Culver observes Veteran's Day 2010

ABOVE: Culverites across the community observed Veteran's Day last Thursday in a variety of ways. Culverites observe Veteran's Day with multiple events

Local veterans mark solemn tradition at Culver cemetery

Bobbie Washburn Ruhnow

Ninety-two years ago, November 11, 1918, a moment of silence was held to honor the signing of the Armistice ending the War to End All Wars, WWI. President Woodrow Wilson decreed Armistice Day as November 11, 1919 to show our solemn pride in all who fought and died in the great war. Finally, in 1954, after the end of the Korean War, the day officially became Veterans' Day.

Today, continuing the tradition, members of the Finney-Shilling VFW Post 6919, Collins Tasch American Legion Post 399, and VFW 6919 Ladies Auxiliary met at the veterans' memorial in the Culver Masonic Cemetery to remember and honor all who served in all of America's conflicts. Members of the Culver-Union Township Fire Department were also present for the ceremony.

At precisely 11:11:11 a.m., Bryce Lindvall, VFW Acting Chaplain, gave the opening prayer. VFW Commander Tom Schmidt gave the brief address, vowing to "keep our promise to remember and thank all veterans past and present."

Schmidt noted that it isn't the great ships, planes, tanks, and armament which accomplish the task, but the men and women who fight for our country that win the battle. "Thank you," Schmidt said "We will keep our promise to remember. Veterans, you have done your duty. Thanks and God Bless you all."

Ceremonies ended with the sound of Taps over the quiet of the audience.

Hiatt emphasizes 'Godly principles' defended by veterans

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen editor

Phil Hiatt, a former Culver Community High School history teacher who spent more than 30 years in the classroom before his retirement nearly four years ago, returned to the school last Thursday for a Veteran's Day address which made no bones about two major points: that the principles upon which America and its democratic government were founded were of a distinctly Judeo-Christian nature; and that America's veterans fought, suffered, and died to defend those principles, and deserve our heartfelt thanks.

Hiatt, who also emphasized how privileged his high school and middle school audience is to live in the "blessed nation" of America, spent the first part of his talk at the school's annual Veteran's Day observation demonstrating specifically the theistic nature of the language of the US Constitution, language ordaining the Supreme Court chambers in Washington, DC, and similarly theistic wording on the Washington Monument.

"Our nation was built and formed on Godly principles," said Hiatt. "They (America's founders) mentioned a Creator that was God; they didn't believe in just any god...it was the Hebrew-Christian God they believed in.

"If this is too much 'God stuff' for you," he added with a smile, "you reach into your pockets and pull out all your money...it all says, 'In God we trust.' You can bring it on up to me and I'll take it!"

Hiatt also described living conditions he witnessed during stays in

Council talks cat ordinance, other matters

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen editor

In one of its briefest meetings of the year, Culver's Town Council heard from Culver residents Mark and Becky Damore concerning its proposed "cat ordinance," already passed on second reading and slated for a public hearing and possible final passage at the November 23 meeting.

During the November 9 meeting, the Damores asked how the town planned to police the ordinance, which aims to control a feral cat population some feel is a nuisance and health concern in some parts of town. Becky Damore noted the ordinance focuses on those who feed feral cats, but ought to make a priority of spaying and neutering the animals.

"That (spaying and neutering) really helps with population control," said Damore. "If you find people who take (cats) in, if they're not spayed and neutered, then you fine them."

Mark Damore explained his wife has already spayed and neutered a great many cats in the area.

"Feeding has nothing to do with it," added Becky of the ordinance's present emphasis on fining those who feed the feral animals. "Two cats become 10 become 20 (if unsprayed or neutered). An outdoor animal has a life cycle of about two to three years. Once you fix them, that life will slowly fade out...(you should) pass a spay and neuter ordinance instead of a feeding ferals ordinance. The way I understand it, many people come here for the summer who have cats (and then the cats) have babies, and they (cat owners) leave for the summer."

She further noted some other Indiana municipalities have al-

Local student launches 'Coaches vs. Cancer' event

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen Editor

Local Culver Girls Academy senior Alexis Christlieb hasn't had a family member directly affected by cancer, but she's seen the hardships other families go through when a loved one is diagnosed, and she intends a January 15, 2011 "Coaches vs. Cancer" event she's planning, to be her contribution towards battling the disease.

Coaches vs. Cancer centers around the 7:30 p.m. girls basketball game on the 15th in the Culver Academies gymnasium. All monies raised through concession stand proceeds, donations, and through a hoped-for halftime show during the game will go directly to the American Cancer Society. During the game (which otherwise will be the regularly scheduled game), the Culver team will be wearing pink headbands and shoe strings, says Christlieb.

She's also recruiting local sponsors, as part of her CGA Senior Service Project, to donate money or supplies to the game.

Christlieb credits Culver's head basketball coach Gary Christlieb (who also happens to be her father) with the idea, after Academies Athletic Director Al Clark gave him a packet sent by the American Cancer Society about "Coaches vs. Cancer" events, which he shared with Alexis. She says she's focusing on breast cancer rather than other

The event, preceded by a CD signing party at nearby Borders books and music, promoted Taylor and other artists recording with Indianapolis-based Ruff Dog Records, with whom Smith has already cut one single, with another on the way (she’s auto-graphing CDs at Borders in the photo AT RIGHT).

In fact, Borders sold out of the discs and has already requested a second shipment, says Smith, who adds a holiday party at the Opera House in Winamac slated for January will be the young singer’s next big show. Ruff Dog Records may be found online at www.ruffdogrecords.com.

the YMCA Cup during his career at CMA (the top award given to a graduating cadet). Ramsey is today a Lieutenant in the Air Force, having graduated from the United Stated Air Force Academy in 2007, helping Air Force earn its first-ever berth in the NCAA tournament.

According to CMA Commandant of Cadets Col. Kelly Jordan, Ramsey was commissioned into the Air Force and served as a Contracting Officer for two years at Hanscom Air Force Base just outside of Boston before “being selected to attend the prestigious Naval Postgraduate School to earn an MBA in Strategic Sourcing. Andrew will complete his studies next month, and he looks forward to moving on to his next duty station.”

Ramsey told the audience his desire to serve his country through the armed forces really began while at Culver when he and “my Battery B buddies” watched the second plane crash into the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001. “Me and six classmates decided we must confront these new enemies head-on,” he added.

Pointing out each military conflict in American history involves different soldiers, weapons, and methods of fighting, Ramsey quoted Oliver North in describing the average member of America’s armed forces, who he said is 20 and a half years of age, a high school graduate, and “better educated, better trained, and with better equipment” than any soldier in the past. He also noted that with each passing decade, fewer Americans have someone with a military service record in their family, and in the near future, less than 10 percent of Americans will have anyone in their immediate family who has served in the military. News stories of American casualties will have less and less direct impact on the lives of Americans as a result, he added.

Pointing out that most Academies graduates will go into careers outside the military, Ramsey encouraged his audience nonetheless to seek ways to serve those in the military or veterans of the past, such as volunteering to serve homeless veterans in a shelter, or having lunch with someone whose spouse or loved one is serving overseas. Whether or not one’s actions serve veterans specifically, Ramsey emphasized, “Choose to serve a cause greater than yourself. We must live out the ideals our veterans daily defend.”

Ramsey quoted Frank Buckles, the 109-year-old last living veteran of World War I, who once said the secret to his longevity is, “hope.”

Ramsey encouraged the audience to “keep (Culver’s) ideals of service and sacrifice...leave today with hope for the future.”

Vietnam and Senegal, such as poverty-stricken people using American refuse to make homes and other amenities many take for granted. He noted America is also “first on the scene” across the world at natural disasters such as recently in Haiti, Indonesia, and Pakistan.

“Who went to their aid? The United States of America, with all the supplies and medicine we could take there. And who was there to deliver it? The US military forces...over the world, our military forces are on the frontlines to help give the help (people) need. Our soldiers have been on the front lines of battle.”

Hiatt described the sacrifices of American soldiers in the Revolutionary and Civil Wars, and pointed out Americans “didn’t just sit at home and watch people fight” during World Wars I and II, but sent military forces “not just for our country but for other people as well.”

He also described more recent conflicts, pointing out that hundreds of thousands of troops deployed today “every day face death. Some are not coming home. Some will not be home to see the birth of their children. While we sit down and eat Thanksgiving dinner, celebrate Christmas, and watch football games at New Years, they are over there putting their lives on the line.”

Hiatt then led the students in a chant of “USA!” and asked them to applaud the veterans present at the event, represented most visibly by members of Culver’s VFW and Monterey’s American Legion Posts, who opened and closed the ceremony with a combined Color Guard. What followed was a standing ovation by students, faculty, and attendees, punctuated by shouts of, “Thank you!” directed at veterans.

Student speakers also explained that CCHS students will be creating holiday cards with encouraging messages for overseas-deployed members of Indiana’s National Guard, in the coming weeks.

Included in the event were student presentations on the meaning of Veteran’s Day, a musical salute to each branch of America’s Armed Forces by the CCHS band (under the direction of Jason Crittendon), and the playing of “Taps” by student trumpeters.

types, since another of the school’s basketball coaches has battled breast cancer and remains at a high risk to obtain the disease again in the future.

After a conversation with Juliana Newbill, the area American Cancer Representative, Alexis says her gears began turning in how to attract more students to the game, engage the community, and find sponsors to help raise funds. She’s spoken to the CMA pep band, the basketball cheerleaders, area media, and local businesses towards that end as well, and with good response so far.

In addition to encounters with the ravages of cancer through friends’ experiences, Christlieb was also inspired by Culver’s Relay for Life, which began three years ago.

“Last year I was a team captain (at Relay),” she says. “It was such a great experience and really touching...especially the Luminaria part where the football field lights are turned off and you crack a glow stick depending on how close to you someone is that has been diagnosed...I am always shocked to see how many people crack them.

“Then as you walk around the track, people put their glow sticks in paper bags that have been decorated by families that have been affected by cancer. Watching families stand beside their paper bags and reading bags that say things like, ‘We love you Grandpa; we’ll see you in heaven,’ brings tears to my eyes every year.”

Christlieb stresses that funds raised will go directly to the American Cancer Society, but that the benefits of the event affect everyone.

“Cancer has affected every community in a different way,” she says. “Fighting cancer is a communal effort, and through cooperation, collaboration, and teamwork, cancer can be eliminated. I greatly admire what the American Cancer Society and Relay has done for cancer patients everywhere and I hope that through hope, prayer, and hard work, cancer will be removed as a serious health problem.”

People can participate by purchasing a Wall of Hope Donation card, or making a donation of their choice, by contacting Christlieb via 574-842-7032 or at Alexis Christlieb, 1300 Academy Road, Culver, IN 46511.

1 Corinthians 12:12-31a
Luke 4:14-21
When I coached lacrosse, they used to have this mercy rule in Ohio. If one team got ahead by ten points, they would not stop the clock. This would speed up the game, and it would prevent horrible scores from mismatched teams. In lacrosse, once you are ten points up, anything more is almost unsportsmanlike in my mind. In Indiana, we did not have a mercy rule like this, and so I had to have my own strategy.
Once the score got lopsided in our favor, I would run plays and place seniors so people would feed them the ball. Even guys who aren’t very good deserve to make a goal or two when they are seniors just for sticking it out and contributing in other ways. Sometimes people who play defense want to trade positions and play offense for a change.
I think that in general, we have a tendency to envy people who are not like us. Guys who play defense want to play offense just by nature. People who are engineers imagine they could have happy lives as teachers. There are a lot of “what if’s” in our lives. Things happen. We come to a fork in the road, and in the words of Yogi Berra, we take it.
When we were swapping positions on the lacrosse team, the point was to be inefficient. It was a game after all, and we were having a good time and trying to be good sports. Think about our work as member of the Body of Christ though, and we have a responsibility to our brothers and sisters. If we try to play outside our position there and mess up the balance, we make it less likely that we are working for the kingdom.
It might be fun to be a prophet, but if that is not where your gifts lie, you are not going to be very good. The Scriptures tell us that “God arranged the members in the body, each one of them, as he chose.” There is intentionality here, and it is not just Coach Haynes saying you don’t belong on offense. This is God’s plan, and we need to discern His will for us.
God has a plan for each of us, and the challenge is to discern that plan when the stakes are so very high. How many of us want to play God? This is not a game. This is a serious as anything gets. We need to discern God’s will and do it. We need to appreciate the fact that the Body of Christ has many parts. “...there are many members, yet one body.”
The challenge of course is discerning God’s plan, and that is the assignment I am giving you. Prayerfully consider your gifts and the opportunities for ministry you have. Look for the places the Holy Spirit is moving in your life. Grace happens!
Blessings to each of you from St. Elizabeth’s!

CCHS' Zehner signs

Culver Community High School senior Gwen Zehner, of Monterey, is seen here last week with family and coaches signing to play basketball with the University of Illinois Springfield, who she says spotted her while playing for Indiana's Finest Mutual Athletic Association girls' basketball team last summer at Noblesville (the team is a statewide endeavor to prepare high school players with goals of Division I, Division II, or collegiate level basketball play). Noting she plans to study Psychology at school, Zehner says she's looking forward to the opportunity to begin playing her freshman year (though she added she was mostly ready for her CCHS game that evening!).

A member of the CCHS varsity team since her freshman year, Zehner thanked Indiana's Finest coach Mike Duke, as well as her parents "for letting me play basketball all summer instead of working a lot!"

"I think it's great," said CCHS Girls Basketball Coach Tony Scheub. "This is an awesome, fun, exciting time for her. She's had a couple other offers, so this was a hard choice, but now that she's made it, she can enjoy playing her senior year."

ready enacted spay and neuter ordinances, which have been very successful. She suggested a fund-raiser or similar endeavor, since she acknowledged spaying and neutering is "really costly."

In other discussion, audience member Harold Kuczwar asked the Council if a reduced speed limit could be considered for the area of State Road 10 near Tamarack Road and School Street, and heading to State Road 17. Noting he'd seen two Culver Academies students and -- in a separate incident -- a young jogger nearly hit by a vehicle in the area recently, Kuczwar asked if the town would consider lowering speeds there. Town Manager Michael Doss noted the road is out of the town's jurisdiction, being a state road, but said he would contact the Indiana Department of Transportation to investigate the possibility.

The Council passed ordinance 2010-007, a long-discussed revision to Culver's zoning ordinances. Council member Lynn Overmyer asked if the vote should be delayed in the absence of fellow members Sally Ricciardi and Ginny Munroe, though remaining members Ed Pinder and Ralph Winters said they had no problem moving ahead with the vote, and Culver Building Inspector Russ Mason said language had been removed at Ricciardi's suggestion, so there was no need for further delay.

Permits are being submitted by Mike Strang of the Bonar Group/GAI for work on Lake Maxinkuckee's outlet on West Shore Drive, following several months of planning and negotiations towards the work. Meanwhile, Doss suggested representatives of the town and Marshall County should meet to hammer out who will take responsibility for which portions of the work, adding an easement should also be sought for a property owner along the outlet on whose land some of the work will have to be done.

Audience member Doris Breyfogle emphasized concern over many residents' raking of leaves into the streets, which can cause clogging of town storm sewers. Audience member Leroy Bean, however, said if leaves aren't picked up within a certain time frame, grass may die beneath longstanding lead piles, and if leaves are picked up by a town backhoe, damage is done to residents' terraces. Town Clerk Casey Howard re-emphasized the need to keep leaves out of streets to prevent clogging issues.

The Council approved $1,655.86 in parts for Culver's four snow plows to prepare them for this winter. He also noted the town's leaf truck has been down, but would be repaired within the next day or two.

Town attorney Jim Clevenger asked the Council to look over a draft of an open container ordinance he created in response to a request at the last meeting.

Winters stressed the need for residents to wear bicycle helmets, especially when children are riding, noting he's seen several parents and children riding without helmets in recent weeks and months.

Making beautiful music at St. Mary's

Parishioners at St. Mary of the Lake Catholic Church in Culver enjoyed a musical treat recently when members of the Culver Academies choir -- under the direction of Stacey Warren, pictured directing above, with back to the camera -- paid the church a visit for its Sunday, 11 a.m. service. The choir joined with church members in all of the hymnal offerings of the Mass, and delighted attendees with a solo hymn following Communion.

The choir can be heard again by the public on December 12 as part of the Academies' annual Christmas Vespers service in the Memorial Chapel on campus, as well as at the Walnut Church of the Brethren in Argos on Sunday, January 16.

New swings at Culver park

Children headed to the east pavilion of Culver's town park will now have some additional options for fun, as this set of swings was recently installed, a project Park Director Kelly Young and the Culver Parks and Recreation board had discussed earlier this year as planned to accompany the Vandalia Village community-built playground already existing in the area.

"The addition of the swings on the east end of the park are part of our ongoing capital improvement projects that we have each year," Young told the Citizen. "Other capital improvement projects for this year include the repaving of the driveway, the installation of some new fencing, and the addition of the swings. All of these projects have enhanced the park in some way."

Leaf pickup info

The town of Culver reminds residents during this leaf pick-up season to please leave raked leaves in their yards and not in the streets (to avoid repeated problems with clogged storm sewers). It should also be noted that street crews work from one end of town to the other and repeat as necessary, so if your leaves have not been picked up, they will be as crews return to your area. A tarp may be used, if deemed necessary, to prevent raked leaves from blowing away in the meantime. Leaf pick-up will continue this season until pickup is completed as long as possible into the season. Residents are also reminded to make separate piles for leaves and brush. Brush pickup in Culver takes place during the third week of each month only.

CBGC, Dollar General partner for reading grant

Educators, mentors and parents are putting an extra emphasis on literacy skills to help America’s youth beat the odds and graduate.

With generous support from the Dollar General Literacy Foundation, the Boys & Girls Clubs of America (BGCA) has teamed up with Developmental Studies Center to implement After School KidzLit, a proven reading enrichment program for young people in grades K-8.

The Culver Boys & Girls Club (CBGC) is one of the organizations across the country selected by the BGCA to benefit from essential after-school educational assistance that emphasizes literacy. The Club is receiving a $5,500 program implementation grant and an AfterSchool KidzLit kit, including grade- and age-appropriate books and leader’s guides which will be utilized when the program is implemented at all Club locations. In August, program staff from the Culver Club joined representatives in Atlanta for an intensive training led by instructors for the Developmental Studies Center.

“It will be a great opportunity for our program staff to learn first-hand the key components of the program and to share ideas with staff of other Clubs who will be implementing the program,” said, Steve Beekman, Director of Operations for the CBGC. “We are extremely excited about the difference this program will have on our community. It has the potential to make a positive impact on the young people we serve by increasing their appreciation for and enjoyment of high-quality children’s literature.”

Studies have shown that quality after-school programs result in long-term, life-changing lessons, including improved social skills, increased academic performance and a more positive attitude toward learning The AfterSchool KidzLit approach is one where youngsters hear and read stories filled with relevant, multicultural characters, settings and issues. It helps them to think and speak about crucial social and ethical values.

KidzLit’s primary activity is reading, but it also includes discussions and other fun, interactive activities through which participating young people explore more deeply the themes and content of the books and gain a better understanding of themselves and others.

Children interested in joining the Club and learning more about KidzLit or other youth programs are encouraged to visit the Club located inside Culver Elementary School, 401 School Street or call 574-250-0103.

Culver’s DaMore places third in national race

Culver sailor Becky DaMore, of the east shore (not to be confused with another local Becky Damore, of the Original Root Beer Stand family) was part of a team taking third place in the prestigious Rolex Osprey Cup held in St. Petersburg, Florida over the week-end of October 23. The four-day regatta, which was first organized in 1996 to expand the opportunities for women sailors to compete in match racing, has committed since 2007 to a women’s match race medal in the Olympics.

DaMore's team included Katy Lovell (New Orleans), Kaity Storck (Huntington, N.Y.), and Lyndsey Gibbons-Neff (Rosemont, Penn.). The team was the only one to beat the first-place team -- led by Genevieve Tulloch of San Francisco -- during the round-robin series at the start of the semi-finals. Lack of sufficient winds cut the second round-robin short, but on the final day of the race, October 23, four races made up the semi-finals, leading into five races in the first-to-win three final races which determined a winner.

Coming in second was a team led by Giulia Conti. More details on the race, and photos, may be found online at www.spyc.org.

Garner discusses Wythougan, AHS award, preservation

Antiquarian & Historical Society of Culver given McDonald Heritage award

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen editor

The Marshall County-based Wythougan Valley Preservation Council presented the Antiquarian and Historical Society of Culver its Heritage Award October 15 for the Society’s work in the Culver community, and Council President Kurt Garner was in Culver recently, addressing Culver’s Kiwanis Club about the Council’s work and mission throughout the county.

Wythougan -- whose name derives from the Potawatomie Indian word for the Yellow River -- was formed in 1999 originally around the preservation of the Garn house in Plymouth, though since then it has been involved in a number of restoration and preservation projects around the county. Most areas of Marshall County, including Culver and Union Township, are represented on Wythougan’s board, and the Council is a member of the Marshall County Historical Society and an affiliate member of Indiana Landmarks.

The Council’s status as a county-wide entity, said Garner, recently “shocked some Culver folks” who previously thought the group was a Plymouth-only organization, an impression Garner hopes to correct not only in Culver, but elsewhere in the county as well.

Discussing the Council’s Daniel McDonald Heritage Awards (named for late state Senator and Marshall County historian -- and Lake Maxinkuckee resident -- Daniel McDonald), Garner said the festivities would include a tour of Wythougan projects and a dinner event. The Antiquarian and Historical Society of Culver, he said, would receive one of two awards given that evening to entities who weren’t necessarily involved in preservation projects per se, but are “involved in celebrating the history of their community,” something the Wythougan board concluded was important to recognize. The other award would go to those who reopened a historic grocery store in Tyner, dubbed the “Tyner Dyner,” for its rehabilitation and reuse.

Garner told the Citizen Wythougan’s annual meeting included election of officers, new board members, and adoption of the annual budget, as well as awarding of five Daniel McDonald Heritage Awards. In addition the Antiquarian Society and Tyner Dyner, these included Mike Umbaugh for his restoration of the Simons Building in Plymouth, the Marshall County Historical Society for their expansion and restoration of downtown Plymouth buildings, and St. Thomas Episcopal Church for their 150th anniversary and dedication to their historic campus. Wythougan projects since the organization’s formation and following the 1900 Kate Garn house on South Michigan Street in Plymouth, according to Garner, have included the 2002 restoration and rededication of Summit Chapel-School (c.1860) in Tippecanoe Township (one of the highest points in Marshall County); and the 2008 restoration and rededicated of the 1861 Jacoby Church.

“In the latter two projects we worked with the township trustees and local communities to make the projects a success,” explained Garner, “as well as applying for a few small grants including two from the Marshall County Community Foundation. We use both...for programs and field trips, and even a wedding this summer at Jacoby.”

Wythougan was also responsible for the September 11th Memorial at the Marshall County courthouse, several national register nominations, and the 100th Anniversary rededication ceremony of the Chief Menominee Memorial. That Memorial has been moving towards official recognition on the National Register of Historic Places as well. Garner told the Culver Kiwanians that Wythougan includes around 30 members, though it has had 50 to 60 members in the past.

“We usually get a bump in membership when we go out and target a project,” he said. “Somebody’s grandmother went to Jacoby church or something like that...and people will get active.”

He also noted the group has “a fairly diverse amount of expertise among our members for projects,” though Historic Preservation Fund grants often require restoration work be bid out. Sometimes Wythougan benefits from donated labor, and in some cases work is paid.

One important current Wythougan activity, Garner told the Citizen, is its fund-raising campaign to match a the country.”

Meantime, Garner told Culver Kiwanians there are some Culver-area restoration-preservation projects being discussed, and his main message for the Culver community is to “understand that we’re here for you. That doesn’t mean we have giant coffers of cash to hand out, but we will make something happen if we can.”
