Leiters W.S.C.S. Turns From Business To Pleasure to Surprise, Honor Hostess

At the home of Mrs. Myrta Luckenbill, Leiters Ford, Tuesday afternoon, August 22nd convened a group of ladies to outline the yearly program of W. S. C. S. of the Methodist Church.

Via grapevine, it leaked out the hostess was celebrating a birthday, well past three score mark, and after the business session, the kitchen was taken over by Mrs. Jesse Williams, a sister-in-law and a real tea party followed.

A beautiful bouquet of glad-ties was on the serving table from the rural garden of Mrs. Leata Young. Three beautifully decorated cakes and a plate of cookies arrived from neighbors, Mrs. Fred Carter, Mrs. Jane Kistler, Mrs. Florence Murfitt and Mrs. J. D. bill.

Ladies present were Mesdames Willis Cripe, George Vance, Omer Reichard, Glen Johnson, Fred Stayton, Robert Merkert, Emerson. Reichard, Charley Murfitt, Jane Kistler, Bruce Corbin, Marion Taylor, Jesse Williams and the honored guest, Mrs. Luckenbill.

The confusion aroused the interest of Mr. Raymond Williams invalid father nearing his 95th birthday, but when they advised him the ladies were tearing carpet rags, he laughed and gently rocked on in his room where he had been confined for the past ten months.

Ladies present were Mesdames Willis Cripe, George Vance, Omer Reichard, Glen Johnson, Fred Stayton, Robert Merkert, Emerson. Reichard, Charley Murfitt, Jane Kistler, Bruce Corbin, Marion Taylor, Jesse Williams and the honored guest, Mrs. Luckenbill.

To be eligible for this trip the boy or girl had to attend a certain per cent of their work meetings; participate in the program when asked; cooperate with the leaders and complete their project. They ate their noon meal at the YMCA and went through the building where many enjoyed recreational games.

Open House Marks Opening of New Catholic Rectory

The newly completed St. Mary's of the Lake Rectory was visited by more than 400 persons on Sunday when a delightfully arranged open house marked the opening of the lovely residence on College Avenue.

An international smorgasbord luncheon was served continuously for the guests who visited the Rectory between noon and 3 p. m. Visiting guests from a wide area were greeted by Reverend Joseph Lenk, pastor of the Church. After registering, guests were conducted on an inspection tour of the dwelling with its separate apartments for the pastor's office and maid's apartment.

The spacious basement was the setting where dinner was served. An attractive feature of the serving table was a large four-layer cake with a miniature church. C. R. Hoffmeister and Robert Kyle supervised the serving of the food in cooperation with the members of the Holy Name Society and the Altar-Rosary Society. Mrs. Robert Kyle and Joe Ritchie headed the committees for the dinner arrangement and serving. Roy Watts, Harold and Wallace Scott assisted in serving.

Furniture for the Rectory was obtained through Radigan and Sons, Gary, Ind., while the interior decoration was supplied by Osterbann and Son of Chicago, Ill.

The new Rectory was completed in record time. Ground was broken for the well planned building in June and construction work was far enough along to permit Rev. Lenk to take up his residence there on August 14. C. L. Cultice was the contractor in charge of construction.

Birth Announcement

Willard Snapp Takes Bride

Miss Emily Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall of Kokomo, and Willard Snapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Snapp of Culver, R. R. 2, were married at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Grace Methodist Church in Kokomo, in a candlelight ceremony. Rev. Thurman B. Morris read the double ring ceremony before an altar banked with palms and with large baskets of yellow glads and lighted tapers used throughout the church.

David Drinkwater, organist, and Mrs. Nancy Carothers Back of Kokomo, vocalist, furnished the nuptial music preceding and during the ceremony.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a white satin gown fashioned with a net yoke, long sleeves and a hoop skirt which fell into a long train. Her finger-tip veil of tulle fell from a white satin bonnet. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis centered with a white orchid.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Thomas Vouts of Bloomington, and the bridesmaids, Miss Jeanne Whallon of Bloomington, and Miss Charlene Ferguson of Westport, all wore identical gowns of light blue marquisette, a halo of blue net, and carried bouquets of yellow roses.

Best man was Thomas Vouts of Bloomington, and the ushers were Adrian Snapp, brother of the bridegroom, and Charles McKinney, both of Culver, and Charles Zollman of Walton.

A reception for 250 guests was held in the social rooms of the church following the wedding. The bride's colors of yellow and blue were used throughout the decorations. Two refreshment tables were beautifully laid with white cloths with white organdy flounces and with small blue and yellow bows attached. The tables were edged with English ivy. The four-tiered wedding cake was decorated with yellow rose buds and outlined around the edge with yellow roses and myrtle.

Assisting with the serving were Lucinda Matthews, Patty Morrison, Mary Ellen Ehrman, all of Kokomo. The couple left for a wedding trip to Colorado and after September 20 will be at home in Bloomington where he will continue work on his Master's degree. Both Mr. and Mrs. Snapp are graduates of Indiana University.

Fifty Persons Attend County Sunday School Picnic At Plymouth

Rev. Dwight McClure of Tyner, led in prayer before the fifty persons present who partook of the delicious dinner at the County Sunday School picnic held in Centennial Park, Plymouth, August 27. The Rev. V. L. Palmer, Bremen, president of the County Council of Christian Education, called the afternoon meeting to order.

Rev. R. Richmond Blake, Plymouth, dean of the Marshall County School of Christian Service, which will be held this fall in Plymouth, announced that the tentative dates are from September 27 to October 25 with one meeting each week. It will be held in the E. U. B. Church. More detailed information will be mailed this week to the pastors and superintendents. Harold Pifer, Plymouth, president of the County Council of Churches, explained briefly of that phase of religious work in the county.

Dr. John J. Haramy, Indianapolis, president of Indiana Council of Churches, chose, "Faith of Our Fathers" as the theme thought for his splendid address. "When a peoples forgets God it will perish, we should bless and not brag" quoted Dr. Haramy.

Three points stressed in his talk were (1) we need humility, (2) we must avoid being sham Christians and (3) we must have faith, living faith, the real faith, the dynamic faith as did our forefathers. He closed with this statement, "God has the last word." The meeting closed with prayer by Rev. Ivan R. Woods, Plymouth.

Sons of W. Rankin Achieve Distinction in Two Fields

R. C. Rankin and Walton W. Rankin, sons of William W. Rankin, long time Lake resident here, have achieved national distinction in their respective fields of industry and religious work.

Walton Rankin, who resides in Swarthmore, Pa., has been closely identified with the splendid national development of the interpretation of the Presbyterian Church. Rev. Rankin is manager of the publicity department of the Office of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

As the head of the public relations division of the church he is responsible for the press relations of the General Assembly. He also supervises the issuance of press releases, publicity material and public information for individual churches, as well as organizations and agencies of the church at large.

In addition to his other duties he edits "Monday Morning," a weekly magazine of the pastors of the Presbyterian Church and publishes Presbyterian Interdenominational News, a news sheet devoted to the church activities and in furthering the work of co-operating Protestantism.

R. C. Rankin is chief industrial engineer, Castings Division, of the Aluminum Company of America. His address "Balancing Loads and Incentives on Group Activity" was one of the featured talks at the Fifth Annual Time Study and Methods Conference, jointly sponsored by the Society for Advancement and Management and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

WIRE COATINGS INCREASE FENCE LIFETIME

The kind and amount of coating on wire fencing and other wire products definitely affect their lasting qualities, say Purdue University Agricultural engineers.

Wire samples coated with zinc at the rate of 0.6 ounce per square foot have rusted over 100 per cent of the area in a 12-year test. But wire coated with 1.7 ounces of zinc per square foot shows no rusting for the same period. This wire is still gray in color after 12 years of exposure to the elements.

Copper coated wires still have their greenish - brown natural color and show no signs of rust for the dozen-year experiment. Less than 19 per cent of the surface of lead coated wire samples show red rust, with an average of 8 per cent. Also, 72 per cent of these same lead samples show pinhole rusting.

I. D. Mayer, agricultural engineer, and C. W. Warwick of the American Society for Testing Materials are conducting the tests. They disclose that zinc coated farm fences follow a corrosion pattern similar to that of the wire samples. A difference is that the upper part of the zinc coated fencing rusts more than the bottom part. The specialists believe this is because weeds and grass protect the lower part of farm fences.

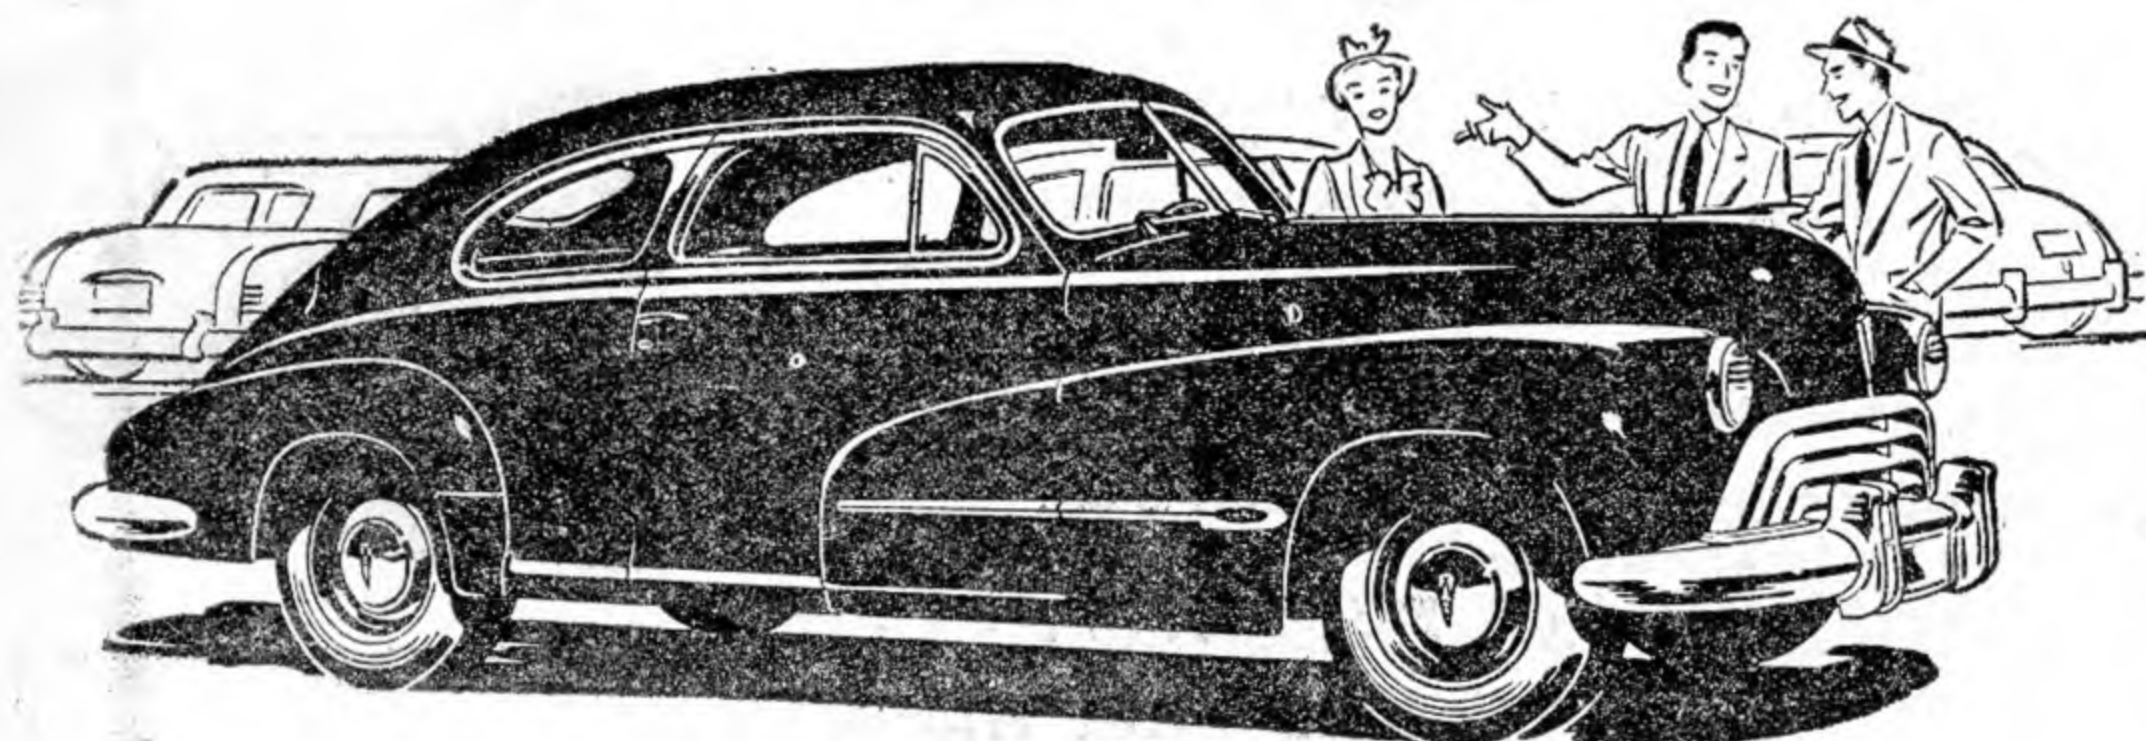

WEATHER FAVORS TOMATO DISEASES

June rainfall, humidities and temperatures were very favorable for the development of several leaf diseases and fruit rots of tomatoes throughout Indiana. The effects of this weather on disease development appeared in late July according to Purdue University plant pathologists.

Dry weather during August and September may check these diseases sufficiently to permit good tomato yields yet this season. They could have been partially controlled by thorough spray or dust applications, at the rate of 200 gallons of spray or 50 or 60 pounds of dust per acre. Spray and dust materials designed for control of tomato diseases are available from some farm stores. Directions for their use are on the packages. Most canning companies and all county agents have been provided with detailed information on spraying and dusting for control of these tomato diseases. Issues of the Indiana Plant Disease Reporter, describing the use of these materials are available from Purdue.

Grassland Farm, Well Managed, Doubles Production

Good pasture management of grassland farming resulted in doubling beef production per acre on the Purdue-Miller farm near Upland, Ind., it was revealed at the recent field day there by Dr. G. O. Mott, Purdue University specialist. In 1949 beef production amounted to 165 pounds per acre. Adding lime, phosphorus, potash and nitrogen increased production to 339 pounds per acre on rotation grazing and to 387 pounds per acre with deferred summer grazing. Mott explained rotation pasture mixes last year showed best production from alfalfa and timothy but danger of winter killing lessened effectiveness of alfalfa. Second best gain was on a mixture of ladino and brome grass, shown in the lower photo above. One particularly good plot on the farm was the birdsfoot trefoil-bluegrass mixture, shown in the top photograph. As pointed out at the field day by Dr. D. R. Dodd, pasture specialist at Ohio State University, grassland farming well managed boosts farm income, economy of livestock feeding and preserves and builds soil fertility.

Back Road Auto Tours Lured Hoosier Doctor On Winter Visits To Arizona

Blaine Adams, former Culver resident, sends along a clipping from a Phoenix, Arizona, newspaper telling of the late Dr. A. J. Kelsey, of Monterey, who with his family spent many winters in the Southwest. It will be of particular interest to the many friends of Dr. Kelsey and it will also be of interest to all those who love to travel. In his column titled "Arizona Days and Ways," Roscoe G. Willson tells of his association with Dr. Kelsey and of the Monterey physician's interest in out-of-the-way auto tours.

Many persons who came to Arizona for the winter are so charmed with it that they become habitués, as it were—they keep coming back winter after winter.

Among the many lovers of Arizona was Dr. A. J. Kelsey, of Monterey, Ind., who began wintering here some 12 to 15 years ago.

As winter followed winter, in their annual trek to the desert country, the doctor came to feel that he was as much Arizonan as Indianan, bought a home in Phoenix and had his youngest daughter attend school here.

To know something of the state, Dr. Kelsey began several years ago to study the road maps and to make one day trips into the out-of-the-way places.

Two or three years ago he contacted me to tell him about interesting trips to take. Thus, I have made eight trips into various parts of the state with Doc.

I found that Doc had covered many off-the-beaten-path roads around Phoenix, so that it was necessary to find passable routes he had not already covered.

He did not like to come right out and ask me to spend a day taking him through country new to him, in consequence of which he developed a somewhat oblique approach.

"That Bloody Basin country must be interesting," he would say. "They tell me the road through there is in pretty good shape now."

So we took the Bloody Basin trip, saw beautiful Seven Springs and wound and twisted up the western rim of the bowl.

Sometime later Doc. said: "Where's a good place to go for a desert picnic?"

I said: "Ever been west of the Hassayampa, around Tonopah hot wells, or over in the Centennial valley?"

He never had, so we drove out there, saw the hot well resort, the Big Horn, the Saddle and the Eagle Tail mountains and the immense, unpeopled Centennial valley and came home via Winter's Well and Hassayampa station.

"That certainly is a big country, and those fantastic mountains really fill the eye," commented Doc. He was interested in everything; how the barrel cactus almost always leans to the south, that the mesquite trees sometimes had two and even three crops of beans in a year, how the Indians used the heart of the agave (mescal) for food.

The crucifixion, the elephant, the smoke trees, the giant cactus, the big, black, burnt mountains and the queer shaped peaks made Arizona a dream land to him.

Doc could never get enough of it. "There's something out here that gets a fellow," he said. "Raw, stark, dry and desolate, but the limitlessness and fantasy of the whole thing just pulls on a man's heart strings."

My diary of April 15, 1950, reads: "Kelsey plans trip to Palm canyon and wants me to go."

At 7 a. m. April 17, we left, with Doc driving, for Palm canyon. We took the Salome cutoff, through the Centennial valley and drove across the desert to the Ramsey silver mine. We ate lunch there, and drove on to Quartzsite and south to the mouth of Palm canyon, where the one-half-mile foot train starts.

I had warned Doc that the trail was a tough one, and knowing he was favoring his heart, insisted on his taking it easy. We made it up into the slot, all right, from which the palms spread up-gulch before us, took a good rest and returned to the car.

We drove on south toward Yuma, stopping to pick up a few pieces of petrified ironwood, and drove into Yuma to spend the night.

The next day we drove south through Somerton to the Mexican sand dune town of San Luis, then drove back to Phoenix via Gila Bend.

Doc thought it was a great trip. He got P. O. cancellations everywhere. It was a hobby of his. I have a few stamped envelopes in my car pocket now, addressed to Dr. A. J. Kelsey, Phoenix. I have sent in several from out of the way places like Bagdad and Yava, Clifton, Morenci, Alpine and Nutrioso.

I will send in no more of them. Doc and his wife left June 5 to spend the summer in Indiana, and just the other day back in Indiana Doc's heart ceased beating.

My loss is nothing compared to that of the Kelsey family, but just the same Doc's going hit me below the belt—it hurts.

(Since writing the foregoing I received a letter from Doc, dated the day before his death, in which he referred to plans for next winter's trips. "I am anxious to get back there," he wrote. "It can't be too soon.")

"SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

No sharp increase in production of defense materials for present or possible future fighting fronts, is expected until the fight in Washington is resolved. The proposed "Defense Production Act of 1950" is being subjected to bitter attacks; will be subjected to many more both in the cloakrooms and on the floors of Congress.

Monopolist lobbyists were taken by surprise. Before any emergency arose a mobilization plan was drafted. It provided many comfortable features for monopolies. Among them were such items as immediate suspension of all anti-trust laws, on the excuse that allocation of materials would make this necessary. The underlying motive was to insure that competitive bidding for government defense contracts would not result in true competitive prices. And, of course, there was the thought that temporary suspension of anti-trust laws might attain permanence.

The bill now before Congress, therefore, has given monopoly lobbyists a stiff jolt. They are committing their reserves to the battle. Their success or failure will depend largely on how well and rapidly an organized counter-assault can be mounted by small businessmen.

The bill now states "it is the sense of Congress that small business enterprises be encouraged to make the greatest possible contribution toward achieving the objectives of this Act." The measure then provides that small business be kept informed of the needs; that small and medium business be given fair representation on the business advisory committee; and that necessary exemptions may be made from any part of the act to aid small business.

©National Federation of Independent Business

Monopoly lobbyists would be content to let this language remain, because unsupported, it is merely language. They know that small business also has small capitalization, and it requires immediate cash reserves to compete with monopolies for contracts.

But this same bill also provides machinery for the government to make loans, participate in loans, or guarantee loans to small business for production expansion. Furthermore it provides that government financial assistance may be given only when it is not otherwise available on reasonable terms. And as everyone knows, monopolies cannot show they are unable to obtain reasonable loans. The total loans outstanding at any one time would be limited to two billion dollars.

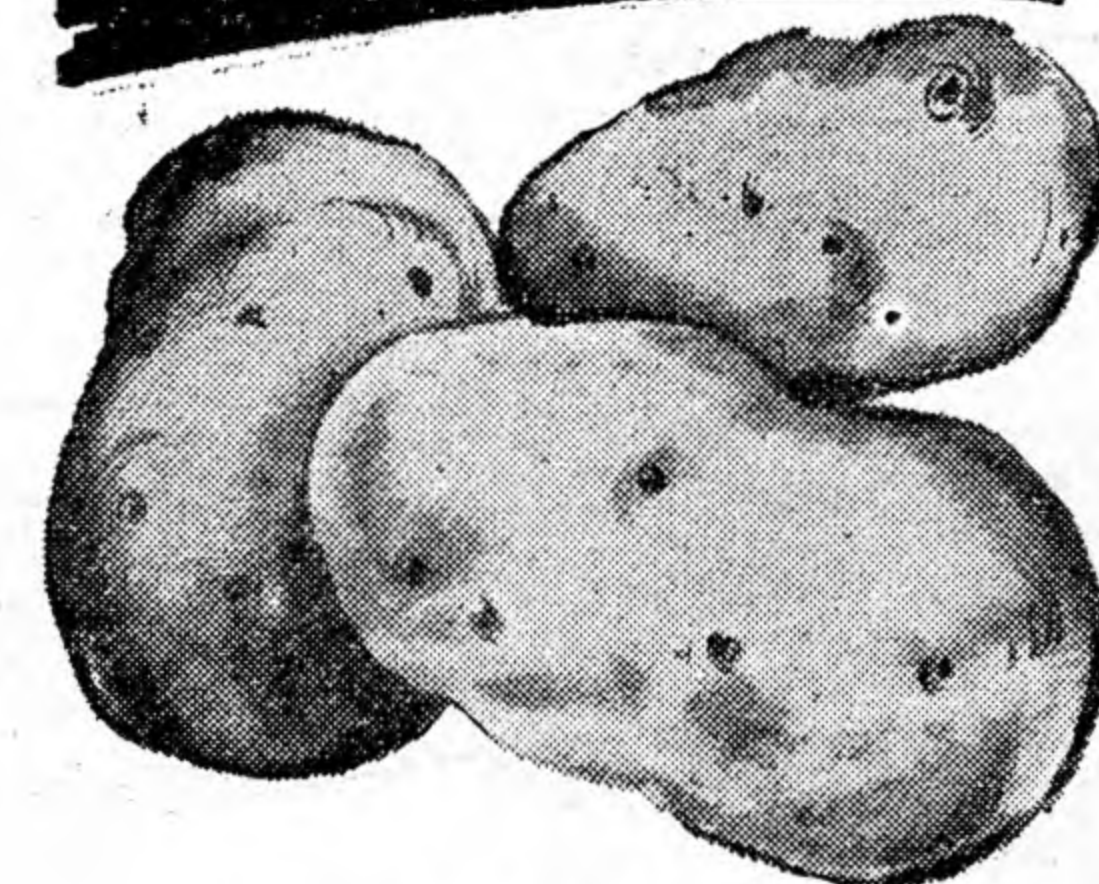

The fight promises to be bitter. If enough pressure is exerted by small business, especially by small manufacturers, the bill can go through as set up. This would result in healthy local pay-rolls, with subsequently healthy local business, widely distributed over the entire nation. There are many reasons why supporters of the bill want it passed.

For one thing they say it would keep small business, the backbone of the national economy, from being destroyed in the emergency. It would also insure widespread distribution of national production so no single atomic bomb blast could knock out the country. It would also prevent again the migration of workers to a few overcrowded centers where inadequate shelter and transportation breeds disease; unhealthy social conditions.

"Golden Boy" Final Play of Season Now at Playhouse

The Maxinkuckee Playhouse is now in its tenth and final week of the current season with Clifford Odets' famous play "Golden Boy" on the stage through Sunday. After Sunday's performance the curtains will close until June 26 when the Playhouse will open its second season.

"Golden Boy" is, in the words of the directors at the Playhouse, "truly one of the finest plays included on our bill this year." The play opened on Broadway, where it ran for a number of years before it was bought by the movies and produced for the screen. It is an exciting story of a talented musician who, blinded by his lust for money, turns to the boxing ring to become wealthy.

His success is unlimited, and overnight he rises to become champion of his class, only to find that his new kind of life is not what he had dreamed of. The climax is reached when he accidentally kills his opponent in the ring; his family turns against him, his reputation is marred, and in a frenzy of desperation he tries to escape from the ugly world he has created. How he accomplishes this in the face of threatened disgrace by his manager is a fine piece of writing in a fine play.

In this last play of the season, the audience will see two "firsts" on the stage at the Playhouse. For the first time this year a unit set will be used, where three different acting areas will be used at different times, the transition being accomplished by lighting effects.

The second "first" will be a new actor to the stage, although he has been seen around the Playhouse all summer. Mr. Heinz Pabst, who has served as advisor and dramatic coach to the cast, will be seen in the very important role of Mr. Bonaparte, father of the boxer. Although Mr. Pabst has never been seen on an American stage, he is extremely well-known in Germany, where he owned and operated his own theater in Dresden. Others in the cast include Dick Simmons, Vica Messham, Paul Laumann, and Herb Johnson.

Tickets for this last play of the season are now on sale, and reservations may be made by phoning the Playhouse, Culver 203. All seats in the theater are reserved, and the curtain rises every night at 8:30.

Huge Crowd Views Western Riders Horse Show

A large crowd attended the Western Riders Horse Show at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Crum on Sunday, August 27. Forty-two horses and riders were entered to initiate the new show ring and kept the spectators on their toes as they put their horses through the various events.

Music was furnished by the Three Musketeers, Emil Krull, Julius Mitchell of Culver and Dewey Anderson of Knox, and the sound car by Mr. Richardson of West High. Ced White, owner and manager of the Lightning Dude Ranch of Bass Lake served as the announcer keeping the spectators well informed of that which took place in the ring.

Good judging was done by Carl Newcomb of Rochester and Harold Walters of Akron. Albert Jenkins of Hibbard served as ring master. The Ladies Horseman's club was sponsored by Tibbetts Store of Burr Oak and Herman Gardner of Culver furnished the sprinkling system.

Jack Crum, acting host, was busy every minute in the show ring and Mrs. Crum led the parade on her sorrel mare, Dolly. After the four contestants placing in the parade class received their ribbons they were led around the track in their parade gait by Mrs. Crum, colors flying. The show was called at five o'clock because of rain.

Inside Bob Hope; or to Put It Another Way, Where There Is Hope There's Life

Editor's note: Bob Hope is the feature attraction in the Coliseum for the first four days of the 1950 Indiana State Fair opening tomorrow (Thursday, August 31).

It did not surprise me when the editor of The Citizen asked me to write an article on how I became such a brilliant success. First I'd like to point out that my family was very poor. Honestly, the mice used to bring stuff to us. I had a deal with them. One piece of cheese for every 10 traps I caught and sprung.

I remember one very hard winter. They cut off the lights, the gas, and the water. But we kept the telephone. As dad said, "I don't mind freezing, but we can't afford to miss out if they call us from 'Stop the Music.'"

At nine I visited my first saloon. My uncle wasn't there so in no time I'd been in my second saloon. I finally found him in the sixth saloon trying to sell them a television set. My uncle was always thirty years ahead of his time.

Then when I was eleven we moved into a log cabin outside of Cleveland, Ohio. We had a good home but dad insisted the log cabin background would help us kids if we ever decided to run for office.

My uncle helped me a lot with my education. He was a wizard with books. In fact he used to brag it would be a cold day in July before the bank examiners ever caught up with him. He was right. We had a cold day in July. Now I see him on visiting days.

Finally I told my father I wanted to leave home. I'll never forget it. He patted me on the head and told me that I'd go a long ways. And just to make sure he nailed the box car door shut.

I went to Chicago where I got my first break at an amateur night. Ah, that first dollar. I didn't spend it like some fellows would. No sir, I took that first dollar, put it in a little picture frame and wore it on my forehead.

It was about this time I met Mabel. She told me about Broadway and that I should go. Then one night I met her brother and I knew I should.

Then I began to get offers to go to Hollywood. The difficulty was that they all kept coming from people in New York. I decided to take Hollywood by storm.

I boldly told Paramount I was a new genius. They offered me a hundred dollars a week. So I ran around the block twice, came back and told them I was a used genius and they offered me five hundred.

I'll see many of you at the Coliseum beginning tomorrow for 4 days of the Indiana State Fair August 31 - Sept. 3. And I won't be entering the corn contest - it says here in awfully small print.

Farmer's Day at State Fair to Feature Recognition Service for 140 4-H Youths

A new feature in which approximately 140 youths will receive special awards in recognition of their long service in 4-H clubs throughout Indiana will highlight the colorful Farmers and Farm organization Day Thursday, September 7th at the Indiana State Fair.

In an announcement made today, Harold Taylor, State 4-H Club leader stated, "For the first time in history, we are recognizing the long and faithful service of these boys and girls from among the 73,200 4-H members throughout Indiana. This emphasis on tenure is designed to encourage the young people to remain longer in the important and healthy 4-H activity that is so valuable to the farm life in Indiana."

A boy and a girl from each of approximately 70 counties in the state will receive desk pens in recognition of having the longest service in their respective areas. Making the awards will be Larry Brandon, vice president of the Indiana Farm Bureau.

Award ceremonies will take place at approximately 9:00 a.m. (CST) in front of the grandstand and immediately preceding the Farmers Day Parade on the Race-track. This new event replaces the Agricultural Beauty Queen contest which formerly preceded the parade as a Farmer's Day highlight.

Lt. Gov. John A. Watkins will preside as master of ceremonies for the entire Farmer's Day program.

Marketing Loss Saved By Pre-Loading Care Say Purdue University

Indiana livestock carry relatively high price tags today as they arrive at various markets. Such a valuable product deserves proper handling at market times, says M. Paul Mitchell, agricultural economist at Purdue University.

For the best results, livestock intended for early marketing should be sorted a day or two before loading. Livestock that has been closely sorted for type, size and finish is attractive to buyers. Also, extra moving and handling of livestock before loading often leads to "crampiness" or weakened physical condition. The sorting job should be done as quietly as possible. Such handling will hold shrinkage to a minimum and reduce dangers of over-exertion.

As to the question of feeding stock before hauling, best results are usually obtained when little or no changes are made from normal feeding practices. If hogs will be on the road for more than an hour on the way to market, it is best not to feed the hogs at the farm but to wait and feed at the market, Mitchell advises.

In cases where hogs are to be fed at the market, they must be delivered early. The trip often tires fat hogs to the extent that they will not eat until rested. Therefore, hogs intended for distant markets should be delivered to those markets the evening before. Where nearby markets are used, however, a normal feed can be fed before loading for the market.

It is advised to withhold at least one grain feed before loading cattle. Cattle should be filled on the driest of hay available. Timothy hay is better than high protein hay such as alfalfa or clover. Excessive filling should be avoided. Withholding water is a doubtful practice since cattle often refuse to drink strange water at the market.

August is a good month to sow grass seed according to Purdue University horticulturists. A mixture of one-third redtop and two thirds Kentucky bluegrass will make a fine lawn.

Coffee in "tea bag" style has been perfected to keep both color and aroma. All that's needed is to drop a bag into boiling water, allow to stand a couple of minutes and there's the cup of coffee, leaving no grounds to throw away or pot to wash.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE MAXINKUCKEE PLAYERS

It was fully a year ago or perhaps longer when Paul Rutledge and Martin Tahse of Cincinnati first thought of furthering their mutual interest in drama by organizing and developing a summer theatre all of their own. As university students and earlier as prep school students, both had had wide experience in various character roles as well as experience in the various aspects of stage production. Each felt that there was a challenging opportunity in the development of a summer theatre here in the Middle West.

Armed with some highly individual ideas concerning the organization and conduct of a players group, a touch of idealism in the selection and presentation of plays, some practical thoughts along the line of business operation, together with a generous store of enthusiasm, the two aspiring producers started searching for a suitable location to establish their theatre.

Their search brought them to Lake Maxinkuckee, where Tahse had attended school at the Academy. Late in April their hopes began to take final shape as they exercised their option to purchase the Vacation Club property located along the East Shore Lane. At the same time they began drafting plans for converting the building into an appropriate theatre for their summer venture.

While there was some local interest, the public logically adopted a "wait-and-see" view of the undertaking. Problems of finance, assembling and providing for a top notch group of actors; housing; selection of, and payment of royalties on the high calibre plays which they were determined to present; meeting the requirements of the state fire marshal; securing a cook; planning and building stage sets; costumes; planning a program of publicity and interpretation; were all met, but not without difficulty.

In late June, Tahse and Rutledge were joined at the Playhouse, by a talented group of actors and actresses and their chaperons, Mr. and Mrs. Heinz Pabst, and the final link in bringing together the Maxinkuckee Players was effected. In a short while the Maxinkuckee Playhouse was a reality and on the evening of June 27, the group literally "broke-the-ice" as they pleased a large "first nighter" audience with their clever presentation of "Blithe Spirit."

From the opening of "Blithe Spirit" to the closing of the current popular play hit of "Golden Boy" on next Sunday evening the Players have achieved a not-soon-to-be-forgotten season here at Lake Maxinkuckee. Their plays have been well staged; each of the actors has ably carried their various stage roles; their efforts have attracted wide spread and favorable attention over a wide area; and the press and various individuals have lauded their efforts.

The Lake Side cottagers and the community as a whole are most appreciative of the outstanding achievement of this splendid organization during this, their first season. The high caliber of entertainment which they have produced has been a source of enjoyment for hundreds of patrons during the past few weeks. To Mr. Tahse and Mr. Rutledge and to each member of their organization we extend hearty congratulations. We are already looking forward to the opening night of the '51 season.

Your Life Insurance

Kathleen Norris, the novelist, said: "From birth to 18 a girl needs good parents. From 18 to 35 she needs good looks. From 35 to 55 she needs personality. From 55 on she needs cash."

That is why many women, both single and married, own life insurance. It gives them an increased feeling of financial security, now and for the years to come.

Last year about 70,000 women bought policies in the New York Life Insurance Company. Let me tell you about a policy adapted to your own particular needs.
