have Come and Gone

Ethel Smith has taken a position as clerk at the Department store. Dollie Morrical of Bourbon was Elma Overman's guest over Sunday.

Miss Esta Cromley is at home from Northwestern university, Evanston.

Miss Jessie Rogers of Kewanna was a week-end visitor among Culver friends.

Mrs. Julia Garn returned from Marshall, Ill., last week to remain a short time.

Dr. Robert Rea of Chicago visited his parents in Culver Saturday and Sunday.

James Shugrue of Chubbuck, formerly station agent here, was in town yesterday.

Ernest Thomas of Logansport was the guest of Miss Pearl Osborn on Sunday.

Mrs. W. H. Porter and Mrs. H. M. Speyer spent Saturday and Sunday in Indianapolis.

Chas. Bowers and wife of Logansport are here to see Grandma Bowers who is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Jennings of South Bend are visiting with Mrs. Mary Busart and family.

R. B. Jessup of Vincennes was a Culver caller this week on a day's visit to his son at the academy.

Helga Johansen, of near Culver, is employed in O. B. Smith's office as stenographer.—Knox Republic.

Raymond Metzger interviewed Culver politicians Monday with reference to his legislative candidacy.

Mrs. Chas. Stahl received news this week of the death of a 3-year old son of her brother, A. B. Shaw, at Marble, Col.

Rev. Mr. Nicely and family went to Monterey yesterday to eat dinner with the Ladies' Aid at the home of Mrs. Hicken.

Mrs. J. W. Riggins and her mother, Mrs. Geiselman, visited relatives in Bremen several days during the past week.

Adam E. Wise of Plymouth, candidate for circuit judge, shook hands with the people of Culver and vicinity on Tuesday.

Rev. Wm. A. Walker and wife went to Amboy, Miami county, yesterday to remain until Saturday looking after their farm and other interests.

Miss Olive Ralston has returned from Knickerbocker Hall to spend the summer vacation with her mother, Mrs. Lillian Ralston, at Aubbeenaubbee Park.

Ed McLane writes from Downey, Cal., that he expects to visit Culver soon, and that he will bring "somebody" with him. That has the sound of wedding bells.

Clara Stahl, a Culver girl, is recovering from a six weeks' illness at Greensboro, N. C., where she is attending college. Her illness will prevent her graduation this year.

Mrs. Dr. Parker and the children went to Flora on Monday to remain the week. Dr. Parker and the Misses Moss went today (Thursday) to be present at the graduation of Miss Dollis Moss.

Misses Lola and Laura Hissong of Ft. Wayne are spending their Easter vacation at home. They will return the latter part of this week to take up their work again at the International Business college.

Mrs. Mary Overmyer and daughter of Huntington, Ind., were here on Sunday as guests of Wm. and Sam Osborn. They will return latter to spend the summer. Miss Overmyer will be employed as pianist on the excursion boats.

Doings in the Horse World.
A spotted mare owned by Elta Davis, south of the lake, gave birth last week to a milk-white colt with a pink skin. A white colt is in the same class with a white black-bird, and Mr. Davis lays just claim to owning a curiosity.

On Sunday night a mare owned by Liveryman Hayes gave birth to twin colts, one of which died soon after birth. Had the mother given proper attention to the second arrival it would have lived as it was of equal size with its mate and perfectly developed, but such an event having never before taken place in her maternal experience, the mother in her ignorance and bewilderment lavished all her care on the first arrival and let the second-come die.

One of the horses in Hayes' sorrel livery team dropped dead on being brought to the barn Friday after a trip to Monterey with a load of cadets, and the other horse was dangerously ill for some time. Over-driving is the cause alleged.

A Good Entertainment.

The band gave an enjoyable and varied program at the assembly auditorium Friday evening under the direction of Ray Poor. The first part consisted of selections of the latest band music. Three farces followed. "Wanted, a Valet," was given by Fred Cook, R. S. McFarland, Tim Wolf and Ray Poor. "A Darkey Wood Dealer" enlisted Wolf, McFarland and Poor, and "Fun in a Music Store" was pulled off in good shape by J. S. Gast and Poor with a cornet duet interlude by Clarence Menser and Lawrence Houghton and a baritone horn solo by Wm. Houghton.

The gross receipts were $20, and the net $12.

The band will offer another entertainment soon. The money is needed for summer uniforms of khaki.

That Subway.

A representative of the Vandalia met a gathering of citizens called on Monday night to confer on the matter of a subway on Jefferson street. The railroad man stated that the company had no proposition to make, and that it was not expending any money for improvements beyond actual necessities. He thought that a concrete subway 7 feet wide and 7 feet high would cost $1,000 or $1,100. No action was taken nor conclusion reached. Later the official said that the company would send an engineer to make a definite estimate. Meantime the need of safe and convenient access to the lake is apparent to everyone who has the interest of Culver at heart.

Four Birthdays Celebrated.

The celebration of four birthdays occurred at the home of Mrs. Henry Pontius on Wednesday, April 15, near Maxinkuckee. A bountiful dinner was served. The event was the 42d birthday of Mrs. Pontius and Mrs. Menton Clevenger, the 38th birthday of Mrs. James Voreis of near Rutland, and the day following the 30th birthday of Mrs. Benjamin Zehner of Wolf Creek. They expect to meet next year with Mrs. Newton Clevenger, near Wolf Creek.—Independent.

Rural Carriers Organize.

The rural carriers of Marshall county met at Plymouth Saturday evening, April 18, and organized a Rural Carriers' association. The following officers were elected: Pres., Howard Templeton, Bremen; Vice-Pres., Frank Shepherd, Plymouth; Sec'y-Treas., Roller Kleckner, Plymouth. All carriers are requested to be present at the next meeting to be held at Plymouth Saturday evening, May 9.

Go to the Reformed church on Friday evening and partake of the good things the ladies are preparing.

FROM THE ACADEMY

Eighteen mudlarks romped about what was once a ball diamond, bespattered themselves and each other with first-class Hoosier mud and at the same time succeeded in producing an exciting game of baseball last Saturday as the local ground has seen for a long time. C. M. A. and Northwestern academy of Evanston were the contending teams and the close of the ninth inning witnessed the defeat of the soldiers by a 7-6 score. In spite of the heavy field which turned swift infield hits into a spatter of mud and rendered fast base-running out of the question, the game was replete with thrills from the first to the last. In the opening inning the visitors secured a lead; in a few innings the score stood 4-4 and the rooters went wild. Then Northwestern forged ahead with Culver following. At the opening of the ninth the score was 5-4. Culver had the last but amid the cheers of the excited cadets Balcom made his way to third with only one man out. An attempt to steal home, a raised hand interfering with a ball thrown to catch the runner, and the last chance for another score went glimmering.

Both sides battled well, Culver scoring 11 hits while Northwestern scored 9. McClure handled two or three hard hits at third that promised to be good for singles and distinguished himself once by throwing to first while lying in the mud where he had fallen in the attempt to field the ball. Jansen for the cadets also played a good consistent game. Rogers, captain and third baseman of the visitors, easily led the playing on his side.

The Vedette which comes from the press this week will publish the following schedule of the baseball season:

April 4—Plymouth H. S.
April 9—Plymouth H. S.
April 11—Oak Park H. S.
April 18—Evanston Academy.
April 24—Mich. Agricul. Col.
May 2—St. Ignatius College.
May 9—Albion College.
May 16—Wabash College.
May 23—Ind. Univ. Freshmen.
May 28—Ind. Univ. Varsity.
June 6—Grand Prairie Seminary.
It will be observed that the schedule is a hard one for a prep school, including as it does five games with teams representing their colleges and one with university freshmen. Possibly other mid-week games will be secured in order to give the team all the actual playing possible in preparation for their older opponents.

Neal McMillan, one of the Y. M. C. A. secretaries present at the conference held in Culver during vacation, returned last week to give the boys a talk on the summer conference at Lake Geneva. Moving pictures of the work and recreations at Geneva were shown and proved a strong attraction as several of the cadets have already signified their intention of attending the conference this June.

Culver 3, Academy 1.

The town baseball team returned from the academy Tuesday feeling pretty cheery over their achievement in "laying it over" their opponents by a score of 3 to 1. This, we understand, is the first time C. M. A. has ever trailed its colors to a local team. Smith's pitching did it, though he had creditable support by Catcher Bush and the basemen and fielders. Smith has a peculiarly aggravating curve and drop which completely puzzled the C. M. A. He struck out 13 men in six innings.

Initiated their Pastor.

Rev. Frank Coyle, pastor of the Christian church, and his good wife were duly inducted into the social life of Culver on Thursday evening by the members of the congregation who gave them a surprise visit and donation party combined. A very bountiful supply of good things, which Mrs. Coyle will know what to do with, was left by the visitors. The affair was under the management of the ladies, who served ice cream and cake. The Citizen acknowledges the receipt of a generous sample of cake.

Harry Menser has returned from South Bend to remain for the summer. Working life insurance in that town is a hard proposition at the present time.

The heavy firing along the front during the forenoon of the past week has been occasioned by Captain Groiner's classes in physics performing some outdoor experiments in measuring the velocity of sound. The surveying class had already laid out a 1,800-foot line from the hospital to a point near the superintendent's cottage and over this distance the sound experiments were tried.

David R. Porter, International secretary for preparatory schools of the Y. M. C. A., visited at the academy Saturday and Sunday. He addressed the entire cadet corps at chapel exercises on Sunday and in the evening spoke before the Y. M. C. A. He also held conferences with the association officers formulating plans and making suggestions for furthering its work.

Around the Lake.

A quartet consisting of Cadets Young Q. Everett, Caruthers and Young W. sang a selection at chapel services Sunday.

Mrs. J. H. Ryan and Miss Ryan and Miss O'Neil of Chicago spent Sunday at the academy.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Culver of St. Louis arrived Monday for a stay of a few days.

A. Herz returned to Terre Haute last Friday, taking with him a basket of bass.

Mrs. J. M. Dresser and daughter are installed for the season at Willow Spring cottage.

George Barnes spent a few days last week at the lake getting his boats ready for the summer.

Contractor Cline is treating C. E. Coffin's cottage and out-buildings to a fresh coat of paint.

Mrs. John Perrin of Indianapolis spent Easter with her father, Major Harvey Bates, at Manana.

Capt. and Mrs. A. J. Knapp arrived from South Bend last week and opened the Arlington for the summer.

Bernard Vonnegut and son Alex and J. Geo. Mueller and son Clemence of Indianapolis spent Monday at the lake.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fulton were at their cottage last week overseeing the starting of the new cottage which they are erecting south of Waupaca Hall.

The Ladies' Missionary and Aid society of the Reformed church will hold their annual sale and supper in the church basement on Friday evening, April 24. Supper 25 cents, children under 12, 15 cents. From 5 to 8 o'clock.

Don't miss the delicious chicken supper at the Reformed church on Friday evening.

News of the Churches.

Preaching Sunday morning and evening at the M. E. church.

Reformed church: Y. P. S. C. E. Saturday evening; Sunday school as usual; holy communion and reception of new members in connection with the preaching service on Sunday morning. Preaching services on each alternate Sunday morning, beginning with next Sunday.

Rev. W. S. Howard, Episcopal rector at Plymouth, will hold a week's mission in Culver, beginning May 11. Day services will be held at the Palmer House and evening services either in the Osborn flat or the new hotel. Bishop White will be here on the 26th to administer the rite of confirmation to several prospective candidates. The matter of building a church here will be submitted to the cottage-owners of Episcopalian faith this summer. Without their generous support the project cannot be realized.

C. A. Wickham, steward at the academy, expects to buy or build a residence this spring.

John Osborn will open his hotel as soon as the furniture arrives, probably between the 1st and the 15th of May.

E. A. Poor and Oliver Morris have begun work on cement walks to take the place of the brick walks in front of their residences.

Albert Smith, through J. M. Smith, has traded his farm of 120 acres 2 1/2 miles southwest of Culver to J. W. Vandenberg for a stock of clothing. The price of the farm was $60 an acre.

Thomas Houghton has given Henry Buckheiser the contract for a $1000 dwelling near Hibbard, to be occupied by his son-in-law, Sam Jones. Mr. Houghton intends, likewise, to build a residence for himself adjoining the north corporation limits of Culver.

Loads on Gravel Roads.

"How heavy a load does the law allow a man to haul when the roads are soft?" asked a man on the street the other day. Here is the answer direct from the law book—paste it in your hat: With tires less than three inches the load, including weight of vehicle and driver, must not be over 2,500 pounds; tires three inches wide and less than four, not over 3,000 pounds; tires four inches wide and less than five, not over 3,500 pounds; and with tires five inches and over the limit is 3,800 pounds. The penalty for violating the law is a fine of $5 to $50 for each load so hauled. Any road supervisor or gravel road superintendent has police power to arrest upon sight, anywhere in the county, any person violating the law, and on conviction a fee of $2 is assessed by the court to pay the person making the arrest.

Big Frog Range.

Many frogs are caught in the Kankakee marshes during the winter months beginning about the first of November and continuing through March. One man is credited with having caught 124,000 dozen in a single season, which were shipped to Chicago and sold at a handsome profit. It is not an unusual occurrence for a man to get out and catch enough frogs in a single day to net him from $16 to $20.—Exchange.

Going to Kewanna.

The Van Cash Clothing Co., J. M. Hinshaw, manager, having failed to secure a business room here, has located in Kewanna where a building is to be erected for its exclusive use, to be ready in six weeks. Mr. Hinshaw will have charge of the business, but will retain his residence in Culver. Albert Smith, who has an interest in the company, will remove to Kewanna this week.

IN CONGRESS.

President Roosevelt sent to congress a special message urging an appropriation for four new battleships. Senator Foraker made an eloquent speech in defense of the colored soldiers who were discharged for the Brownsville shooting.

In a special message vetoing a dam bill, President Roosevelt warned congress that there are pending in this session bills which propose to give away without price stream rights capable of developing 1,300,000 horsepower whose production would cost annually 25,000,000 tons of coal; urged in vigorous terms the establishment of a policy, such as the filibustering minority in the house demands, which would safeguard the granting of bridge and dam privileges and require the grantees to pay for them, and definitely announced a future policy on his part with regard to prompt utilization of construction privileges. The house struck from the naval bill the provision for increasing the pay of officers of the navy and marine corps.

Suppression of anarchy as the greatest question before the nation was called to the attention of congress by President Roosevelt in a special message. The executive submits what has been done under existing statutes, but says there should be further legislation.

THROUGH THE STATE

NEWS GATHERED FROM VARIOUS
INDIANA POINTS.

COLLEGE ROMANCE ENDED

Miss Lenni Burner Will Soon Marry
Erich Moreller, Who is in Y. M. C. A. Work at St. Petersburg.

Greencastle.—According to an announcement a DePauw romance will result in the marriage at Berlin, about the middle of May, of Miss Lenni Burner of this city and Erich Moreller, who is now in Y. M. C. A. work in St. Petersburg. Miss Burner taught in the city schools of Brazil, this state, but resigns her work, being succeeded by her sister, and will sail for Bremen about the first of May. She will be met by Mr. Moreller and, if arrangements can be made with the German government representatives, the wedding will take place at the home of mutual friends of both in Berlin. Mr. Moreller graduated from DePauw in the class of 1906, having been director of athletics of the university for two years, as well. Miss Burner graduated the preceding year and had post-graduate work, in addition to teaching. The young people have been pulling all the strings available in order to obtain permission to be married in Germany, in which country the requirements are exceedingly strict, involving certificates of birth, and many such points not provided by the American government. However, Miss Burner received a cablegram from Mr. Moreller which designated the date on which she should sail, saying he was waiting, but without waiting for the letter, it is presumed that the necessary arrangements have been made for the Berlin wedding. Miss Burner is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta and Mr. Moreller is also a prominent fraternity member. He is a native of Germany, and has been in Y. M. C. A. work some time.

Prohibitionists Name Ticket.

Wabash.—The biggest county convention ever held by Wabash Prohibitionists met. A full ticket, except for judge, was named and state delegates were elected. The ticket is: Daniel Speicher, representative; Simon Borgetti, treasurer; J. L. Whitcraft, sheriff; L. O. Stark, recorder; J. J. Tippey, coroner; Augustus Thompson, surveyor; J. U. Hester, W. P. Barnett, commissioners.

Injunction Stops a Show.

Lafayette.—An injunction suit was brought against Manager George Manderbeck of the Grand opera house and the Black Crook Jr. Burlesque company to prevent the presentation of the show. The Minsters' association was back of the movement and Dan W. Sims and Prosecuting Attorney Frank Kimmel represented the preachers. The show was stopped.

Final Settlement of Shortage.

Terre Haute.—After hanging fire for several months the shortage of ex-Treasurer William Clark was adjusted in the commissioners' court for $15,000, which was paid in cash by Attorney Reasley, who represented William R. Frank and Samuel C. McKee, Clark's bondsmen. The county's figures were a trifle more than $16,000, but the commissioners took the offer.

Two Posts Boom Scott.

Warsaw.—Konciusko post, No. 114, and Henry Chipman post, No. 442, of Warsaw, sent out thousands of letters to members of the G. A. R. throughout the state booming Charles W. Scott of Warsaw, who has announced his candidacy for department commander of the Indiana G. A. R., subject to the choice of the encampment at Kokomo in May.

Try to Clamp Lid Tighter.

Richmond.—Members of the Richmond Ministerial association issued an appeal in the hope of clamping the lid down still tighter. They insist that church members use their influence to make Richmond a closed town. Buying and selling on Sundays are condemned and sports of all sorts, including baseball, picnics and Sunday excursions, are hard hit.

Country Editors Get Light.

Bloomington.—The special newspaper work for country editors was opened at Indiana university with a lecture on newspaper advertising by W. E. Jenkins, librarian, formerly advertising manager of a large department store. Charles M. Hepburn of the law department, lectured to the editors on the law of libel as it concerns newspapers.

Finds Child in Old Cistern.

Jeffersonville.—After a search of several hours Mrs. C. M. Buttrick of Charlestown found the body of her little son Tonby, aged five, floating on the water in an old unused cistern at the rear of her residence.

Says He is Lost Brother.

Hartford City.—Newton Hall of Harper, Kan., who believes himself to be a long lost brother of the late John Ball of this city, who recently dropped dead of heart trouble, has written here to Mrs. Ball, seeking information concerning the deceased. According to the communication the writer and his brother, John Ball, separated in Tennessee nearly 60 years ago and since that time Newton has lost all trace of his people. John Ball said he was an heir of the famous Ball estate.

AWAKENS AFTER 12 YEARS.

Wanderer Declares He Knows Nothing of Period of Trance.

Mt. Vernon.—A young man giving his name as Leslie Fisher and his home as Los Angeles, Cal., and telling a story of romantic and unconscious traveling over the land and waters of the world for the last 12 years, has surrendered to the police. Fisher told a romantic story which the officers are now investigating. He said that while a few miles east of Mt. Vernon during the morning he suddenly became conscious of his surroundings. He said he was sitting on the roadside with a broken bicycle lying near by. Fisher says that he does not know where he got the wheel nor where he was going until he met a farmer coming toward the city who let him get into the wagon and ride to town. Immediately after arriving in the city Fisher looked up the officers and surrendered and asked their assistance in finding his parents, whom he says live in Los Angeles, Cal. Fisher says he remembers nothing since he started to school one spring morning, but does not remember whether or not he ever arrived at the school. This was in Los Angeles, Cal., 12 years ago, and the last recollection he has was of the little school and his mother, who kissed him and whom he has not seen since. Fisher says that his home was on Spring street in Los Angeles and that his father was Henry Fisher, a railroad brakeman. Fisher had on his person about one dollar in money and a discharge showing that he had served in the United States navy until recently. The discharge shows that he was enlisted in the navy as a cook and was discharged from the service in January, 1907, and that he enlisted as George Newbery at Detroit, Mich. Fisher is a young man, about medium height and of good appearance and about 26 years of age. He has a deep confusion above his left eye, which he says was caused by being struck with an iron ventilator when he was a boy.

Find Dynamite at Doors.

Evansville.—Sticks of dynamite and bundles of switches were found at the front entrance of four places of business at Mariah Hill, a town of 200 people in the northeastern part of Spencer county. It is charged that the Kentucky night riders or their sympathizers placed the explosives and switches. The warning bundles of switches and dynamite were found at the door of the general store conducted by Fred Wagner, at the blacksmith shop of Joseph Jelling, at Dr. McCloskey's office and at the post office. Joseph Fisher is postmaster.

Women Form Land Company.

Anderson.—The women's factory lot committee got to work in real earnest and formed an association to be incorporated as the Ladies' Co-operative company of Anderson. The capital stock of the company is $10,000, and the price of the shares will be one dollar each. The object of the company is to purchase, control and sell real estate and it is organized for a period of 50 years.

Disputed Land Sold.

Princeton.—Three tracts of Gibson county had escheated to the state were sold at public auction here. The land was formerly the property of the late Henry Busing, who has no heirs, and the Patoka Island, which is situated in the Wabash river a short distance south of East Mt. Carmel. The Busing land consisted of 119 acres and was sold for $3,500.

Hoosier Commands Flotilla.

Fort Wayne.—Lieut. Fred Freeman of Fort Wayne has been appointed to the command of a torpedo boat flotilla in the flying squadron in the Pacific waters. He has been commander of the destroyer Preble and has won many prizes in marksmanship. In his new command will be the destroyer Paul Jones and three torpedo boats.

Body Found on Sand Bar.

Anderson.—The body of Arnold Redmond was found on a sandbar on the west side of White river, between the bridge on the Muncie traction line and the cemetery bridge, and about a mile below where the drowning occurred three weeks ago. The body was discovered by Solomon Gold, the boy's stepfather, and George Stannett.

Jealous Lover Kills Self.

Frankfort.—Wilson Aughe, aged 48, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. He was at the home of Mrs. Mallasa Anderson, where he had been living. It is said that he and the woman were lovers and that a Coffey man came between them and Aughe became jealous. He had previously attempted to kill himself, but failed.

Gets $600 for Injuries.

Greenfield.—William Personett was given a verdict for $600 damages against the Southern Indiana Gas company and Oliver P. Moore for injuries received in the theater explosion there a year ago, when over 30 people were injured.

Charged with Bribery.

Indianapolis.—The Marion county grand jury returned indictments against Thomas R. Kackley, until recently second vice-president and general manager of the Atlas Engine works, and James M. Broucher, general sales agent of the company. The two men are charged with a conspiracy to bribe County Commissioners John McGregor, John McGaughey and John M. Mendenhall in April, 1907, by paying $3,800 to induce them to vote to the engine company the contract amounting to $21,551 for a new plant.

REFUSED BY HOUSE

PRESIDENT'S REQUEST FOR FOUR BATTLESHIPS DENIED.

RESULT IS APPLAUDED

Vigorous Debate by Hobson, Longworth, Tawney and Others—
Naval Bill Now Carries
$107,873,000.

Washington.—By a vote of 199 to 83 the house of representatives Wednesday decided against the president's program for four battleships, and adhered to the recommendations of its committee on naval affairs for two vessels of that type. This result was reached after a debate which lasted for four hours, and was received with applause.

The entire session was devoted to a consideration of the navy-increase provision of the naval appropriation bill. As this increase was provided in the last section of the bill, the measure was practically concluded with the disposition of the provision.

The provision for battleships was the chief subject of interest, the committee's recommendation for two ships of that type prevailing by a decisive vote after a hard fought effort to increase the number to four. The increase was opposed by Mr. Tawney, chairman of the committee on appropriations; Mr. Foss, chairman of the committee on naval affairs; Mr. Willets, a minority leader, and others, and was advocated by Mr. Hobson of Alabama, who declared that in relation to the increase of other nations, four battleships would only keep the American navy abreast of other great navies.

Mr. Longworth of Ohio, in a vigorous speech, told the house that the president was more interested in this increase than in any other question before congress and as practically all of them had in the last election declared that they supported him, this was a good opportunity to live up to that declaration.

A provision for two fleet colliers of 16 knots and of 12,500 tons' capacity, costing $1,800,000 each, was adopted. The bill as it stands, authorizes expenditures of $107,873,000.

PROMINENT MAN CONVICTED.

R. N. Harper of Washington Fined
Under the Pure Food Law.

Washington.—As a result of the first conviction under the pure food and drugs law, Robert N. Harper, president of the Washington chamber of commerce, formerly president of the American National bank, a drug manufacturer, and one of the best known business men in this city, was Wednesday sentenced by Judge Kimball in the police court to pay a fine of $500 on one count and $200 on another count of the indictment recently returned against him for manufacturing and selling an alleged mislabeled pharmaceutical compound. President Roosevelt had insisted that the prosecuting officer demand a jail sentence.

WORKMEN IN FIERCE RIOT.

Foreigners Attack Americans at East
St. Louis Plant.

East St. Louis, Ill.—More than 150 workmen fought at the works of the American Aluminum works Wednesday when Armenian, Greek and Turkish laborers became angry because the company, in taking back its employees, gave preference to Americans and negroes.

The timekeepers' shanty at the main gate of the works was demolished and many heads were battered with sticks and stones.

PAT MCCARREN IS UNSEATED.

New York Democrats Then Elect Uninstructed Delegation.

New York.—State Senator Patrick H. McCarren, leader of the Kings County Democracy, was unseated Wednesday night as a delegate to the party's state convention in Carnegie hall to select representatives to the Denver national convention.

The convention then selected delegates-at-large and adopted a platform which declared the delegation should be unhampered by instructions.

Big Hat Factory Fails.

Wabash, Ind.—Nathan Meyer, proprietor of the Pioneer hat factory, Wednesday applied for a receivership and two receivers will be named. In the statement to creditors Meyer placed his liabilities at $362,000 and assets at $355,000. This is one of the largest hat factories in the west.

Drys Win in Danville, Va.

Danville, Va.—The city of Danville Wednesday voted against licensing saloons, the majority against license being 45 votes.

Miser's Hoard is Discovered.

New York.—Convinced that William Jaynes, who died last fall at Hempstead, L. I., had possessed a considerable amount of money, the executors of his will made a search of his property and decided to tear down the dilapidated cottage in which the miser had spent his life. After a portion of the wall had been taken down the workmen found two bags, one containing $5,000 in gold, the other $6,000 in bank notes. Later they discovered bank books which will bring the value of the estate to $25,000.

Recommended His Wife.

Irvin Cobb, humorist of New York, was recommended to a lecture management. The latter sought an introduction through a friend, Mr. McVeigh.

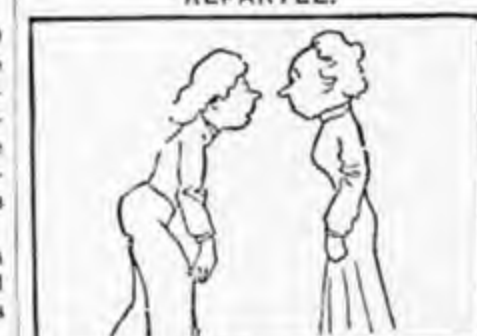

"Come here, Irvin, I want you to meet a friend of mine," said McVeigh. After a few minutes' conversation, the lecture man broached the subject of lecturing as follows:

"I was just wondering, Mr. Cobb, what you would think of a proposition to do some lecture work next season?"

Cobb looked at his questioner for just a moment in blank amazement. Evidently such a thought had never entered his head before. Then reaching out his hand confidentially, he said:

LOST $300.

Buying Medicine When Right Food Was Needed.

Money spent for "tonics" and "bracers" to relieve indigestion, while the poor old stomach is loaded with pastry and pork, is worse than losing a pocketbook containing the money.

If the money only is lost it's bad enough, but with loss of health from wrong eating, it is hard to make the money back.

A Michigan young lady lost money on drugs but is thankful she found a way to get back her health by proper food. She writes:

"I had been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for six years and spent three hundred dollars for treatment in the attempt to get well. None of it did me any good.

"Finally I tried Grape-Nuts food, and the results were such that, if it cost a dollar a package, I would not be without it. My trouble had been caused by eating rich food such as pastry and pork.

"The most wonderful thing that ever happened to me, I am sure, was the change in my condition after I began to eat Grape-Nuts. I began to improve at once and the first week gained four pounds.

"I feel that I cannot express myself in terms that are worthy of the benefit Grape-Nuts has brought to me, and you are perfectly free to publish this letter if it will send some poor sufferer relief, such as has come to me."

I've Been Thinking

By Charles Battell Loomis

If you do not care to wreck your bark on the breakers of divorce, see to it that Love stands at the tiller when you go aboard.

"Love suffereth long and is kind." A very pleasant fellow to have at the helm, you must admit.

When you go down to the pier at which the little boat is moored, you and she, be sure to it that Love, the dear little fellow, is standing somewhere near, and then do you call him up and say, "I entrust my bark to your keeping. We want to sail as long as the boat lasts and we want you to guide us among pleasant places. If storms come up we do not wish to evade them, only see to it that we weather all gales; and whatever you do, see to it that we do not strike on the rock of divorce."

And Love will shake his curly head and say with a merry laugh:

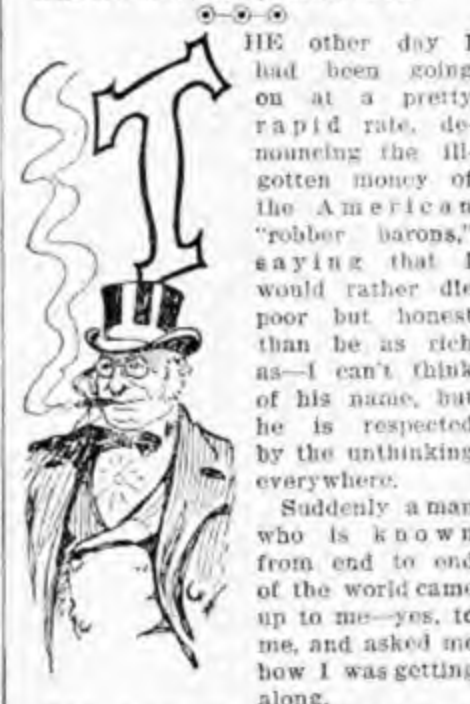

"I have acted as helmsman to many a couple, but never yet have I struck on a rock of divorce. Now, over there is a well dressed sailor named Gold. His boat is bigger than this and is furnished better, but if I do say it, he cannot mind helm as well as I, for many and many a couple has he spilled out on either side of the rock of divorce. Are you ready, sir? Shall I cast off?

"Cast off, my hearty," say you. "We are in for a long and perhaps an adventurous voyage, but with you and with her on board I'll be bound it will be a happy one."

All of which is a pretty little allegory and I made it up out of my own little head.

And it's true, every word of it.

Why, I almost gasped for breath. He is worth millions, and I wondered how he could have heard of me, who owe the dollar and a quarter that I call my own.

Now, if ever anybody made his money sinfully he did. He stands high up among the Standard Oil men and I yield to no one in contempt for his methods, although I will admit that his manners are perfect and he certainly seems to know people outside of his world.

He congratulated me on a story of mine that he had read. It was one satirizing plutocrats, but he had missed the satire and had taken it as a compliment.

Said he: "I wish to help people in all the ways. I wish to seek out artists and give them rolls of money. I want to find struggling musicians and help them to an education. And I particularly want to give you a house and lot and some shares of railroad stock that will yield you an income of $10,000 a year."

Well, you may imagine I did not know what to do. However the man may have come by his money, he was certainly moved by kindly feelings in wishing to share with me.

I hesitated and hemmed and hawed and thought of my family and of the good uses to which I might put the money.

And then I remembered that my ancestors were Puritans, and that not one of them in all the nine generations ever told a lie or did anything wrong in any way whatsoever, and I took a long breath and said: "Thy money perish with thee. I'll have none of it." And then I woke up.

Lim Jucklin on Politics

By Opie Read

The forum of old Lim Jucklin's wisdom was the horseblock in front of the cross-roads store. In the rural south age means wisdom. Merely to have seen the seasons come and go is knowledge, and when age talks not only youth but middle age must be content to listen. Cultivation is mere book-learning, hearsay, the rumor of an unsubstantial truth, as if the book were not the experience of man's mind. The well-read and traveled, if not yet out from under the contempt of "immature years," must sit respectfully dumb while an old man who may never have crossed the line of his county consents to give an hour's homily upon the affairs of the world. But with age there sometimes comes a mellow and a sweet ripening of that half philosophical humor which musty books bound in the hide of some ancient fatted calf delightfully tell us is almost wholly an Anglo-Saxon heritage.

But old Lim had been out of his county. He had traveled into the north, the land where every man was for himself. In Chicago he had bought a pair of "gold-rimmed" spectacles which some clergyman must have lost, and in a modest little transaction he had permitted a Michigan fruit farmer to pluck off a patch of his well-seasoned skin. And while these transactions were reckoned among his accomplishments, they turned somewhat pale when compared with the fact that he could come nearer guessing the weight of a hog or the height of a mule than any man in North Carolina. It is on record that he was a believer in the Book from "kiver to kiver," and in his neighborhood it is known that once he walloped one of the Harvey boys for titling at a baptizing. He furnished the oak slab that had been fashioned into the mourner's bench at Siloam meeting house. His wife gave to the circuit rider more pairs of wool socks than any other woman in the community. And the old man himself had been known not indeed to shout during a camp meeting, but afterward to call hogs with more fervor than was his accustomed habit. Yet, notwithstanding these unmistakable tokens of a pious life, he gave to game roosters a devotion that smacked of fanaticism. Through the wind-howl of a winter's night—through the icy thicket he would shoulder his way, mile after mile, to be present at a contest. He lamented the fate of the defeated, but gloried over the victor. But he never wagered a penny. That would have been irreverent. With others the fighting of chickens was a sport. With him, it was an emotion. So, with his moral establishment well known and with his wisdom unquestioned, whenever of a Saturday afternoon he took his seat on the old horseblock, there was always an audience waiting, not out of respect for his years, but looking for amusement.

"They have about settled the coming election," said he, as he peered the tails of his brown jeans coat and sat election comin' that wa'n't already settled. And it would look like there wa'n't any use of havin' but one side; but, yet, somehow the other side always does putty well when the votes are counted. The man that understands arithmetic is bad in politics. He likes to figger, and a man that does usually figgers too much. It's an old sayin' that figgers don't lie, and that may be true, but sometimes they are found in the wrong place.

"Both of the great political parties are wise, for they always nominate the right man. And what a fine president he would have made if he had only been elected. And the minute the other candidate is elected he ceases to be a politician and becomes a statesman. But death has made more statesmen than office ever did. In this life a great reward is offered to rascality, and that's the reason there are so many politicians. Enough votes would make any man great, but not enough will turn the wisest man into a fly-up-the-creek. When a man that is looking for an office begins to tell me that he's a sincere American I believe him. I believe he wants the place, and in this way the lives of some men illustrate an eternal truth. They eternally want something. Running for office is a hard habit to break, but when a man has been beaten a time or two for president he cools down mightily. Some of our smartest men have been defeated for president, and among them was Henry Clay, but he oughtn't to have expected the office when old Andy Jackson and the Lord were against him. And it is naturally to be supposed that the Lord still has a good deal of influence durin' election time, but it is a question whether or not He always uses it.

"Ever since I can recollect the country has been goin' to ruin. It seems that the constitution was born ruined and has been imposed upon ever since. But it is a mighty hard thing to tear to pieces. But if the right man isn't elected this time not only the constitution but the whole country will have to go on crutches. Old Uncle John Moss is the oldest man in the county and he says that the world is a failure, and if this is true America must go along in with the general no accountness of it all. But I noticed that last year my bottom field raised more corn to the acre than for several years past, and as long as this continues to be the case I ain't in a fitten frame of mind to believe in all the bad news I hear. No matter how much good news you get, bad news is sure to follow. Some time ago old man Joyner threatened that if his candidate wa'n't elected president he would pick up and move out of the neighborhood. His man wa'n't elected and he moved over across the creek, and four years afterward, when his man was again beaten, he moved back. So, I have noticed that about all there is to the average man's political disappointments is that in his revenge he thinks he has done something notable when he hasn't.

"About the worst tickin' I ever got was shortly after I had cast my first vote. There were two men running for constable. I half-way promised to vote for one of them, a fellow named Henk. The election was held by word of mouth, and when the time came I couldn't remember Henk's name and voted for Jones because it was easier. And that is about as much intelligence as some people show in their voting now. They vote the way that looks the easiest. What did Henk do? I met him at a sawmill and he took a piece of scantling to me, an' by the time I made up my mind what to do he had me whipped. A man ought always have his mind fully made up as to what he will do when the worst comes. I managed to tell him that I didn't fully promise to vote for him, that I had only half made up my mind, and he 'lowed, 'Yes, and that is the reason I only half kill you now.'

"If you see a fight coming it is better to make up your mind to run than not to be firmly settled on some particular mode of action. The bravest man may appear like a coward if he's unsettled in his mind, and while he is still unsettled the other fellow may overpower him. It is mind that fights. As long as a rooster's mind is steady his head is steady, but the minute he begins to look around he discovers a chance to run. If he had fully made up his mind not to run he wouldn't have found the opportunity. Some one thought to be wise said that a good run was better than a bad stand, but it is not true. As long as you think it is good to run you'll keep on runnin'. And when you run once it is an easy matter to make up your mind that to stand is bad. Whenever a man is branded as a coward all the other cowards want to take a whack at him. Therefore it is better to be whipped every day in the week than to run once, for with the comin' of the next week the situation is mighty apt to undergo a change. Bad stands stood get better all the time. But when a man has once been whipped he is never the same afterward. It is better to have a broken head than a broken spirit. Without spirit the strongest man is but a worm.

"Success may after a while enable the candidate to tell the truth, but it seems that when a man breaks into politics he breaks in as a liar. It may be almost unconscious on his part, but it ain't long till he's sayin' things that he don't believe. And what appears to grieve him is the fact that other people don't either. If your son-in-law is hesitating between politics and the penitentiary, remember that if he goes to the penitentiary you won't have to take care of him. Many an honest man has had a chance to become a politician and didn't. A politician's smile may be bright, and so is a sinbeam when it falls on a puddle where the hogs have been wallerin'."

FOR OUTDOOR WEAR

The costume to the left is of toast-colored fine serge, the skirt is long and full at the foot, the only trimming being the four rows of stitching at edge. The long jacket is tight fitting at sides and back, and worn open in front. It is strapped with darker brown silk and is stitched all round edge. A waterfall of silk muslin and lace fills in the front.

Hat of pale blue fine straw, trimmed with brown silk, and brown and blue feathers.

Materials required for the dress: 8½ yards 48 inches wide, 6 yards silk for lining jacket, 1 yard silk for trimming.

For the second, Copenhagen blue fine cashmere is used; the skirt has slight fullness at the hips that is set in short tiny tucks, the lower part is trimmed with wide silk braid. The bolero jacket is tucked at each side, and crosses at the waist, a fold of velvet stands out from the edge of material, forming a sort of vest, that opens over the lace blouse; silk ornaments with cord loops connecting the edges. The open material sleeves are trimmed with braid, and open over the puff which ends at elbow in a frill, the light undersleeves also being trimmed with braid.

Straw hat trimmed with flowers.

Materials required: 8 yards 46 inches wide, about 1 dozen yards braid, 4 yards silk for lining bolero, ½ yard velvet.

ELABORATE BLOUSE IN STYLE.

Popular Combinations Fashioned in Linen and Lace.

The innovation of the jumper and guimpe dress was foretold as the end of the lingerie blouse, but the false prophet knows not the ways of woman and her constancy to the particular article of dress which has taken her fancy. Then how could there be a really correct tailored suit if blouses were to be disregarded? What could even Paris find to take the place of the exquisite bit of linen and lace?

The new blouses are chiefly interesting for the variety in arrangement and trimming and, although a blouse is a blouse from every standpoint, there are only blouses and pretty blouses, and the models of the year are classed under the latter heading.

The combination of a half dozen bits of different laces is considered smart this season, while hand embroidery is employed as a concealing link to hold the samples together. Irish, fler, eling, valenciennes—these are the ofttest used, although dachess and applique come in for their share.

A tendency to the small yoke is evidenced, especially on the shoulders, while tailored waists are usually made with long sleeves, though the blouses for more pretentious suits have three-quarter sleeves, as during last year.

The new small yokes are made with an arrangement of tucks and insertion, while the linen blouses are inlaid with English eyelet work. Still others are provided with ruffles and cuffs whose scallops have been hand-embroidered.

Irish crochet is "let in" a great many of the Parisian models, and, of course, embroidered fillet is both effective and becoming.

The blouse has been growing for the past few seasons, always more elaborate and more dressy. The stiff tucked and untrimmed shirt waists of a semi-decade past have been relegated to the trunks containing grandmother's finery and grandfather's uniforms.

Return of the Bang.

Bangs are coming back in fashion, but that does not mean that young ladies need cut their front hair short and do it up in crimps at night, neither smear it with the sticky quince seed and bandoline lotions of ancient bang days.

The new bang is a soft, fluffy row of what are called pin curls resting on the forehead, just below the pompadour, and they are called pin curls presumably because a good many of them are attached to a hairpin arrangement and tucked in after the pompadour is finished. That is to say, they have no more connection with the wearer's head than have the braids and puffs and curls that decorate the top of it.

This little row of curly bangs across the forehead is to be considered more and more au fait as the days go by.

Shantung Used in Fascinating Hats.

The shantung is used with straw in fascinating little hats and turbans; it is gathered in the center of the crown, then caught with occasional rows of braid to form soft puffs. The broad turned-off brim has at the top a row of straw, then an insertion of lace, with the pongee puffing resting upon the fluffy hair.

Old Material in Fashion.

One of the season's revivals in street materials is prunella cloth, a fabric something on the order of cashmere, but heavier and therefore more satisfactory from the tailored standpoint. This year it is brought out in shadow stripes, that showing the cheviot being particularly good.

TWO COATS WITH ONE SKIRT.

Usual Order of Things Reversed in Tailored Costumes.

One finds the order of things somewhat reversed in the way of tailored costumes, two coats being frequently used with one skirt instead of vice versa, as formerly. The pretty coat, arranged for a pongee skirt for warm weather, is very, very plain. The fronts are curved into the figure slightly and meet in single-breasted fashion. There are darts from the bust line, and just below the waist these switch off very suddenly to a distance half way between the fastening of the coat and the arm seams. Here the stitching slips and there is a deep slash, trimmed on either side with large buttons covered with pongee silk. The buttons used for adjusting the model are made of the same material, but much smaller in size.

The sleeves are long and close fitting, showing very novel cuffs. These are turned back in regular style, but supplied with tiny pin-money pockets with little laces secured with pink-covered buttons. Pockets seem to be a much-favored embellishment for tailored frocks. They are not built with a view to service, primarily, but give the couturieres a chance to ring in any number of original ideas that add indescribably to the effectiveness of a gown.

PRETTY NIGHT DRESS.

Cambrie, nainsook or Indian calico may be used for this dainty night-dress; the back is plain, and reaches quite to the neck, but the front is cut away in a square; the center is closely gathered, then trimmed with a square of embroidery insertion; the opening is edged with a narrow frill of lace. The sleeves reach only to the elbow; they are gathered into narrow bands, covered with insertion, and edged with a deep frill of lace.

Materials required: 5 yards 36 inches wide, 1½ yard insertion, 1½ yard narrow lace, and 1¾ yard wide lace.

Plaited Wash Skirts.

Plaited wash skirts will be worn the coming summer, but not the fine plaits of last year. They are now fewer plaits, but they are laid in double width, thus giving an equal amount of fullness in the skirt with much less labor to the home dress-maker.

Hats for All Styles of Beauty.

For the round, diaphanous faces come quite Dutch bonnets, and frilly French ones for the delicately spiritual.

TO RESTORE TOMBS

CEMETERY IN NEW YORK CITY WILL BECOME GARDEN SPOT.

Plot of Gotham Marble Burial Corporation an interesting bit of Ancient Town—Surrounded by Stores and Tenements.

New York.—To lift one of God's acres out of a condition that does not harmonize with modern conceptions of health, beauty and general fitness is the plan of certain members of the New York Marble Cemetery corporation, the association which owns the old burying ground over on Second avenue. At a no inconsiderable cost, they propose to transform the cemetery into what will resemble far more a beautiful garden than a place of the dead, a scheme that is of interest not only to those who have personal associations with the cemetery, but to the general public, to whom restful and verdant spaces in the midst of the toil and traffic of the city are of infinite value. The cemetery, which at present presents an old-fashioned aspect of quaintness and order, is an especially interesting bit of ancient New York, preserved amid the downfall and destruction of more conspicuous relics of the city's youth. For within it rest the remains of numbers prominently connected with her development socially and commercially.

The plot lies in the middle of the block formed by the intersection of Second and Third streets with Second avenue and the Bowery, and is entered by an iron gateway which, breaking the monotonous block-front of stores and tenements on Second avenue, opens upon a passage, which in turn leads to the gateway in the eastern wall of the cemetery itself. Once inside the latter entrance, the visitor is astonished to find an open space of 137 feet by 85 feet in extent, surrounded by high walls and giving little evidence of the purpose for which it is used. A grass plot intersected by three straight paths runs the full length of the inclosure. Upon the western wall is a large tablet on which are engraved the names of vault owners, while the eastern wall bears the name of the cemetery. Along the side walls smaller tablets give the names of vault owners opposite their respective vaults. But there

The cemetery association was incorporated in 1931, though the cemetery itself is a quarter of a century older and was originally part of a farm owned by Perkins Nichols, who set aside this old plot of land as a family burial place. When the corporation was formed the plot was laid out in a series of catacombs, constructed of solid marble, 12 or 15 feet under ground and divided into 157 vaults.

With the city's growth and development the Nichols farm was blotted out. Green fields were turned into city blocks, and the burial ground became completely surrounded by tenements and warehouses, whose many windows, like curious eyes, seemed to look down wonderingly into the old fashioned, secluded place. As time passed the cemetery, from various causes, fell into semi-ruin, the stone walls crumbled in many places and a tangle of bushes and briars hid path and grass plot from view and made a melancholy wilderness of this once cherished garden of the dead.

A few years ago the question was agitated as to whether it would not be well to remove the bodies, sell the land and wind up the corporation. A meeting of all those representing original vault owners (so far as the names and addresses could be obtained) was called and the matter debated. It became apparent at once that the majority of those present were opposed to the abandonment of the cemetery.

Quaint and attractive as it now is, it is destined to become a spot of great beauty and dignity if those personally interested contribute sufficiently to carry out the scheme artistically planned by Frederick W. Hoffman, a landscape architect, who to direct the work.

One of the curious features of the cemetery as it is now is the ancient stone "dead house" that stands in or corner of the inclosure. It resembles a prison cell of an ancient type rather than a place for the dead to repose in temporarily, with its unshuttered iron-barred windows and its small door. The members of the corporation usually refer to it by this name but in the immediate neighborhood mortuary seems to be its accepted designation. In the scheme of regeneration of the cemetery this rude little structure will enjoy an agreeable transformation.

I've Been Thinking

By Charles Battell Loomis

IF you do not care to wreck your bark on the breakers of divorce, see to it that Love stands at the tiller when you go aboard.

"Love suffereth long and is kind." A very pleasant fellow to have at the helm, you must admit.

When you go down to the pier at which the little boat is moored, you and she, be sure to it that Love, the dear little fellow, is standing somewhere near, and then do you call him up and say, "I entrust my bark to your keeping. We want to sail as long as the boat lasts and we want you to guide us among pleasant places. If storms come up we do not wish to evade them, only see to it that we weather all gales; and whatever you do, see to it that we do not strike on the rock of divorce."

And Love will shake his curly head and say with a merry laugh:

"I have acted as helmsman to many a couple, but never yet have I struck on a rock of divorce. Now, over there is a well-dressed sailor named Gold. His boat is bigger than this and is furnished better, but if I do say it, he cannot mind helm as well as I, for many and many a couple has he spilled out on either side of the rock of divorce. Are you ready, air? Shall I cast off?

"Cast off, my hearty," say you. "We are in for a long and perhaps an adventurous voyage, but with you and with her on board I'll be bound it will be a happy one."

All of which is a pretty little allegory and I made it up out of my own little head.

And it's true, every word of it.

THE other day I had been going on at a pretty rapid rate, denouncing the ill-gotten money of the American "robber barons," saying that I would rather die poor but honest than be as rich as—I can't think of his name, but he is respected by the unthinking everywhere.

Suddenly a man who is known from end to end of the world came up to me—yes, to me, and asked me how I was getting along.

Why, I almost gasped for breath. He is worth millions, and I wondered how he could have heard of me, who owe the dollar and a quarter that I call my own.

Now, if ever anybody made his money sinfully he did. He stands high up among the Standard Oil men and I yield to no one in contempt for his methods, although I will admit that his manners are perfect and he certainly seems to know people outside of his world.

He congratulated me on a story of mine that he had read. It was one satirizing plutocrats, but he had missed the satire and had taken it as a compliment.

Said he: "I wish to help people in all the rats. I wish to seek out artists and give them rolls of money. I want to find struggling musicians and help them to an education. And I particularly want to give you a house and lot and some shares of railroad stock that will yield you an income of $10,000 a year."

Well, you may imagine I did not know what to do. However the man may have come by his money, he was certainly moved by kindly feelings in wishing to share with me.

I hesitated and hemmed and hawed and thought of my family and of the good uses to which I might put the money.

And then I remembered that my ancestors were Puritans, and that not one of them in all the nine generations ever told a lie or did anything wrong in any way whatsoever, and I took a long breath and said: "Thy money perish with thee. I'll have none of it." And then I woke up.

FOR OUTDOOR WEAR

The costume to the left is of toast-colored fine serge, the skirt is long and full at the foot, the only trimming being the four rows of stitching at edge. The long jacket is tight fitting at sides and back, and worn open in front. It is strapped with darker brown silk and is stitched all round edge. A water-fall of silk muslin and lace fills in the front.

Hat of pale blue fine straw, trimmed with brown silk, and brown and blue feathers.

Materials required for the dress: 8½ yards 45 inches wide, 6 yards silk for lining jacket, 1 yard silk for trimming.

For the second, Copenhagen blue fine cashmere is used; the skirt has slight fullness at the hips that is set in short tiny tucks, the lower part is trimmed with wide silk braid. The bolero jacket is tucked at each side, and crosses at the waist, a fold of velvet stands out from the edge of material, forming a sort of vest, that opens over the lace blouse; silk ornaments with cord loops connecting the edges. The open material sleeves are trimmed with braid, and open over the puff which ends at elbow in a frill, the tight undersleeves also being trimmed with braid.

Straw hat trimmed with flowers.

Materials required: 8 yards 46 inches wide, about 1 dozen yards braid, 4 yards silk for lining bolero, ½ yard velvet.

ELABORATE BLOUSE IN STYLE.

Popular Combinations Fashioned in Linen and Lace.

The innovation of the jumper and guimp dress was foretold as the end of the lingerie blouse, but the false prophet knows not the ways of woman and her constancy to the particular article of dress which has taken her fancy. Then how could there be a really correct tailored suit if blouses were to be disregarded? What could even Paris find to take the place of the exquisite bit of linen and lace?

The new blouses are chiefly interesting for the variety in arrangement and trimming and, although a blouse is a blouse from every standpoint, there are ugly blouses and pretty blouses, and the models of the year are classed under the latter heading.

The combination of a half dozen bits of different laces is considered smart this season, while hand embroidery is employed as a connecting link to hold the samples together. Irish, fllet, eluny, valencienne—these are the oftentimes used, although duchess and applique come in for their share.

A tendency to the small yoke is evidenced, especially on the shoulders, while tailored waists are usually made with long sleeves, though the blouses for more pretentious suits have three-quarter sleeves, as during last year.

The new small yokes are made with an arrangement of tucks and insertion, while the linen blouses are inlaid with English eyelet work. Still others are provided with ruffles and cuffs whose scallops have been hand-embroidered.

Irish crochet is "let in" a great many of the Parisian models, and, of course, embroidered fllet is both effective and becoming.

The blouse has been growing for the past few seasons, always more elaborate and more dressy. The stiff tucked but untrimmed shirt waists of a semi-decade past have been relegated to the trunks containing grandmother's flimsy and grandfather's uniforms.

Return of the Bang.

Bangs are coming back in fashion, but that does not mean that young ladies need cut their front hair short and do it up in curls at night, neither smear it with the sticky quince seed and bandoline lotions of ancient bang days.

The new bang is a soft, fluffy row of what are called pin curls resting on the forehead, just below the pompadour, and they are called pin curls presumably because a good many of them are attached to a hairpin arrangement and tucked in after the pompadour is finished. That is to say, they have no more connection with the wearer's head than have the braids and puffs and curls that decorate the top of it.

This little row of curly bangs across the forehead is to be considered more and more so fast as the days go by.

Shanting Used in Fascinating Hats.

The shanting is used with straw in fascinating little hats and turbans; it is gathered in the center of the crown, then caught with occasional rows of braid to form soft puffs. The broad turned-off brim has at the top a row of straw, then an insertion of lace, with the pounce puffing resting upon the fluffy hair.

Old Material in Fashion.

One of the season's revivals in street materials is prunella cloth, a fabric something on the order of cashmere, but heavier and therefore more satisfactory from the tailored standpoint. This year it is brought out in shadow stripes, that showing the cheviot being particularly good.

TWO COATS WITH ONE SKIRT.

Usual Order of Things Reversed in Tailored Costumes.

One finds the order of things somewhat reversed in the way of tailored costumes, two coats being frequently used with one skirt instead of vice versa, as formerly. The pretty coat, arranged for a pongee skirt for warm weather, is very, very plain. The fronts are curved into the figure slightly and meet in single-breasted fashion. There are darts from the bust line, and just below the waist these switch off very suddenly to a distance half way between the fastening of the coat and the arm seams. Here the stitching stops and there is a stitching trimmed on either side deep slash, ions covered with side with large buttons covered with pongee silk. The buttons used for adjusting the model are made of the same material, but much smaller in size.

The sleeves are long and close fitting, showing very novel cuffs. These are turned back in regular style, but supplied with tiny pin-money pockets with little lops secured with pink-covered buttons. Pockets seem to be a much-favored embellishment for tailored frocks. They are not built with a view to service, primarily, but give the couturiers a chance to ring in any number of original ideas that add indelibly to the effectiveness of a gown.

PRETTY NIGHT DRESS.

Cambrie, nainsook or Indian calico may be used for this dainty night-dress; the back is plain, and reaches quite to the neck, but the front is cut away in a square; the center is closely gathered, then trimmed with a square of embroidery insertion; the opening is edged with a narrow frill of lace. The sleeves reach only to the elbow; they are gathered into narrow bands, covered with insertion, and edged with a deep frill of lace.

Materials required: 5 yards 36 inches wide, 1½ yard insertion, 1½ yard narrow lace, and 1½ yard wide lace.

Plaited Wash Skirts.

Plaited wash skirts will be worn the coming summer, but not the fine plaits of last year. They are now fewer plaits, but they are laid in double width, thus giving an equal amount of fullness in the skirt with much less labor to the home dress-maker.

TO RESTORE TOMBS

CEMETERY IN NEW YORK CITY WILL BECOME GARDEN SPOT.

Plot of Gotham Marble Burial Corporation an Interesting Bit of Ancient Town—Surrounded by Stores and Tenements.

New York.—To lift one of God's acres out of a condition that does not harmonize with modern conceptions of health, beauty and general fitness is the plan of certain members of the New York Marble Cemetery corporation, the association which owns the old burying ground over on Second avenue. At a no inconsiderable cost they propose to transform the cemetery into what will resemble far more a beautiful garden than a place of the dead, a scheme that is of interest not only to those who have personal associations with the cemetery, but to the general public, to whom restful and verdant spaces in the midst of the toil and traffic of the city are of infinite value. The cemetery, which at present presents an old-fashioned aspect of quaintness and order, is an especially interesting bit of ancient New York, preserved amid the downfall and destruction of more conspicuous relics of the city's youth. For within it rest the remains of numbers prominently connected with her development socially and commercially.

The plot lies in the middle of the block formed by the intersection of Second and Third streets with Second avenue and the Bowery, and is entered by an iron gateway which, breaking the monotonous block-front of stores and tenements on Second avenue, opens upon a passage, which in turn leads to the gateway in the eastern wall of the cemetery itself. Once inside the latter entrance, the visitor is astonished to find an open space of 137 feet by 85 feet in extent, surrounded by high walls and giving little evidence of the purpose for which it is used. A grass plot intersected by three straight paths runs the full length of the inclosure. Upon the western wall is a large tablet on which are engraved the names of vault owners, while the eastern wall bears the name of the cemetery. Along the side walls smaller tablets give the names of vault owners opposite their respective vaults. But there is neither grave stones nor monument within the inclosure.

The cemetery association was incorporated in 1831, though the cemetery itself is a quarter of a century older and was originally part of a farm owned by Perkins Nichols, who set aside this old plot of land as a family burial place. When the corporation was formed the plot was laid out in a series of catacombs, constructed of solid marble, 12 or 15 feet under ground and divided into 157 vaults.

With the city's growth and development the Nichols farm was blotted out. Green fields were turned into city blocks, and the burial ground became completely surrounded by tenements and warehouses, whose many windows, like curious eyes, seemed to look down wonderingly into the old-fashioned, secluded place. As time passed the cemetery, from various causes, fell into semi-ruin, the stone walls crumbled in many places and a tangle of bushes and briars hid path and grass plot from view and made a melancholy wilderness of this once cherished garden of the dead.

A few years ago the question was agitated as to whether it would not be well to remove the bodies, sell the land and wind up the corporation. A meeting of all those representing original vault owners (so far as their names and addresses could be obtained) was called and the matter debated. It became apparent at once that the majority of those present were opposed to the abandonment of the cemetery.

Quaint and attractive as it now is it is destined to become a spot of great beauty and dignity if those personally interested contribute sufficiently to carry out the scheme so artistically planned by Frederick von Hoffman, a landscape architect, who is to direct the work.

One of the curious features of the cemetery as it is now is the ancient stone "dead house" that stands in one corner of the inclosure. It resembles a prison cell of an ancient type rather than a place for the dead to repose in temporarily, with its unshuttered, iron-barred windows and its small door. The members of the corporation usually refer to it by this name, but in the immediate neighborhood mortuary seems to be its accepted designation. In the scheme of regeneration of the cemetery this rude little structure will enjoy an agreeable transformation.

The forum of dom was the horse-block in front of the cross-roads store. In the rural south age means wisdom. Merely to have seen the seasons come and go is knowledge, and when age talks not only youth but middle age must be content to listen. Cultivation is mere book-learning, hearsay, the rumor of an unsubstantial truth, as if the book were not the experience of man's mind. The well-read and traveled, if not yet out from under the contempt of "immature years," must sit respectfully-dumb while an old man who may never have crossed the line of his county consents to give an hour's homily upon the affairs of the world. But with age there sometimes comes a mellow and a sweet ripening of that half philosophical humor which musty books bound in the hide of some ancient fatted calf delightfully tell us is almost wholly an Anglo-Saxon heritage.

But old Lim had been out of his county. He had traveled into the north, the land where every man was for himself. In Chicago he had bought a pair of "gold-rimmed" spectacles which some clergyman must have lost, and in a modest little transaction he had permitted a Michigan fruit farmer to pluck off a patch of his well-seasoned skin. And while these transactions were reckoned among his accomplishments, they turned somewhat pale when compared with the fact that he could come nearer guessing the weight of a hog or the height of a mile than any man in North Carolina. It is on record that he was a believer in the Book from "kiver to kiver," and in his neighborhood it is known that once he wallowed one of the Harvey boys for uttering at a baptizing. He furnished the oak slab that had been fashioned into the mourner's bench at Silem meeting house. His wife gave to the circuit rider more pairs of wool socks than any other woman in the community. And the old man himself had been known not indeed to shout during a camp meeting, but afterward to call hogs with more fervor than was his accustomed habit. Yet, notwithstanding these unmistakable tokens of a pious life, he gave to game roosters a devotion that smacked of fanaticism. Through the wind-howl of a winter's night—through the icy thicker he would shoulder his way, mile after mile, to be present at a contest. He lamented the fate of the defeated, but gloried over the victor. But he never wagered a penny. That would have been irrereligious. With others the fighting of chickens was a sport. With him it was an emotion. So, with his moral establishment well known and with his wisdom unquestioned, whenever of a Saturday afternoon he took his seat on the old horse-block, there was always an audience waiting, not out of respect for his years, but looking for amusement.

"They have about settled the coming election," said he, as he parted the tails of his brown jeans coat and sat down. "Don't believe I ever saw an wan't already election. And it thad look like there wan't any use of havin' but one side; but, yet, somehow the other side always does putty well when the votes are counted. The man that understands arithmetic is bad in politics. He likes to figger, and a man that does usually figgers too much. It's an old sayin' that figgers don't lie, and that may be true, but sometimes they are found in the wrong place.

"Both of the great political parties are wise, for they always nominate the right man. And what a fine president he would have made if he had only been elected. And the minute the other candidate is elected he ceases to be a politician and becomes a statesman. But death has made more statesmen than office ever did. In this life a great reward is offered to rascality, and that's the reason there are so many politicians. Enough votes would make any man great, but not enough will turn the wisest man into a fly-up-the-creek. When a man that is looking for an office begins to tell me that he's a sincere American I believe him. I believe he wants the place, and in this way the lives of some men illustrate an eternal truth. They eternally want something. Running for office is a hard habit to break, but when a man has been beaten a time or two for president he cools down mightily. Some of our smartest men have been defeated for president, and among them was Henry Clay, but he oughtn't to have expected the office when old Andy Jackson and the Lord were against him. And it is naturally to be supposed that the Lord still has a good deal of influence durin' election time, but it is a question whether or not He always uses it.

"Ever since I can recollect the country has been goin' to ruin. It seems that the constitution was born ruined and has been imposed upon ever since. But it is a mighty hard thing to tear to pieces. But if the right man isn't elected this time not only the constitution but the whole country will have to go on crutches. Old Uncle John Moss is the oldest man in the county and he says that the world is a failure, and if this is true America must go along in with the general no accountness of it all. But I noticed that last year my bottom field raised more corn to the acre than for several years past, and as long as this continues to be the case I ain't in a fitten frame of mind to believe in all the bad news I hear. No matter how much good news you get, bad news is sure to follow. Some time ago old man Joyner threatened that if his candidate wan't elected president he would pick up and move out of the neighborhood. His man wan't elected, and he moved over across the creek, and four years afterward, when his man was again beaten, he moved back. So, I have noticed that about all there is to the average man's political disappointments is that in his revenge he thinks he has done something notable when he hasn't.

"About the worst lickin' I ever got was shortly after I had cast my first vote. There were two men running hot for constable. I half-way promised to vote for one of them, a fellow named Henk. The election was held by word of mouth, and when the time came I couldn't remember Henk's name and voted for Jones because it was easier. And that is about as much intelligence as some people show in their voting now. They vote the way that looks the easiest. What did Henk do? I met him at a sawmill and he took a piece of scantling to me, an' by the time I made up my mind what to do he had me whipped. A man ought always have his mind fully made up as to what he will do when the worst comes. I managed to tell him that I didn't fully promise to vote for him, that I had only half made up my mind, and he 'lowed, 'Yes, and that is the reason I only half kill you now.'

"If you see a light coming it is better to make up your mind to run than not to be firmly settled on some particular mode of action. The bravest man may appear like a coward if he's unsettled in his mind, and while he is still unsettled the other fellow may overpower him. It is mind that fights. As long as a rooster's mind is steady his head is steady, but the minute he begins to look around he discovers a chance to run. If he had fully made up his mind not to run he wouldn't have found the opportunity. Some one thought to be wise said that a good run was better than a bad stand, but it is not true. As long as you think it is good to run you'll keep on runnin'. And when you run once it is an easy matter to make up your mind that to stand is bad. Whenever a man is branded as a coward all the other cowards want to take a whack at him. Therefore it is better to be whipped every day in the week than to run once, for with the comin' of the next week the situation is mighty apt to undergo a change. Bad stands stood got better all the time. But when a man has once been whipped he is never the same afterward. It is better to have a broken head than a broken spirit. Without spirit the strongest man is but a worm.

"Success may after a while enable the candidate to tell the truth, but it seems that when a man breaks into politics he breaks in as a liar. It may be almost unconscious on his part, but it ain't long till he's sayin' things that he don't believe. And what appears to grieve him is the fact that other people don't either. If your son-in-law is hesitating between politics and the penitentiary, remember that if he goes to the penitentiary you won't have to take care of him. Many an honest man has had a chance to become a politician and didn't. A politician's smile may be bright, and so is a sunbeam when it falls on a puddle where the hogs have been wallerin'."

A Temperance Day.

The presence in town last Sunday of Prof. Whitenack, a teacher in the South Bend high school and a representative of the Anti-Saloon league, gave a temperance character to the religious services of the day. Prof. Whitenack preached at the M. E. church in the morning and addressed a union service at the Reformed church in the evening. He gave a review of the corrupt conditions prevailing in St. Louis and South Bend where the liquor interests dominate both parties, and incidentally referred to the widespread anarchistic sentiment in Chicago where a large element were actually demanding a popular vote on the question of nullifying a state law. Pledges were secured and a collection taken at the meeting in behalf of the league. A large choir furnished music which included special numbers by various members.

Worth Remembering.

If a man is down on his luck and thinks he is tired of farming because he cannot lay up something year by year, just let him remember that there are thousands of men as honest as he, who are working in the cities at day or week labor and who eat up everything they make, so that if they get out of work for a day they must go in debt for rent and food, and let him be thankful that he has a hearth and home of his own and roof to cover himself and family, and that he can raise enough wholesome food to live on and breathe wholesome air, and need call no man master.

This Explains It.

As a rule a woman can talk much faster, much longer and with much greater facility than a man, and this power of speech is attributed by a professor at the Sorbonne to the greater strength and solidity of the female chest. Numerous experiments have led to the conclusion that a man, when he speaks, fatigues himself four times more than a woman, who, when she talks, expends less effort than when she fans herself.

The Easter Hat.

The "Merry Widow" sailor hat hit the village a stunning crack last Sunday when dozens of them appeared on the streets at church time and remained in all their efflorescent beauty during the day. A cat may look at a king, they say, and so a mere man may be permitted to express his opinion that the Merry Widow is more pleasing in its general effect and more becoming to the average feminine than the mushroom-dishpan-chopping bowl brand. There were very interesting Easter services at Salem church Sunday. Miss Geddes closed her school at Oak Grove on Friday with a very nice little entertainment. Her pupils showed the training they had received, and the teacher was entitled to praise. The patrons of the school brought and served a lovely dinner. The scholars presented Miss Geddes with enough blocks for a quilt. J. H. Barnes and wife were at Ober Saturday. Mrs. Charley Ransbottom is much better, but was very sick for a week. There was preaching by Rev. Hutchinson at Snyder school house Sunday afternoon.

WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I suffered for 15 years," writes Mrs. Malinda A. Akers, of Basham, Va., "with various female troubles. I had such a backache that it drew me over, so I could not stand straight. The doctors could not help me, so I took Cardui, and now I feel like a new woman."

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had. For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend.

BIG MEET.

Four Schools to Compete in Athletic Tournament.

A track and field meet has been arranged between Culver, Kewanee, Rochester and Rochester College. All who were present will remember the successful meet held last year in spite of bad weather and a slow track. The meet will be held at the fair grounds, at Rochester, April 24. All who enjoy seeing clean athletics will not miss seeing the different teams put forth their skill, strength and endurance for the honor of their school.

First, second and third medals will be given for individual points, in addition to first, second and third prizes in each event. A banner will be presented to the winning team by the Racket Clothing company. W. A. Miller of the C. M. A. will be referee.

The outcome is very doubtful, as various changes have taken place in each team since last year when Culver easily took first place. No doubt some new records that will surpass last year's will be made.

"E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Gentlemen: In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. In the spring of 1897 I bought a bottle of Kodol and the benefit I received all the gold in Georgia could not buy. May you live long and prosper. Yours very truly, C. N. Cornell, Bowling, Ga., August 24, 1896." Sold by T. E. Slattery.

A Good Beginning.

A start has been made this spring in a much-needed line of improvement, namely, the construction of terraces outside of the walks. John Hosmer and Pastor Michael are entitled to the credit of thus enhancing the appearance of the street in front of their homes. The latter expects to continue the improvement in front of the church as well as the parsonage. Culver, as a summer resort and residence town needs just that kind of beautifying to add to its attractions. When nature has done so much for us it would seem unappreciative if we did not supplement her handiwork by using every effort to make this the most alluring of all the resorts in Northern Indiana.

Weak women get prompt and lasting help by using Dr. Shoop's Night Cure. These soothing, healing, antiseptic suppositories, with full information how to proceed are interestingly told in my book "No. 1 for Women." That Little Brother of the Sun.

I mean Acetylene Light. What is Acetylene made from? Calcium Carbide and Water. What is Calcium Carbide? A dark and stony substance made from Lime and Coke melted together at the fierce heat of 6,000 degrees by an Electric Furnace. How is it used? This Carbide, crushed into nuggets like small coal, is put up in steel drums containing 100 pounds each. These drums are water-tight. Carbide can't burn, can't explode, can't do anything till you bring it in contact with water and air,—the two cheapest of all elements. When you drop Carbide into water its Carbon combines with the Hydrogen of the Water and forms Acetylene Gas.

Touch a match to that, at the burner, and it gives out a brilliant, white light, steady, cool and odorless which is nothing less than Sunlight.

Now, what does Carbide cost? It costs 3 1/2 cents per pound in most of the States. At 4 cents per pound it produces white Sunlight (Acetylene), of 24 candle-power, for two-fifths of a cent per hour.

This is a full third less than the same candle-power light costs from regular Kerosene Lamps the expense of Chimneys and Wicks considered. What does an Acetylene Lighting plant cost to install? Write me the number of rooms in your House (or Hotel) or the size of your Store.

Then I can tell you which sort of Generator will best suit your purpose, and how little it would cost installed complete when you go the right way about it.

Quite a crowd of young people went out to Uncle Ben Davis' woods Sunday to look for wintergreens. Miss Porcellina Paddyford refused to accompany them, declaring no young lady of modesty would go out where the trees displayed such bare and naked limbs as they now do.

The attractive exhibit in the Emporium show window this week is a 40-foot tape worm donated by Erastus Plummer, who became separated from it a week or so ago. Erastus has been considering an offer of a Culver fisherman to buy the worm for a dollar. He says they make the best perch bait.

ONLY ONE WAY TO RETAIN HEALTH

Young Man with New Theory Says All Depends on Stomach.

L. T. Cooper's theory regarding the human stomach is rapidly becoming a topic of universal discussion. Cooper claims that the human stomach has become chronically deranged by modern conditions, and that sickness generally is the result. In a recent interview, while introducing his medicine in a leading city, Mr. Cooper said: "There is just one way, in my opinion, to maintain general health, and that is by building up the digestive organs. The vast majority of Americans today have weak, flabby, distended stomachs. This has been caused by many generations of over-feeding and lack of exercise, until today the entire civilized race is affected. This is the true cause of most of the ill health of today. Little can be done to relieve it until the stomach is once more brought back to normal conditions. 'I am successful because my preparation puts the stomach in sound condition, and as I maintain this is the only way to secure general and permanent good health.' Among many prominent people who have recently become converted to Cooper's theory is Mr. E. M. Howey, of 47 1/2 De Russey Street, Binghamton, N. Y., who says: 'I had stomach trouble for about six years. After eating, I would become bloated and have a distressed feeling for several hours. This would be accompanied by heartburn, and I reached the point where I could not enjoy my meals at all. 'I tried different remedies in an effort to find relief, but without success. After taking three bottles of Cooper's New Discovery I am entirely cured. My stomach does not bother me in the least, and I can eat anything I like. I can cheerfully recommend Mr. Cooper's medicine to anyone afflicted with stomach complaints.' Mr. Cooper's medicines are making a remarkable record. We sell them. —Culver City Drug Store.

MAKE YOUR END POSTS OF CEMENT

Then You Will Not Have to Worry About Your Wire Fences
—By Joseph E. Wing.

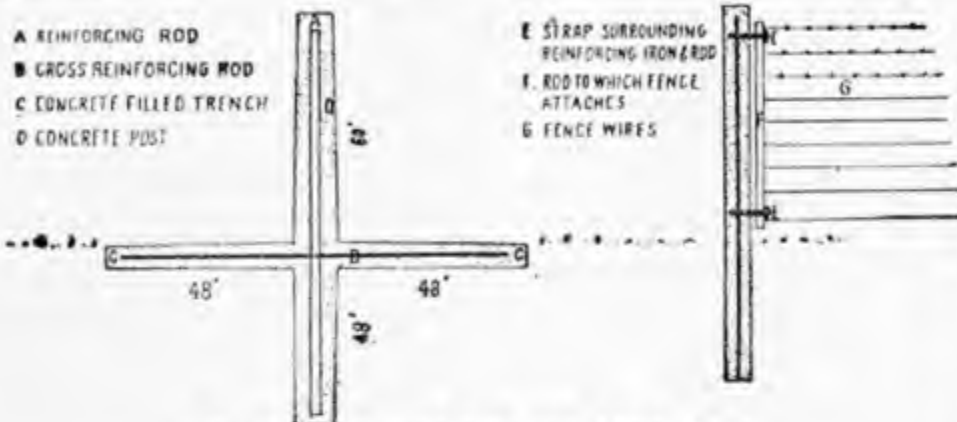

An end post may be braced in several ways; one of the easiest and most effective is to brace it much as a tree is braced by its roots. One never hesitates to hitch a fence to a tree! even a rather small tree will hold a hard pull, so he cannot well better that principle. Fortunately it is the easiest one to follow.

First excavate for the post at least 46 inches deep, and if the ground is not firm and sound go deeper. You need not dig a big hole; if it is 12x12 inches it will suffice, only see that it is of full size all the way down. Next cut a trench across the line of the fence full and lay down in it an old buggy axle or some strong bit of iron for reinforcing that, and afterward fill the trench and the hole to the level of the top of the ground.

Now set up the box for the upper part of the form; it may be square and 12x12 inches at bottom, 8x8 inches at top and 60 inches long. It should be of dressed lumber so as to make a smooth post. If many posts are to be made it should fasten together with hinges, and hasps to go around the corners, with staples and pins. It must of course be strongly put together.

Now about fastening the wires. A six feet or eight feet long and about eight inches deep and six inches wide. Then set up in the hole your reinforcing stuff, whatever it is to be. Very often scrap iron may be used for this, a bit of old shafting, a pair of buggy axles spliced together to make a rod eight feet six inches long or a bit of two-inch water pipe, or if you must get new rods use four, rods one-half inch in diameter, one at each corner, and the ends turned over a little.

Set up the reinforcing material and fill the hole with concrete to the level of the bottom of the trench and a little higher, then fill the trench half friend invented a practical way; he takes a rod about one inch in diameter, drills holes in it just right for spacing the wires, and claps it to the reinforcing of the post by iron straps. These straps must be put in place before the concrete is put in. Let this post harden for 30 days before you put the strain of the fence on it. If the rod to which the fence fastens has a square end at top it may be turned and the fence tightened up.

To mix the concrete, simply follow the practices of your sidewalk builders, only use a little larger proportion of cement.—Breder's Gazette.

PUT A FENDER AROUND THE FARROWING PEN

Our illustration shows the interior view of the corner of a farrowing pen. It is provided with a fender around the inside of the pen which keeps the sow from lying up against the partition and killing young pigs, which a large sow will often do. The fenders should project at least seven feet from the floor and there is another opening at this point into the shaft, 6x8 inches, which can be opened and closed when necessary. These openings at the ceiling are used in cold weather when the house is closed tightly or when the air is in such a condition that the moisture and frost begins to collect on the ceiling.

into the pen and allow eight inches in the clear between the fender and the floor.

Another feature in the University hog house of practical importance is the King system of ventilation. There is a ventilating shaft which extends into every sleeping pen and opens one foot from the floor. The ceiling is

The distance from the bottom of the outlet shafts in the pens to the top of the main shaft is 30 feet. The intakes slightly exceed the outlets and are so arranged that there is one for each pen. The air enters an opening at the outside near the wall line and, passing upward in the partitions, enters the pens near the ceiling.

THE BEE BEGINNER

A few suggestions may be helpful to the beginner in bee keeping and enable him to make his first year's work a marked success.

1. Shade your hives, if possible with trees carrying heavy foliage. Swarms should be shaded from nine a. m. to five p. m. during the hottest season of the year.

2. Get a super of honey from the hive wintered over by putting a super containing sections with full sheets of foundation or a super containing extracting frames on the hive as soon as there is a good working force.

3. When the swarm issues remove the super from the old and place it upon the new stand. Your new swarm will not leave their hive and will be quite likely to continue working in the super.

4. Arrange a wind-break to prevent loaded bees from being dashed against the hive fronts by the prevailing strong winds.

5. Provide supports for the hives which will lift them a foot or more from the ground. Ants and insect-eating animals may give trouble if the hives are on the ground.

6. Get your extra hives and supers set up for use several weeks before any swarms are expected or the honey flow may be half over before you are ready to take care of it.

7. Keep all comb-honey in moth proof cases and examine frequently.

10. If bees are found hanging in chains in a super do not smoke them down, thinking that they are idlers, for they are probably secreting wax.

11. Prevent much swarming by removing extra queen cells and by giving plenty of space at the bottom. Strong swarms produce surplus honey.

12. Grow with your business by reading a bee journal, a bee book, or both.

They Need Variety.—It is a mistake to try to raise hogs on an exclusive diet. You ask what kinds of feed can be produced on your farm and in your locality, then give them a variety of it. These feeds should be given in such relation to each other as to meet the varied needs of the swine system.

SPRING KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Vividly Described by One Who Has Suffered from It.

Mrs. H. Metzbaugh, of Duncannon, Pa., says: "I was sick and miserable all last Spring and as I did not know what was the matter I kept going down and down until I was a physical wreck. I had smothering spells, flashes of heat over the kidneys and pain in passing the kidney secretions, which contained sediment. My husband urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and at last I did so. They did me much good, and I used in all eight boxes which restored me to perfect health."

MADE HIS MEANING CLEAR.

Professor's Son Translated Father's Speech into the Vernacular.

A college professor, in company with his son, was enjoying a walk in the country, when he met an old farmer. It had been a very wet season, and the professor, thinking to start the conversation in a way that would prove interesting to the farmer, remarked:

"There has been a rather abnormal precipitation of late."

The farmer seemed somewhat embarrassed, and the professor's son, who used a different vernacular, though he was a student in the college to which his father was attached, attempted to straighten out the matter. Drawing the farmer to one side, he said in a superior way:

"The governor means that we've been having a devil of a lot of rain."

MACHINE-GROUND PAINT.

Occasionally one hears the "hand-mixed" paint of the painter slightly spoken of as "unscientific" and "not thoroughly mixed." The facts are all on the side of the painter and his hand-prepared paint.

It is the most "scientific" paint there is, because it is made on the spot to suit the particular purpose for which it is to be used. It is as scientific as a good doctor's prescription. If the painter did not mix it thus it would be as unscientific as a patent medicine. Moreover, the paint which a good painter turns out is made of genuine white lead and pure linseed oil. If he does not mix it himself he is not sure what is in it, and consequently his client cannot be sure.

As for not being thoroughly mixed by machinery, that is simply a misstatement. White Lead as made by National Lead Company is thoroughly incorporated with 7 or 8 per cent. of pure linseed oil in the factory, making a paste. This paste need only be thinned with additional linseed oil to make it ready for the brush.

The thorough incorporation of pigment and oil has already been accomplished before the painter gets it.

To know how to tell pure white lead is a great advantage to both painter and house-owner. National Lead Company will send a tester free to anyone interested. Address the company at Woodbridge Building, New York, N. Y.

NEW ARRIVALS IN CANADA NEARLY 300,000 IN 1907.

ABOUT SIXTY THOUSAND FROM THE UNITED STATES.

Now that it is known that in the year just closed nearly sixty thousand from the United States declared their intention of making their homes in Canada, it might not be out of place to search for some reasons that would bring this about. These people are but following the example of the fifty-five or sixty thousand who did the same thing the year previous, and an almost equal number who the year before that but followed the example of the thousands of the year preceding.

An excellent climate, certain and positive crops of grain of all kinds, good markets for their produce, land—and good land, too—at low prices, easy terms of payment, (not forgetting the 160 acres of land given free by the Government, particulars of which the Canadian Government Agent whose name appears elsewhere will tell you about) and then the splendid social conditions. The situation is pretty well sized up by a writer in one of the magazines. Quoting from this article, we find this: "Those of us who made good in the States," interjected another settler as if to continue the story of his neighbor, "have had it easy from the start; a little money is a mighty good thing on coming into a new country. But those who make an entry, or even buy lands at low rates, are able to square things in two or three seasons' crops. There are hardships in building shanties, and then with increasing prosperity getting things into shape for better homes. But affairs go much as in the States. We have the largest liberty in the world; there is more home rule in the Provinces than in the several states of the Republic. Taxes are light and with only a few million people west of Winnipeg we don't get in each other's way. One's friends over the line probably thought we would not live through the winter; and while it is cold, real cold, it is free from the moisture experienced in the east. Schools are good as encouraged by the Government; the enterprising American promoter and Yankee drummer see to it that we take notice of the latest improvements and best agricultural machinery. Altogether we are as near to affairs as we would be on our own farms in the States. Winnipeg bears the same relation to us as Chicago did at home; and Edmonton with the surrounding region advances as Omaha did in the days when we were as young as the boys yonder. We get together much as they did in the granges over the border; the government has established experimental schools of agriculture, and progress in every line is stimulated. This is a great region for grazing; we hear the Calgary citizen continuing, "and then with building elevators of wheat at one dollar a bushel, many of us find time to go over to the live stock exhibition in Chicago or visit old friends during the course of the winter. Every man is taken for what he is worth or for what he can raise; and in this good air and on this fertile soil we intend to show our old friends that we are made of the right stuff—that we are chips of the old block who built up the American West."

Winter the Most Deadly Season. In most large cities the death rate in winter is much greater than in summer.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death."

"One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured."

"Every woman suffering with any female trouble should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.
