Making Monterey Merry

More bomb threats made at Culver Comm. Schools

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen editor

CULVER — Two more bomb threat-related incidents occupied the pre-Thanksgiving break week at Culver Community Schools, bringing the total to four within the space of the past two weeks.

A Culver Community Middle School student was identified as the author of a bomb threat written on the wall of a restroom in the middle school last Wednesday. School authorities, however, and Culver town marshal Wayne Bean don't believe that student was responsible for threats written in a similar manner the previous week, the first of which (also on a Wednesday) led to the evacuation of the school building and early cancellation of classes.

Culver Community Schools superintendent Dr. Vicki McGuire affirmed that the middle school student "is not necessarily the same person who did last week's. Possibly a copycat reaction."

McGuire added that the school "took action immediately and called officials."

Bean affirmed that the middle school matter is being handled as an internal issue by the school, and that police are still investigating the high school incidents, which also included a second threat, discovered after school hours on Thursday the 20th.

A third Culver Comm. High School incident was also reported to parents via the school's telephone messaging system, School Reach, after school hours last Wednesday. That threat was discovered after the middle school incident had already been addressed.

Bomb threats -- and in fact, threats written on restroom walls -- are not new to area schools. According to Bean, Winamac's high school received a similar written threat the week prior to Culver's, and that school had wrestled with multiple similar threats the previous school year. A similar threat was made at the high school in North Judson that school year as well.

It's generally assumed most such threats are unlikely to be serious, and may be seen by students as "pranks" or used to disrupt classes. Police, however, do take them seriously and Culver police have led investigations and searches following each high school incident.

Threats also carry serious consequences, and students caught making them could be facing felony charges.

Dec. 8 convention will decide newest Culver council member

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen editor

CULVER — A Republican convention will take place Monday, Dec. 8 at 5 p.m. to fill two vacancies, including an open Culver town council seat presently occupied by Bill Githens.

This according Culver Republican chairman Bill Cleavenger, who addressed the audience and town council at last Tuesday's council meeting.

Cleavenger said Marshall County's Republican chair, David Holmes, contacted him about the matter, which also addresses the resignation of the county treasurer.

The convention will take place at the Marshall County GOP headquarters in downtown Plymouth, at Water and Garro Streets.

Those interested in filling either position should file with Holmes at P.O. Box 102, Plymouth, IN 46563, by noon on Friday, Dec. 5.

Githens is resigning his council post to begin serving the Marshall county council position to which he was elected in November; that position begins Jan. 1. That's also the date newly elected council member Dave Beggs' position takes effect, while Sally Ricciardi, the other council member elected last month, will begin her new term then.

Private property tree issues, other matters

Among council actions was agreement from the council to utilize existing legislation to address trees on private property in town which are perceived to be a threat to people or property due to their state of deterioration.

The issue was raised by Tom Kearns, who serves on Culver's tree commission. That entity typically focuses on trees in the public right-of-way or on town property, though Kearns said some municipalities have been sued for damage or injury incurred when trees located on private property affect people or property on public ground.

Noting the tree commission just removed 24 trees in public rights-of-way due to their condition, Kearns distributed photos to council members of several trees on private property he said were potentially hazardous. He pointed specifically to one tree located on a College Avenue property adjacent to Kearns' own house, whose owner verbally agreed to the tree's removal, free of charge, by NIPSCO -- according to Kearns -- but who refused to sign NIPSCO papers authorizing its removal.

"I had a tree branch come down over the weekend that bounced off the roof of our house and hit the brick sill (of our house). It's unacceptable to leave it like this."

Town attorney Bill Cleavenger said the town's public nuisance ordinance could be utilized to address the matter, with

Culver’s Hopkins sentenced on meth charges

By Rachael Herbert-Varchetto, Staff writer

MARSHALL COUNTY — John Hopkins of Culver was sentenced Nov. 26 for manufacturing methamphetamine in his home.

In Marshall Superior Court one, Hopkins admitted before the prosecution that on June 3, 2014 he had manufactured the substance in his home with two other individuals.

Beginning on June 3, Marshall County Probation Officer Steve Harner requested the ability to complete a home visit at Hopkin’s residence. Gaining assistance from ISP Trooper Jason Faulstich, a Marshall County police officer and another probation officer, the officers approached the home. Three individuals were observed outside the home.

Faulstich requested permission from Hopkins to search his home, but Hopkins denied the request. One individual in the group attempted to conceal a marijuana pipe, drawing attention. A bag with a chemical smell located in one of the vehicles on the property had a chemical odor.

After initial investigation of the bag, two pop bottles were found inside the bag, one containing sludge.

Officers obtained a search warrant for the house. Numerous articles associated with the manufacture of methamphetamine were found in Hopkin’s residence. After a cleanup team was called in, more manufacturing items associated with meth were also discovered.

All three individuals were arrested. An agreement between Chief Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Nelson Chipman and dea letter sent to the property owner requiring contact within 10 days to discuss alleviating the nuisance.

The property owner could be taken to court and eventually the cost of remediation could be added to the property's taxes as a lien.

Kearns said letters detailing the properties would be provided for Clevenger before the next council meeting.

In other tree-related discussion, commission member Mike Stallings, responding to a council member query, said a tree which fell last summer in the east end of the park is on Culver Academies property. Repeated attempts to contact someone at the school to remove the tree, said Helphrey, have had no results, and the park board is considering contacting the head of schools.

At Githens' suggestion (but with no formal vote), the council agreed to form a task force involving representatives from Culver's fire, police, and EMS -- along with two council members -- to follow up on several proposals from consulting firms to recommend possible improvements in the town's emergency services departments.

Fire chief Terry Wakefield said ongoing entanglements related to the FCC have continued to delay moving the department's repeater from its current tower to a higher one, in hopes of alleviating radio problems within the department. He said he hoped the move would take place within the ten days after the meeting.

The council agreed to examine specifications presented by town marshal Wayne Bean regarding a new police vehicle, after Bean discussed whether to purchase a sedan or sport utility vehicle, and which specific make to buy.

Updating on Culver's park board was member John Helphrey, who said a follow-up meeting to one held earlier that week would hopefully settle the matter of who would be replacing and repairing the beach lodge's HVAC system. The hope, added fellow park board member Kearns, is to have the work done by the end of the year, partly to take advantage of possible rebates for energy efficiency.

Kearns also said the lodge's decking will utilize the same material used at the University of Notre Dame, which will simultaneously waterproof the deck and give it added foot traction. Primarily the change should stop storm water from flowing into the first-floor restrooms, especially the women's.

Helphrey said a new liner for the park's ice rink will be ordered and is hoped to be installed by the end of this year. He said the previous liner, which saw its first use during the winter of 2013-2014, was damaged enough to necessitate replacement. The board expects to replace the liner each year, he said, due to wear, at around $400 per year.

Representing the Culver Redevelopment Commission, Kathy Clark reported the CRC agreed to give Culver Community Schools $40,750 towards its participation in the Project Lead the Way program, which aims to equip students in national standards of STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics) readiness.

The funds should pay for the equipment, furniture, software, and other costs associated with creating a lab for the project, she said, adding the school already has a dedicated teacher assigned to the endeavor.

The CRC also agreed to give the town of Culver $100,000 towards its massive water projects currently preparing to launch (including replacement of its present water plant), with an additional $30,000 per year earmarked for the next 20 years for water-related projects.

A capital improvement plan is the desired result of $8,000 earmarked by the CRC for the town to hire accounting firm Umbaugh & Associates to work with town clerk Karen Heim.

The CRC is also contemplating creation of sidewalks and curbs from the southwest corner of State Roads 10 and 17 in Culver, west along SR 10, an area seeing increasing foot traffic in recent years due to the location of a Family Dollar store there.

Council members expressed appreciation for the CRC's work.

Heim repeated the request from a prior meeting for public input as to what content should be on the town's website, currently undergoing a redesign.

Council members tabled voting on whether to approve a request from the Culver Lions Club to renew its lease of the train station - depot on the town park for 25 years, after it was noted that two council members are Lions members, leaving only two able to vote (in the absence that night of council president Ginny Munroe).

Attorney Clevenger informed council that he saw no reason Culver Comm. Schools superintendent Dr. Vicki McGuire cannot serve on the CRC. Some question had been raised since a school board member is typically chosen to serve in that position, rather than the superintendent.

Let Culver's Carnegie Library centennial celebration begin!

How fitting that one hundred years after news of a plan to build a library for the people of Culver and Union Township was published in the pages of The Culver Citizen, I have the honor to be writing this column about the Library's anniversary in the very same newspaper! Although The Citizen has had several publishers and owners during the past 100 years (and The Citizen itself is much older than your library, as editor Jeff Kenney will attest), we turn to the paper for the earliest mention of a library for Culver and Union Township. On page 1 of the April 2, 1914 edition of The Citizen, we read this announcement:

From the Other Side of the Book Drop

Director, Culver-Union Twp. Public Library

Library for Culver An Organization Has Been Effectuated and Movement for a Building Will Be Started

The article mentions that a committee of seven, appointed at the Commercial Club meeting "the other night", will contact the State Library Association for organizational information and ask the people of Culver to donate books as "a nucleus of a library." At this very first meeting of the committee, the intention was to seek funding from the Carnegie Foundation. Carnegie funding allowed a donation of ten times the amount raised by taxation for the library. Also, plans for an auditorium and a public comfort station in the library building were mentioned.

The seven committee members appointed by President Medbourn of the Commercial Club were: S.C. Shilling, T.E. Slattery, Arthur Morris, W.S. Easterday, Willard Zechiel, D.D. Sheerin and John P. Walter. Officers were elected and Mr. Shilling offered the use of three rooms over Dr. Tallman’s office for library and reading rooms while the committee sought funding.

In another article on the same page of The Citizen, the Committee asks “every person in the town and township to give us at least one book. Write on the flyleaf ‘Donated by (your name).’ Bring these books to the Exchange Bank a where they will be transferred to shelves in the library rooms over Dr. Tallman’s office.”

A week later, in the very next issue of The Citizen (April 9, 2014), again on page 1, the headline reads: Is Your Name Here? There follows a list of 37 donor names and we find that 296 volumes have been donated! This included sets of Shakespeare, Emerson, Burns and Hoosier poet James Whitcomb Riley. W.S. Easterday contributed the first volume and the title was Museum of Antiquities.

The call for donations ended with these practical yet farsighted words, “The sooner we get our library open the sooner will the public derive pleasure and benefit from it.”
