CCHS' Klimaszewski named 2015 Lilly Scholar

Culver Community High School student Haley Klimaszewski has been named recipient of a four-year, full tuition scholarship as the Marshall County Community Foundation 2015 Lilly Endowment Community Scholar. Klimaszewski will receive full tuition to the Indiana college of her choice and a $900 yearly stipend for required books and equipment.

Klimaszewski is the daughter of Lou and Lori Klimaszewski of Culver, and is planning to attend Indiana University Bloomington and will major in Genetics. She eventually hopes to earn her PhD in the subject and focus on studying DNA as a geneticist.

CCHS English instructor Vickie Benner recommended Klimaszewski for the scholarship.

"I can always count on Haley to provide engaging and insightful perspectives in class discussion," she said. "Haley maintains a positive attitude about her education and is self-motivated. I appreciate Haley's integrity and sense of commitment."

"Haley is driven to succeed," added Benner. "She sets goals for herself and carries through on them."

An emotional Klimaszewski, who was called last Wednesday afternoon to the school cafeteria to receive the award, said her receipt of it was a surprise to her.

"It's so exciting," she told The Culver Citizen. "I feel like I worked for it for the past four years and even before that, in middle school, I was working to get good grades."

"I'm really excited to have so many people at the school support me so much," she added, offering specific thanks to Brenda Sheldon and Sandy Master, both of the school's guidance office, for their encouragement. She also thanked the Lilly committee.

And, she says, "I can't believe my mom kept it a secret!"

Klimaszewski's mother, Lori, expressed pride on behalf of her whole family.

"She's dedicated and devoted," she added. "We couldn't ask for a better daughter."

"It just goes to show the dedication the staff (at CCHS) has to the students and the community, and parents have to the school," said Community Schools superintendent Dr. Vicki McGuire. "She deserves lot of congratulations; she has worked so hard for it."

"She's going to be a really great leader," McGuire added. "We need more people like her."

CCHS principal Brett Berndt concurred.

"I'm extremely excited for Haley," he told The Citizen. "She is one of a kind. She's an awesome, very hard worker in the classroom and outside of it. She's an outstanding leader and a great role model for every student in the school to try to attain to. We're extremely proud, and we're glad she's one of ours."

Klimaszewski is the school's fifth Lilly Scholar, the most recent before her being Myles Pinder, in 2009. Klimaszewski is a familiar face in Culver, partly to many through her work at Cafe Max on Main Street here.

At the school, she's been president of the National Honor Society, Business Professionals of America, Culver Alliance for Voluntary Service and of her class. She was chosen as a Girls State delegate and as CCHS' HOBY leadership representative.

She is also president of the school's community service organization, Culver Youth Community Organization and has participated in a variety of service projects, from collecting food for the Food Pantry, helping in the town-wide cleanup, Lions Chili Supper, Relay for Life and the Logan Nose On (for handicapped adults).

Klimaszewski has also distinguished herself for her writing prowess, winning the VFW Voice of a Democracy Essay award, among other recognition,

British novelist's Culver-set book set for August release party here

Cover art, publication date released

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen editor

A publication date, cover art, and release party have been scheduled for a novel set in Culver and written by best-selling British novelist Susan Lewis.

The book, titled, "No Place to Hide," will be released July 28, and a launch party is slated to take place Saturday, Aug. 1 at Cafe Max, 113 S Main Street in downtown Culver to which we all be invited.

Lewis (www.susanlewis.com) spent some time in Indiana last September researching this novel, which involves a young woman and her child changing their names and trying to make a new life to escape what they've left behind. They didn't expect what was waiting for them in Culver. The book is largely set in the town, although all local characters are fictional. She was recommended to visit Culver last year by old friend Chip Mitzell, whose connections to the Culver community run deep.

Lewis interviewed a number of locals, including businesspeople, police, and the editor of The Culver Citizen, during her stay.

The author has written more than 30 books, including two memoirs, many of which regularly make the London Times top ten bestseller list; her books have been translated into multiple languages, and she has a loyal fan-base in her native country.

"I didn't expect anything like this jewel of a community," Lewis told The Citizen during last year's visit. "I was pleasantly surprised and intrigued by the immense wealth of all kinds that's here. It makes it an extremely interesting place to write about, because it's not all one thing."

Culver's Sayger receives Hall of Fame centennial award

Lauded as inventor of three-point shot, record-holding scorer, more, at March 25 awards ceremony

NEW CASTLE, IND - A Culver man was recognized for his remarkable contributions to not only Indiana basketball but to the sport nationally last month. The Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame lauded the late Herman Sayger among others of its 54th class of inductees on March 25 in ceremonies held at Primo Banquet Hall in Indianapolis.

Culver's Sherrill Fujimu-ra accepted the award on behalf of her "Uncle Herman," a 1914 Culver High School graduate.

The award came alongside a detailed article, by Kyle Neddenriep, in The Indianapolis Star newspaper (published online March 24 -- available here www.indystar.com/story/sports/high-school/2015/03/24/originator-point-shot-remembered-vision- ary/70373740), which validated for the first time that Sayger was indeed the inventor of the three-point shot in the sport.

Carving out the legend

As reported in a feature on Sayger in The Culver Citizen of Sept. 17, 2009, Sayger still holds the Indiana high school individual scoring record with 113 points in a 154-10 victory against Winamac in March, 1913.

In fact, the 1914 CHS team, which consisted of only five players and no reserves (besides Sayger, the team also included Rex Mawhorter, Charles Cowan, and Tone Shaw), won 25 out of 27 games that season and amassed over 1,300 points, making it to state semi-finals. There the team won their first nine games and lost by just one point.

Born in Jonesboro, Arkansas in 1895, Sayger lost his parents Larry and Emma and brother Gene within a week of one another while he was a young child. Emma Green Sayger's sister Mary had married Tom Medbourn of Culver, and the couple took young Herman in, bringing him to Culver around 1901 to be raised alongside their own children Charlie and Myrtle, more or less as a brother.

Recalls Sherrill Fujimura, her mother Donna (Medbourn) Edgington always called Herman Sayger "Uncle Herman," a name Sherrill herself adopted for him as well.

"In his senior season," noted Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame executive director Chris May during the induction speech at last month's awards, "Sayger had games of 79, 55, and 52 pointed and scored 56 percent of his team's points for the season. That year, Sayger was named 1st Team All-State as he averaged 29.5 points per game, compared to 16 points per game for Culver's opponents."

It was in Culver, of course, that Sayger played that record 1913 game against Winamac, though he also played a year for Culver Military Academy on a scholarship as well, becoming a football, basketball, baseball, and track star there as well as a coach after graduating high school in 1915. That fall he entered Heidelberg College in Tiffin, Ohio, participating in a host of sports there and making All Ohio in football and basketball.

The Heidelberg College basketball court in Ohio is named in Sayger's honor after he launched the school's intramural sports program, serving as athletics director and head football coach there. The Sayger Award is presented each year to the college's senior male athlete most likely to succeed.

Originating the three-pointer

As also reported in The Citizen in 2009, Sayger was often credited as the first to suggest the three-point rule in basketball while coaching in Tiffin. The rule was intended to eliminate the center jump and establish a new scoring system, and eventually was adopted permanently on the professional level following its 1945 testing in the NCAA.

Thanks to the Star's research endeavors (credited to Star librarian Cathy Knapp), that claim has been proven.

An article from The Tiffin Advertiser in March, 1932 documents an exhibition game between Tiffin Junior Home and Tiffin Columbian high school basketball teams which included Sayger's rules that "a shot from beyond 25 feet was worth three points and a shot inside of 15 feet worth one point. Anything in between counted for the traditional two points," according to The Star, which also notes he eliminated the jump ball after each basket, hoping to reduce the extent to which the game leaned towards height instead of skill as its determining factor.

Sports headlines of the day recognized the change as indicative of a new style of basketball which the Coshocton (Ohio) Tribune described as working "to help out the midgets and reduce the power of giraffes."

Sayger continued to employ the new scoring scheme in years following, with a 1935 game in Columbus, Ohio, showcasing it to its widest audience yet, apparently effectively, as a number of coaches were encouraged to jot down their opinions of the scoring system.

"In the mid-1930s," May also said during his Sayger induction speech on March 25, "Sayger made another change to the game that would be adapted much more quickly: he advocated eliminating the center jump after each basket. He included this wrinkle into his exhibition games in 1935 and by 1938, the rule was changed."

The Star article, calling Sayger "likely far ahead of his time in this regard," notes he also attempted to eliminate stalling tactics in the game during a 1936 endeavor. That idea didn't take off.

The three point line didn't arrive until years later in basketball. The American Basketball Association did popularize the three-point shot in 1967 and it was formally adopted by the NBA in 1979. It was adopted into college basketball in 1986, and in high schools in 1987. By then, most had forgotten Sayger's initiation of the rule.

Football legacy

Sayger's name also belongs in the annals of college football as well.

In 1917 he was captain of Heidelberg's football team and since the school's coach was otherwise occupied serving in World War I, Sayger coached basketball, football, and baseball for the school, making him possibly one of the only men to serve as quarterback, team captain, and coach of the same football team. Sayger himself was also called to service, playing football and basketball at Camp Dodge.

He also coached swimming for 12 years at Culver Military Academy. Among other activities, Sayger returned to Heidelberg as coach after graduation, heading up two undefeated teams at the school.

Sayger also played professional football and went into sports writing, radio announcing, photography, drawing, and publication. He published an annual booklet illustrating the first football hand signals, established by Sayger himself and also published some 24 books on athletics. He assisted Red Barber in broadcasting college football games, was a member of the American Football Coaches Association most of his coaching life, and was a charter member of the National Football Hall of Fame in addition to starting a sports syndicate of his own.

He was associated with sports legends such as Knute Rockne, Red Grange, Jim Thorpe, and others.

"Uncle Herman"

Herman Sayger would go on to head launch Sayger Enterprises, Inc., which combined his camera store, studio, printing shop, publishing business, and other endeavors in addition to his work with O.K. Rubber Welders, whose Culver location may be remembered by many Culverites (the business was owned by Harry Edgington and Charles Medbourn of Culver). Sayger was a beloved member of his Tiffin, Ohio community, contributing locally in many capacities there up to his death in 1970.

Sherrill Fujimura knew "Uncle Herman" all her life and has fond memories of his kindness. His ashes were scattered over Lake Maxinkuckee.

Herman Sayger's online entry in the Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame may be found online at www.hoopshall.com/hall-of-fame/herman-suz-sayger.

Culver Elementary School 6th graders gathered last Friday in the school gymnasium to receive graduation certificates from the Culver Police Department-administered DARE program, with one student selected to read his winning essay at the county-wide DARE banquet later this spring.

Following an introduction by CES principal Erin Prosksey, Culver police officer John Duhnowsky, who taught the 10-week DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program at the school, offered his thanks to Culver town marshal Wayne Bean for Bean's support of the event. Duhnowsky also thanked the school corporation, adding CES is "the best school to teach in...because everyone here is working together."

The DARE program was updated, Duhnowsky said, a few years ago with the theme altered to "Keeping it Real," which emphasizes acting out potential real-life situations students may face, in order to help them plan ahead and display confidence when faced with negative peer pressures.

Duhnowsky said he was "really encouraged by the (student) essays...I felt many students this year were reached."

He added he's been teaching the program in Culver for 15 years, and has had an opportunity to teach it to anyone here under the age of 26, some of whom come up and thank him, noting how helpful the program had been for them.

The keynote speaker for the event was Bob Rich of Culver, a Deputy Commander of Special Investigations for the Indiana State Police. Noting his own three children went to CES, Rich explained his work involves wiretaps, undercover covert operations, and meth teams.

"I see lot of sad situations," he told the students in the audience. "As kids get older, they sometimes make bad de-

National Library Week is here!

Yes, it’s officially spring, and in the library world, that means it’s time to celebrate National Library Week. First held in 1958, National Library Week is sponsored by the American Library Association (ALA) and libraries across the country. It is a time for us to remember the contributions of libraries and librarians, and to promote library use and support. All types of libraries - school, public, academic and special - participate. This year the Week will be observed April 12th through 18th with the theme, "Unlimited possibilities @ your library."

Here at CUTPL, we take this theme seriously, as demonstrated by this list of some of the services and materials your Library currently offers to you: free Wi-Fi access; story hours; summer and winter reading clubs; reference services; monthly Tech Talks on various topics; author visits and programs; readers advisory assistance; craft programs; best-sellers in print and audio; downloadable e-books, audiobooks, movies and magazines through OverDrive; two different book discussion groups each month; tech classes; timely speakers and programs; weekly genealogy group workshops.

These programs and services help CUTPL to promote, foster and present our patrons with opportunities to expand their knowledge outwards to . . . well, unlimited possibilities.

Bestselling author and literacy advocate David Baldacci is this year’s Honorary Chair of National Library Week. He has written 29 bestselling novels for adults, with over 110 million copies sold. Recently, inspired by his lifelong love of the genre, he wrote The Finisher, his first fantasy novel for young readers. Here at CUTPL, you will find copies of Mr. Baldacci’s works available in print, large print and audiobook formats, as well as downloadable on OverDrive.

On Tuesday during National Library Week, we observe National Library Workers Day. This is a day for library staff, users, administrators and Friends groups to recognize the valuable contributions made by all library workers. Librarianship is a public service profession; we are here to serve our communities. The slogan for National Library Workers Day is: “Libraries work because we do!”

Here at CUTPL I think you will agree with me that we have a remarkable staff; working behind the scenes or directly with the public, each person does a first-class job to keep this Library operating at its best. I would like to honor each person, and in these pages I will note their name and primary department (many staff members work in more than one department):

Mitchell Anderson-IT; Andrew Baker-IT; Margaret Carter-Tech Services; Sean Doty-Maintenance; Chris Emerick-Circulation; Jim Faulkner-Financial Department; Jill Gavlick-Youth Services; Shirley Gut-Tech Services; Joyce Hanselman-Circulation; Shelly Harrison-Youth Services; Linda Johnston-Financial Department; Esmie Rodgers-Circulation; Erin Schoberg-Youth Services; Dana Thomas-Reference and Circulation Services; Polly Thompson Wolf-Tech Services; Cameron Turney-Tech Services.

Be sure and visit us to avail yourself of our many services and materials (remember those “unlimited possibilities”) and while you are here I invite you to say “hi” and to thank our staff for the outstanding job they do.

In keeping with the celebration, libraries, library workers, managers, and patrons can “Submit a Star” to the ALA webpage to honor a great worker, team, or department. This year, one of our employees was recognized as a Star and I would like to publish the entry here:

Polly from a public library in Culver, IN, is a Star because she has worked tirelessly for nearly fifteen years to provide the members of our small community with culture, information, and entertainment. She truly loves the library and its patrons, and inspires other staff members with her infectious enthusiasm and optimism. Culver is a better town for having Polly in its library. – Cameron

On behalf of the staff, I say thank you, Polly for all of your work at CUTPL, which benefits the patrons of our communities. And thank you, Cameron, for submitting our “Star” from the Library! You can read the story online at ala-apa.org/nlwd/?tag=IN

Our Friends of the Library Group honors the staff each year with a special luncheon in April, and they present a gift to those employees who are celebrating a special anniversary at the Library. We are most appreciative of this generous act from an exceptional Group that just keeps on giving.

Centennial News—CUTPL online timeline goes live

On April 3, our Online Library history timeline page went live. The webpage details the history of our Library by decades, from the time when our founders formulated the idea for a community Library, applied for the Carnegie grant, and built the Library, on through the years, up until the present day. Currently we have newspaper articles from the Culver Citizen; we will be adding more Citizen articles, as well as primary documents including minutes from the Library Board meetings, and photos. This is a work-in-progress and there is much more content planned for the page, so do keep checking the site for additions. Special thanks to Andrew, Mitch and Jim for their painstaking work on this on-going project. There is a link to the page from our Centennial page; the direct link is: www.culver.lib.in.us/timeline/index.php?action=browse&year=1914

Throughout the country, Historic Preservation Month is observed each May. With that in mind, we have invited Marshall County architectural expert Kurt Garner to help us celebrate our Centennial year. Kurt will give a presentation about the architecture of our Carnegie Library on Saturday, May 2 at 10:30 am. He is founder and President of Wythougan Valley Preservation Council and Regional Advisory Member of Indiana Landmarks. We invite you to attend and learn more about CUTPL’s very own contribution to Historic Preservation month.

The actual Centennial Birthday Party is scheduled for Saturday, June 6 and it promises to be an event for the entire community to enjoy! Watch for more news!

In Memoriam – Lisa Bianco

A guest editorial by Ray Gleason

I’m naïve!

After growing up hard scrabble on New York City streets, serving over twenty years in the Rangers and in the Infantry, and pulling three combat tours in Nam, I thought I never say that about myself.

I’m naïve!

In general, what led me to this realization is my training in the the Kosciusko County Reserve Police Academy.

This is a training academy for men and women who have volunteered to serve their communities as reserve police officers... in other words, taking the same risks and assuming the same responsibilities as full-time police officers, but serving on their own time and often without pay.

The academy itself is conducted by veteran police officers, who are state-certified law-enforcement trainers, and who conduct the academy on their own time.

You might ask why these reserve officers do this. Or, why the full time officers dedicate hours to training others when they could be spending it with their own families.

If you were to ask, you might receive many different answers. But, I believe one answer would be common to all these dedicated men and women... to keep their communities safe.

If you were to ask further, “Safe from what?” you would be betraying the same degree of naiveté that I possessed when I started this journey.

For years, I have been functioning in my community... driving to work, running various errands, going to movies and restaurants... you can fill in your own blanks. For the most part, crime was invisible to me... never been assaulted... never witnessed a robbery... someone once tried to mug me in Cincinnati, but that didn’t work out too well for the poor ne'er-do-well.

Certainly, I have never had to obsess about my safety or that of my family... except of course on Chicago roads.

I imagine, after a while living in this bubble of tranquility, one can go into denial about the existence of a very real evil that hovers all about us. What affords us that luxury are the men and women serving our communities as police officers... the “thin blue line” (without the whimsy of Rowan Atkinson) that stands between us and criminal chaos. Their very presence on our streets and on our roads dissuades criminals from attacking. The fear of arrest and punishment reduces crime, and keeps us safe.

So, as I stated earlier, thanks to the dedication of the police, I have never had to live in fear of the evil that exists in and preys on our society.

An ironic aspect about police work is that a sign of success is when nothing seems to happen! Law enforcement is most effective when it’s invisible. Everyone is free to enjoy their lives without criminal, and often tragic, interruption.

That was the general basis of my naiveté.

A couple of weeks ago, the reserve academy was conducting domestic and family violence training. As part of the lesson, we students watched the statement of Lisa Bianco to the police describing what her husband, Alan Matheney, had inflicted on her.

When Lisa Bianco was twenty-nine years old, she struggled with Matheney's violent and vicious attempts to control and dominate her. Bianco was a petite woman, about a foot shorter than her six-foot-tall husband, yet she endured multiple beatings at Matheney’s hands.

Matheney inflicted a seemingly endless cycle of terror and violence on this poor woman. He would intimidate and beat her, be arrested, post bond, and return to abuse her again. Even after she divorced him in 1985, Mathaney continued to pursue her.

Bianco sought every option available to her in order to escape from Matheney’s unrelenting abuse. She sought protective orders, filed formal complaints; she even went into hiding and wore wigs to disguise herself. But, Matheney continued to stalk her.

Shortly after their divorce, Matheney kidnapped their two daughters. Bianco filed a complaint against him; he was arrested in North Carolina several weeks later and extradited back to Indiana.

While out on bond for the kidnapping charge, Matheney accosted Bianco, bound her, raped and beat her in an effort to get her to drop the charges.

Sentenced to prison for simple battery in a plea agreement, Mathaney was granted an eight-hour pass from a state prison near Indianapolis to visit his mother. He used that opportunity to track Bianco down. He broke into her house, chased her into the street and, in front of the couple's two young daughters, beat Bianco to death with the butt of a shotgun as she pounded on a neighbor's door for help.

An officer, who was on the scene, told me that Mathaney had hit Bianco so hard and so often that the wooden butt and stock of the shotgun was broken into three pieces.

Watching this young woman’s testimony to the police after Matheney had bound and raped her, was worse than any Hollywood horror movie I have ever seen!

First, what Lisa Bianco described was appalling. Her often tearful recounting of beatings, strangulation, rape, confinement, kidnapping – the horrors that Matheney inflicted on this young woman - seemed endless.

Secondly, every one of these atrocious acts were real. There was no room for denial here... no tension building up to some dramatic catharsis... “Thank God, this isn’t real!”

It was!

Had I not seen this, I would not have believed it possible!

Before hearing Lisa Bianco’s heartbreaking testimony, I would not have accepted that any human being could act as Matheney did.

That is one of many specific examples of my naiveté.

That is also a specific reason why I serve as a reserve police officer in my community.

The story of domestic violence in our community can be told through the tragedy of Lisa Bianco.

To paraphrase John Donne, Lisa Bianco’s death diminishes us, for we are part of mankind. Therefore, do not ask for whom her funeral bell tolls.

It tolls for us.

Culver Community High School 2015 spring sports preview

Editor's note: The following articles originally appeared in April edition of The Caval Crier, Culver Comm. High School's monthly newspaper, and is reprinted here by permission of faculty sponsor Vickie Benner.

New coach leads softball team

By Alecia Rearick, Culver Comm. High School

Another year of softball has started and the new coach has high hopes for this year's softball team.

The new head coach, Brian Hamann, attended Plymouth High School, graduating in 2000. He then went to Ancilla College, earning his Associates Degree in business and transferred to IUSB where he started a degree in elementary education.

His involvement in softball started when he was asked to join the Plymouth Youth Softball Board. He was also the head JV coach for Plymouth and still coaches a travel league.

Hamann said, "Our main goal would be to build a foundation that will get our program headed in the right direction."

Golf team plans for great season

By Tevin Jones, Culver Comm. High School

The Culver Community Boys Golf team plans for another great season.

"We aren't planning to have a record-breaking season, but we hope to improve after every day of hard work," said Coach Kyle Elliott.

With three returning juniors, Kenny VanDePutte, Tyler Binkley, and Tevin Jones, the team hopes the experience will make a dramatic impact on teaching newcomers about the game.

"I'm really excited about the start of our season and hope we rack up multiple wins," commented Tyler Binkley.

The boys golf team will open its season at the Triton Invite on April 11.

CCHS track teams' season underway

By Morgan Keen, Culver Comm. High School

Since mid-January, the CCHS track team has been working diligently to prepare themselves for the upcoming track season.

The team's first meet of the season was on March 17 at Culver Academy.

Coaches for the team are Mr. Hollenbaugh, Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Zucker and Mrs. DeLong.

Team captains for the girls' team are Mickella Hardy and Donna Zehner, both conference champions, and Justine Dexter who is a returning qualifier for state.

"The girls' squad is high on talent but short on numbers," explained Coach Hollenbaugh.

The team captains for the boys' track team are shot put regional qualifier, Sam Castaneda, and Aaron Becker who is involved in hurdles, sprints and the long jump.

Coach Hollenbaugh added, "The boys' team will be young but has a lot of potential."

Lowry is new baseball coach

Shane Lowry

By Tia Romig, Culver Comm. High School

The Boys Baseball team is welcoming Shane Lowry, the current art teacher at CHS, as a new head coach this season.

This is Lowry's first year coaching baseball, and he is excited to take on the new challenge.

"My goal for the 2015 Cavalier baseball program is to get better every day and promote team skills that will relate to sports as well as life," said Lowry.

Encouraging the students to "listen to your inner voice," Rich emphasized each student's capacity to "be a leader within your world."

Duhnowsky then introduced the six participants whose essays were chosen by teachers -- one boy and one girl from each 6th grade class -- prior to Duhnowsky himself choosing the single winner.

The six included Austin Cooper, Taylor Lewandowski, Sarah Lowry, Wyatt Ringer, Trayden Schrimsher, and Chyna Thomas.

Lewandowski was then named as first place winner. She is slated to read her essay, alongside winning essays from other Marshall County schools, at the DARE banquet in Plymouth in the near future.

In addition to gift bags presented to each of the six, the Culver Police Department also donated $50 to the author of the winning essay, said Duhnowsky.

CCHS students shaed their love of reading with younger students when volunteers from the junior and senior classes signed up to visit the elementary school to read in classes, grades kindergarten through 6th. Each high school student selected a Dr. Seuss book to share in celebra-tion of Read Across America. Volunteers from the senior class included Summer Turney, Mickella Hardy, Dustie Pier, Tatum Schultz, Natasha Harris, Janele VanDePutte, Donna Zehner, Summer Moore, Jeremy Penrod, Haley Klimaszewski, Marshall Anderson, Alecia Rearick, and Kailey Heise.

Volunteers from the junior class included Jennah McCarthy, Megan Brady, Jillyn Kline, Cody Valiquet, Aaron Becker, Daniel Bettinelli, Carlie Bradley, and Lindsay Emery.

Readers follow up with possible info on Burr Oak ‘cave’ resident

Thanks to reader Judi Burns who was among those post-ing to The Culver Citizen Facebook feed in response to last week’s article, “‘Gibby’ and the Burr Oak ‘cave,’” which described Oscar “Gibby” Workman’s remembered residence in a (man-made) “cave” in the valley just south of the Burr Oak railroad tracks off State Road 17. Judi shared information provided on the Find-a-Grave website pertaining to the McElrath Cemetery in Marshall County. Oscar Workman -- assuming it was the same man -- was born Aug. 7, 1900 and died June 13, 1972. One of two children born to Granville and Mary Workman, he grew up on the family farm in Union Twp. and during WWI was part of Ind. Rct 22 Recruit Co. At age 28, Workman married wife Bernice and they had a son together named Junior, born in 1928. Workman was not visible on the 1940 Census and no information was available on Bernice or Junior. Reader John Hinds also recalled playing in the “cave” and that the entrance was filled in in the late 1970s.

A new business concern, the Lake Shore Barbecue, opened its doors last week in Culver. K.W. Shope of Indianapolis is the manager. J.W. Crabb formally took over the Sanders Restaurant this morning and assumed management (editor: this was the future Snyder's Cafe at the northeast corner of Main and Jefferson Streets in downtown Culver, in what is now a vacant lot). Justice of the Pece Voreis was kept busy during the past week since no less than nine offenders were brought to court. Owen Banks is the new owner of the Henry Zechiel dairy and milk route. C.L. Mack of the Mack's Restaurant has returned to Culver and is redecorating and cleaning the restaurant for the reopening on April 1 (editor's note: the restaurant in question, formerly the Hayes and for a time Mickel and Mack's, was located on the north side of Lake Shore Drive near Liberty Street, and burned down in 1931).

The township schools closed last Friday (during the era when school term schedules followed those of farmers much more closely -- editor). The town board is having 72 feet of iron hitching rail erected along the north side of the Beck Grocery Store.
