Culver songs touch lives in Africa

By Jeff Kenney, Citizen editor

On January 11, a crowd gathered at Culver Academies to celebrate the culmination of months of work – a crowd ranging broadly in age, background, ethnicity, and point of origin, many of whom had traveled from other states to attend. That diverse and multifaceted mixture was appropriate for the occasion, which marked the release of a new CD of music performed by students, faculty and guests of Culver Academies, all aimed at raising money and awareness regarding the plight of many children in Africa.

While they are quick to highlight the collaborative nature of the effort, two Academy seniors – Alex Banfich of Plymouth and Romina Clements of Flagstaff, Arizona – rise to the fore as two of the primary reasons for the project's success.

While the CD is part of their senior service project, Banfich and Clemente note that the Leadership Committee for Africa started at Culver four years ago "as a way to make people aware of what's going on in Africa," says Clemente. "AIDS, orphans...it's an epidemic. Over the past four years, there have been a lot of connections with organizations (in Africa), lots of fund raising and awareness raising, lots of big network connections. Two years ago, a group of Culver students went to South Africa. There are all these networks."

She points out that the Leadership Committee for Africa has a number of facets to it, including committees focusing on fund raising, amaranth grain (a nutritional aid), communications, and work projects (which includes trips to Africa). Banfich adds that the group focused on the Winston, SC-based Amani Children's Foundation in Kenya, whose efforts include seven homes for orphaned children, many with AIDS or HIV. "Our CD profits went there," Banfich says.

Amani founder Dr. Jane Stephens has informed the Culver group that its efforts are contributing more to Amani than the girls may have realized. "She told us, 'We're always looking over our shoulder and going, 'oh that's LCA's doing.' We thought we were just another little donor."

The Culver CD is the latest in a series of fundraising CDs for Amani, which usually include leading youth

"Seasons of the Heart," a CD featuring various musical and vocal groups from Culver, made its official debut at a January launch party. choirs in America and introductions from famous names such as Maya Angelou and Regis Philben (who contributed to a St. Mary's College CD recently). Clements says that they considered drawing from the Academy's pool of famed graduates, but decided instead to "make it more personal." Culver Trustees Jim Henderson and Jane Eberly contributed the spoken introduction to the disc.

Banfich points out that the adult responsible for these efforts perhaps more than any other is Academies Student Life coordinator Nancy McKinnis, who was "there through the entire thing supporting both of us."

While both girls have been involved in LCA for most of their Culver tenure, Romina Clemente cites a sophomore trip to South Africa as the point that electrified her involvement in LCA. "It was one of the most humbling, life-changing experiences of my life, to see those children

Culver Scouts' talent on display at Derby

By Jeff Kenney, Citizen editor

Cub Scouts and parents from Culver's Pack 290 gathered on Jan. 26 for the Scouts' annual Pinewood Derby race, held in the basement of the Wesley United Methodist Church.

Scouts – who range in age from kindergarten to upper elementary school – are supplied with a block of pinewood and encouraged to be creative in design, color, and other details of their race car, said Tiger Cub leader Jim Coiner. "This is teaching them about responsibility, about how to cut and handle their own projects," he explains.

Parents will probably need to help in some areas, of course, though Webelo den leader Rich Vela notes that second year Webelo Scouts are expected to do all the work themselves.

Scouts race in each of their respective age classes, with an additional Open Class for non-Scouts, including adults, who might like to join the competition. Everyone has to abide by the same rules, however. "The cars can't weigh more than five ounces," Vela explains. "They put their cars on the table and they're not allowed to touch any of them until race time."

Cars are judged based on their respective classes in a variety of categories, including judge's choice, best detail, best paint job, smoothest finish, strangest shape, most patriotic, and a host of others. Race winners from each class will then race against each other to determine the grand champion, which this year was Tiger Cub Wyatt Coiner. Shane Lowry, parent of Wolf Pack member Payton Lowry, is pleased with the Derby and the Scouts in general, and the effect the group has had on his relationship with his son and his family as a whole. "It's been a good bonding thing," he says. "It's an extension of our family time. (The Scouts) have a lot of neat activities, family growing activities. We've grown there be able to smile and laugh and appreciate their education. I knew I had so many resources and opportunities here, and it would take only a little initiative to help them."

Once the idea for the CD was formed, says Clemente, Zarex Production studio in South Bend gave the group "a huge discount" in creating a master CD. They also note that Academies Head of Schools John Buxton was supportive from the start, arranging financing for the initial recording, while Amani paid for production of the CDs. At a cost of $3,100, the disc had already brought in $4,000 before the end of January, after only arriving at Culver on Dec. 14.

The disc itself, says Banfich, is titled "Seasons of the Heart" and is -- appropriately enough -- divided into seasons. "We had a summer section. Some are just fun, summer sounding songs, some are songs from the Culver summer camp Naval band with the Woodcraft kids singing along. That's... mixed with band pieces and orchestra pieces...Christmas songs recorded at (Culver's) that. It's pretty personal and nostalgic to anybody who's been to school here or has a child that's gone here."

Copies of the CD, say the Vespers and holiday services. It has the Culver choir, the gospel choir, the Naval band, the string orchestra, the wind ensemble, and the folk choir. It's a tradition for CGA (Culver Girls Academy) to sing "Treasured Memory," so we recorded girls, are available at the Academy bookstore, the Culver Coffee Company, and the Amani website (www.amanichildren.org).

The CD launch party on Jan. 11 gave LCA a chance to highlight the contributions of so many. "The whole point of the launch party was to give the people involved a chance to see what they can do," says Clemente. "It's about empowering people as well."

"I was very surprised how many came to the launch party," adds Banfich. "We had over 120 plus the various choirs who performed."

The party was also an exciting opportunity for the students to meet Jane Stephens, with whom they had collaborated via numerous phone calls and emails. On the bill was a variety of performances by Culver's folk ensemble, flute choir, the Woodcraft choir (which included specially-invited members of the Academy and surrounding community who had attended Woodcraft and donned their uniforms for the occasion). In addition, Stephens and Buxton were among those to address the attendees, who had traveled from all over Indiana and out of state.

That commitment, say the girls, is symbolic of the genuine "team" spirit that fed the CD project. "So many people were touched by the CD," says Clemente.

"Once you start something like this," adds Banfich, "everyone's so supportive. Romina counted up the students that performed on the CD and it was 99. And there were twice that many involved. People from all over the nation contributed: the people who made the CD design, Maj. (William) Browne and Mrs. (Mary) Weirich took a lot of time picking out songs they thought were important...even the (Academy) post office called us really enthusiastically when they got the first shipment of CDs. So many people were so enthusiastic about it."

And, even though Alex Banfich and Romina Clemente will graduate this year and -- like their classmates -- leave Culver for points across the US, "I think (LCA) will always stay in Culver as long as there's the passion for Africa," Banfich says. "The CD will keep going strong. I'd say it's pretty timeless."

as a family because of the Scouts."

Malik Guerra, a Bear Scout, hopes his Derby efforts will contribute to his future aspiration. "I like to build things because I would like to be an inventor," he notes, adding that it took him about three days to build his car using "the pine-wood derby block, a motor from an army boat, a guy (action figure), a bazooka, a machine gun, and a police shield."

This year, says Vela, race maintenance man Chuck Robbins also built a brand new track for the Derby. Vela also cited Chuck Dilts for his efforts as fundraiser for the event, and Cub Master Dona Vela, who also handed out the awards this year to the 18 boys who participated.

Tigers: 1st: Wyatt Coiner; 2nd: Dakota Bennett; 3rd: Adrian Craig; 4th: Trenton Jones; 5th: Nikolas Vela. Wolves: 1st: Michael Boland; 2nd: Dalton Reinhold;

School board discusses JESSE, Kernan-Shepard

Bobbie Washburn Ruhnow Culver - The Culver Community School Board has selected Ned Davis as president of the board, Marilyn Swanson, vice-president and Jack Jones, secretary. The officers will also serve as the board of finance.

A resolution to commit to JESSE program for three years met with some discussion among the board members. Ed Behnke, member, asked if Culver Community was paying more than their equitable share of the costs of the program. He also noted that newspaper reports indicated Plymouth schools discussed withdrawing from the program and was concerned about the increased cost to the remaining schools in the 10-school cooperative.

Brad Schuldt, superintendent, told board members that without JESSE, Culver Community Schools would assume full cost for learning disabled students. The cost of the JESSE program is based on the number of children in the local school system, Schuldt continued. Culver has a student enrollment of 181 identified for severe to casual learning disabilities.

The breakdown of reimbursement from the state for Level 1- $8,300; Level 2

- $2,250; Level 3 - $531 and Pre-School -$2,750. Schuldt noted that of the total JESSE budget for Culver of $843,538, and $475,300 of the amount was dedicated to the high incidence student. When questioned by Behnke about the remaining fund disbursement, Schuldt said it was used for low incidence student instruction, teachers, directors, testing, and busing.

The resolution to commit to the program for three years was passed with Davis, Swanson, Jones and Chris Kline in favor and Behnke abstaining. Members Jim Wentzel and Gene Baker were absent.

A committee to meet with government officials to discuss the ramifications of the Kernan-Shepard report recommending school consolidation will be composed of Kline, Behnke and Schuldt. The board agreed to endorse an op-ed piece written by Kline for submission to local papers.

Kline points out in his editorial "Digging into the commission's report didn't make us feel better. Upon what data are they basing their recommendations? According to their own data preliminary research on Indiana suggests that an optimal balance of cost efficiencies and student achievement is realized in school corporations with an enrollment between 2,000 and 4,000. This preliminary research is based on an unpublished PHD dissertation. How did a preliminary, unpublished report lead to such a definitive recommendation?"

In other business, the contract for Jerry Hollenbaugh, JESSE vocational director, was approved.

A 10-person committee for textbook selection was approved. Meeting with George Irvin, middle school administrator, the committee will choose the English and Language Arts texts.

On the recommendation of Carol Jackson, library director, Carol Saft was appointed to the Culver Union Township Library board.

The Holy Season of Lent

On Wednesday, February 6, churches throughout Christendom celebrate Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the Lenten season. Lent is the longest single season in the church calendar. It calls for Christians to live in a period of spiritual preparation and renewal through repentance, prayer, and meditation upon our Lord's passion and death.

In the first century, Lent corresponded with the forty hours Jesus' body lay in the tomb. The early Christians reflected and prayed during these hours, remembering the time following Jesus' death upon the cross through his resurrection on Easter morning. By the third century the forty hours extended to the six days we know now as Holy Week. In the fourth century, Maundy Thursday, Good Friday and Holy Saturday received particular emphasis.

Eventually, Lent was lengthened from the six days to thirty-six, symbolizing a tithe (ten percent) of the calendar year. Finally, four days were added to the thirty-six to make the forty days we now observe. The use of forty stems from the Biblical significance of the number forty: in Noah's time it rained for forty days and forty nights, Moses met with God on Mount Sinai for forty days, and Jesus spent forty days in the wilderness. Sundays have always celebrated Christ's resurrection (each Sunday being referred to as "little Easters"), hence they were excluded from the forty day period of Lent. Yet, the spirit of Lent does enter into our Sunday worship as we proclaim Jesus' death and resurrection.

The beginning of Lent is determined by when Easter occurs. The Council of Nicea in 325 A.D. determined Easter as the first Sunday after the first full moon on or after the Vernal Equinox.

[This year due to the lunar cycle Easter is nearly the earliest it can possibly be March 23rd.] It followed naturally, then, that Lent would begin 46 days prior to Easter (forty days of Lent plus six Sundays). Prior to 1099 A.D. Ash Wednesday was only known as the "Beginning of the Fast". Pope Urban II in 1099 decreed that the first day of Lent be referred to as "Ash Wednesday" due to the ancient custom of ashes placed upon the foreheads of penitents (a sign of repentance and grief).

The day before Ash Wednesday is known as Shrove (which means to cleanse) or Fat Tuesday. The faithful seek to cleanse themselves of their sins, hence "shrove". It was, also, the custom to collect all the fat, which was forbidden during Lent, and make doughnuts (the German custom) or pancakes (English).

Prior to the Council of Nicea, Lent was a time to instruct converts to the Christian faith. They repented and prayed during this season as preparation for their baptism on Easter morning. The Council declared in 325 A.D. that Lent was the time for all Christians to repent and pray. No weddings or public entertainment were allowed. Alleluias and the Gloria in Excelsis Deo were prohibited in public worship.

One of the main disciplines of the Lenten Season was fasting. The apostles in the first century fasted on Fridays, corresponding with Jesus' crucifixion on Good Friday. Commonly, the entire church fasted on Good Friday and Holy Saturday. The tradition of fasting from meat on every Friday was a common practice. And during Lent certain foods were prohibited, such as meat, dairy products and eggs. Protestant churches traditionally have not emphasized the necessity for any such fasting, most likely to disassociate themselves from their Roman Catholic brothers and sisters. Yet, Martin Luther in his Small Catechism did state that "fasting and other outward preparations" are useful in preparing to receive communion.

During Lent we, at Grace United Church of Christ, reflect on greater ways to strengthen our relationship with God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit. A "Meditation Garden" is erected in the back of the sanctuary for private and personal prayers and reflections. It will officially open prior to the beginning of our Ash Wednesday Worship Service. Hours will be posted as to when the church will be open so that the greater Culver community may utilize the "Garden," as well. Guided meditations and reflections will be made available to those who desire a more structured experience with the symbols of the season. One must see for oneself the beauty of the garden in enclosed area of the church.

Regardless your religious affiliation, may we center ourselves upon God's power to transform our sin into an instrument of life and salvation. May we get in touch with God's righteousness, knowing that God's love for the world is demonstrated by the cross.

(The Reverend Robin Keating is pastor and teacher at Grace United Church of Christ, 407 N. Plymouth St., Culver.)

Blizzard of '78 memories

Culver farmer Paul Winn recalls his experiences 30 years ago in Indiana's 'blizzard of the century.'

By Paul Winn
The weatherman had been telling us a few days before, that things were setting up for a major winter storm that could be serious. This time he was right! The wind began to howl out of the west, the sky darkened and it wasn't long before the snow started coming down. By noon that day, it was a white-out. You couldn't see a quarter mile away. It continued all afternoon and I am sure through the night.

When we got up early the next morning we could hardly get the door open to get out of the house. Things looked very dreary outside.

There was no one moving on the roads anywhere. The wind had stopped blowing and it was very still. Huge drifts were everywhere.

Joyce was up and getting breakfast and we wondered what, if anything, we could do. I happened to think we had a bulldozer and if I could get it started on this zero degree morning, I might be able to push some snow off the roads. About that time, our one employee, Truman Neher, walked from his house, through the fields, and showed up for work. We decided to try and start up that dozer. We put heaters on the engine and it started. We also started a 4-wheel drive pick-up truck and began to move snow.

Our farm is the first farm north of State Rd. 110, on State Rd. 117. We left the farmstead heading east, to Queen Road. We couldn't go west out our driveway at all. We went south on Queen Road to State Rd. 110. We could see that the east-west roads weren't drifted very bad at all. The north-south roads were impassable.

While riding that old dozer, I thought about four in his bulk tank and if the milk truck couldn't get to it, it would have to go down the drain. We had to help Kenny, too, if we could, because every one of my neighbors would help me if I ever needed help. But in this case, I just happened to have the dozer. We started that old dozer in a north-westerly direction right across the fields, which is now the Mystic Hills Golf Course. I owned it at that time, so I didn't have to ask anyone for permission to cross the land. We cut a path through the snow that was about 3 feet deep in places. We finally made it to 20B Rd. Now, after all that work, would the milk truck get through in time to save the milk?

As I said earlier, State Rd. 110, an east and west road, was not bad. State Rd. 31 north and south, probably was taken care of because of so much traffic, and those farmers were sending their milk to Deans Milk Co at Rochester. Those trucks probably would make it.

One of the dairy farmers called Dean's and said to send a truck, that the milk was ready to ship and they could get to the farms. It wasn't quite as simple to get to McCune's farm. We had to put Kenny's big tractor and my dozer on the front of the truck to keep it in the path we made through the fields. but we finally made it about 10 PM that first night and had to continue this process until the plows could get through and get the roads opened up, which was several days.

I do not want to sound like the hero in this story. Farm people have always been known to help each other when there was a need and I know I have been helped many times by these same neighbors anytime I needed help!

Paul Winn and his wife Joyce both graduated from Culver High School in 1952. They have lived all their married lives near Culver.

Call your editor -- it's easier!

I didn't intend our memories of the blizzard of 1978 to last for three weeks, but when Paul Winn's recollections and the Flora's wonderful photos came in, I couldn't resist making the blizzard last one more week, which reflects the time it took everyone to dig out that year!

I want to thank the Winns, the Floras, Connie Van Horn, Tim Warrick, and Bob Hartman, among others, for their help in making those stories possible. Next week we should be back to normal with the return of the nostalgia column and this editorial. A belated apology is in order for a headline mixup a few weeks ago which puzzled several of you (understandably) and made it appear that the column pertained to our formal town marshal, Richard Woodward, instead of the look back at Culver flooding in 1983 that actually ran that week. Some have asked about the Woody column, which for the record did run a previous week paper.

One very important point for those of you who have tried to track me down and nearly hired private detectives to do so: for just that reason, I now have a Culver Citizen cell phone for your convenience. I encourage any and all of you to consider using this number to reach me: (574) 261-7887.

As much as I'd like to be in the office more, it's difficult, but I plan to keep the cell phone with me most of the time. Even if I don't answer, I do have voice mail and hope you'll leave a message for me. Besides email, that will definitely be the quickest way to contact me...so please do!

Davis leads Culver to victory over Glenn

By Dee Grenert
Sports Editor

NORTH LIBERTY — Culver Community senior center Jon Davis entered Saturday's contest against John Glenn as a question mark.

He finished as an exclamation point.

The 6-foot-3 workhorse, hobbled by a sprained ankle, muscled his way to a game-high 22 points and raked down five rebounds in the Cavs' 51-42 Northern State Conference win at North Liberty Elementary School in a game originally scheduled for Friday. The win is Culver's first over the Falcons since the 1994-95 campaign.

Davis scored the go-ahead bucket — the game's only lead swap — with 5:59 left in the game, during a 12-0 Culver stretch.

"(Davis) became a horse for us," Culver Community head coach Brett Berndt said. "He sprained his ankle against LaVille last Friday and didn't play the second, third or fourth quarters. He did not have a full practice all week, so we didn't know how much he'd play tonight. For him to come through like he did was huge."

Although Culver pulled away in the fourth frame, the Falcons looked like the team to beat well into the third quarter. Glenn led by nine points on three different occasions, the last after Daniel Stegemiller's bucket with 5:37 left in the third quarter.

Davis then seized control. He bowled to the basket and scored on back-to-back third-quarter post moves, despite double-team pressure.

After playing mostly man to man, Glenn switched to a 2-3 zone during the second half, searching for a way to neutralize Davis.

"Our biggest problem was we couldn't stop Davis inside," John Glenn head coach Travis Hannah said. "He's a four-year player. He's much stronger and more athletic around the basket than he was a couple years ago. He's been a fun kid to watch develop. We put our strongest player on him at the end, even though he's a guard, because we were running out of options."

The Cavs claimed the upper hand with a well-executed spread. Point guard Lucas Hanselman dumped the ball to Adam Neace, just off the left block. Neace turned and hit Davis cutting to the rack for a basket and foul. The Culver big man converted the old-fashioned three-point play to put the Cavs up 36-34.

"Glenn was playing zone, and we were content to spread the floor and play it out," Berndt said. "Adam did a great job reading the play from the high post. With each possession our kids' confidence grew."

Culver stretched its lead to six points with another Davis basket, followed by a steal of the inbound pass and two charity tosses from Justin Master.

Master's biggest contribution, though, came on the defensive end of the floor. The 5-9 junior held Glenn leading scorer and 3-point specialist Brody Solmos to four points. Solmos not only failed to connect from downtown, he only fired three attempts from behind the arc and wound up 1 of 5 from the field.

Neace, meanwhile, held Austin O'Connor — coming off a career-high 26 points against West Central — to seven points.

"We put Justin Master and Adam Neace on their best two shooters, and we're very happy with the way they played defense," Berndt said. "(Solmos) has got probably the quickest shot, and then O'Connor hit a bunch of 3s in the last game. We were concerned about them."

"We told Justin Master, 'you're going to find (Solmos),' " Berndt added. "Justin did a great job not letting him touch the ball. He takes great pride in his defense."

Culver sealed the win with Neace, Master, Zoe Bauer, Hanselman and Davis combining on a 10-of-11 fourth-quarter mark from the free-throw line. Hanselman also nabbed seven rebounds and handed out six assists.

Junior forward Michael Fansler paced the Falcons with 14 points and seven rebounds.

However, Glenn, which hit an ice-cold 29 percent from the field and just 3 of 21 from 3-point range, suffered through a nearly 10-minute second-half stretch with just a single field goal — a drive from Conrad Schubert. During that spell, the Falcons went from a 31-28 lead to a 47-37 deficit.

Typical of the Falcons' second half, they missed a pair of 3-balls and a put back on one trip down the floor while trailing 46-37. The clock expired during a similar barrage of missed shots in a gym used because of a music program scheduled at John Glenn High School.

"You can't shoot 29 percent and expect to win," Hannah said. "We had to play on the same floor as (Culver) did. At the end we had to count on them missing free throws, and they didn't. We didn't shoot the ball well. We shoot 29 percent tonight. I just got done telling the guys that we're shooting 48 percent from the 3-point line at home."

"One of the problems was we got up eight or 10 points in the second quarter, and then we had a two-minute stretch where our defense let up and couldn't find anybody," Hannah added. "We gave up a layup or two. They hung around, hung around and got us."

Both teams play again Thursday. Culver heads to Argos, while Glenn hosts Jintown.

Despite Culver losses, CMA's James unstoppable

By James Costello

SOUTH BEND — While Clay Regional team champion Mishawaka put the icing on its Wednesday victory over South Bend Riley at the team meet with six championships Saturday, Triton had the most to celebrate about with an unprecedented two weight class champions, a feat never before accomplished in the Class A who had previously beaten the Rockies junior at sectional last weekend. Good lost in the consolation match of the 119 division to finish fourth, thus falling one place shy of a semistate berth Saturday.

Lewandowski fell 9-0 to Mishawaka junior Josh Harper, who had already beaten him at the Clay team regional Wednesday. Harper remained undefeated at 38-0 with the win.

years, Flora had never beaten Riley in numerous matches, including a sectional championship loss last weekend at Plymouth.

The two were dead even at 3-all heading into the final period at Clay. Flora fell a point behind on a Riley reversal in the last few seconds but pulled off a reversal against all odds just prior to the buzzer for a one-point victory to earn a semistate slot in his final year.

Below: Culver Military Academies' Branden James looks for position against Mishawaka Marian's Caleb Norville in the 171-pound championship at the Clay individual wrestling regional meet. James won the championship 10-0.

Culver Military Academy will also send two wrestlers to Merrillville.

Daniel Young was penalized for locking hands in the third period of the championship round, and ultimately lost the 130-pound regional championship with a sudden-death takedown by Mishawaka's Trent Reineohl, while Branden James clinched the championship at 171 pounds.

James remained undefeated Saturday, closing with an outstanding 42-0 record and a regional title. At a level of the state tournament where odds are starting to level out, James was as dominant as ever with two first-round pinfall wins in the opening rounds and a 10-0 win over Mishawaka's Caleb Norville — no slouch with a record of 39-2 heading into the bout — for the championship.

A senior with CMA, James is currently ranked second in state in his weight class. He finished fourth at state last year and seems unstoppable in the march toward his ultimate goal of a state championship.

"Every match is just another step to the top of the podium, the way I see it," said James. "I can't wait until next weekend."

Also Saturday, LaVille's Zach Troxel took third at 125 pounds with a victory over Clay's Joe Vargo in the consolation match. The Lancer senior will be his team's lone representative next Saturday at Merrillville.

school's history. Rockies wrestling was unable to seize a championship Saturday, but Plymouth did enjoy the distinction of clinching several top-three spots to send a total of five wrestlers on to the Merrillville Semistate next Saturday.

Plymouth's Chuck Holmquest advanced to the finals at Clay with a last-minute pinfall victory over Culver Community's Jesse Good, Deurloo was also charged with wrestling a Caveman whom he'd lost to Wednesday in 285-pound champion Randy Morin. Deurloo — outweighed by more than 50 pounds — may have lost the rematch, but he looked much more competitive in Saturday's 3-1 loss.

But possibly Plymouth's greatest win of the day was posted in the 215 consolation match between senior Drew Flora and Wawasee's Braxton Riley. In three

Unburying treasure

Shaffer's collection displays part of bygone Culver era

Gary Shaffer's enthusiasm for Lake Maxinkuckee runs deep -- sometimes several feet beneath its waves -- and he's willing to dive to the lake bottom to bring that enthusiasm to fruition.

Besides inheriting his business operation working with boat lifts, piers, and watercraft on the lake from his father -- longtime Culver barber Very Shaffer -- Gary has also inherited some of Ver's interest in artifacts, especially local ones. In particular, Gary Shaffer has developed a hobby of collecting antique bottles from the lake, and part of that collection is on display this month on the Culver-Union Twp. Public library's upper floor.

Shaffer, who grew up in Culver and graduated from Culver High School, discovered his first bottle in the lake outside his parents' house on the lakeshore, at age 14, a Rumford medicine bottle.

He didn't develop an interest in collecting the bottles, however, until he returned to Culver in 1995 after a stint in the Navy. "My dad did the (lake) business and he was fairly young when I joined the Navy," says Shaffer. "When I ers in the 1920s; Shaffer's collection of several bottles represents the trajectory of the business. "They had soda before Coke came to Plymouth, and then it went to Coke," says Shaffer. "A lot of these bottles are local," Shaffer notes. "You think of the way the train came from Terre Haute and Logansport, and then there are some Chicago ones. My theory on where to find bottles in the lake is: as far as a guy could throw them! Where the train used to run along the west shore towards town, the railroad was real close to the lake. You know these guys tossed them out the window. And a lot I find up at the park near the train station."

Shaffer sometimes takes along his daughters, Kelsey and Lauren to go "hunting for bottles," as the girls call it. His wife, Barbara, is supportive as well, and no doubt son Nolan -- who just started kindergarten -- will eventually get involved. As with any hobby, sometimes the bottles can create some work. "They're so dirty when they come out that you have to soak them. I have maybe 100 or so that we've cleaned... (the really old ones are) so rough that the sand has etched the glass. Any of the Culver dairies, we'll clean them up as best as we can."

Culver's dairies are part of a nearly forgotten era in Culver's history, the days when several local entities -- Miller's, Cloverleaf, Culver Military Academy, and others -- supplied the community with milk, each dairy with its own unique glass bottles. "I didn't know there was a Zechiel dairy until I found that bottle. That dairy was on the west shore near where the south shore starts."

"Of course, 50 to 70 years ago, every town had their own little (dairy operations). Now milk comes from Illinois or who knows where; things can be shipped anywhere. These little bottling companies -- dairies, soda bottling companies -- are not around any more. They get absorbed by the biggies. (The bottles are) kind of like a time capsule to the past. So I thought I'd bring these in here (to the library) and let some other people enjoy them."

said I was going to reenlist, he said, 'I'm getting up in years.' So I came back here to help him... I started working with him in 1995. I took it over in 2000 and have expanded it into a full-time job."

Shortly after his return, he found a bottle with his foot while working in the lake. "That's how I find a lot of them: you step on them. I'll stop what I'm doing and try to bring it up with my foot or dive down and get it. Sometimes I find it's only a Snaple bottle, but I think 'I'm cleaning the lake this way,' so I'll take it home and recycle it. When you find one you haven't found before, it is like finding treasure."

Shaffer is only interested in older and more unusual bottles. His oldest comes from Henry Stein bottlers in Plymouth, which he learned dates from 1892-1898 before the business went to son George Stein in 1905 and then the Ebert Broth-
