Winter weather (and summer, and spring, and...)

ABOVE: Weather was the talk of the town last week (and before and after), with some remarking that the area has experienced virtually all four seasons within a few short weeks. Following near-summer temps the previous weekend, last Wednesday saw the most significant snowfall of the season, dumping some 8 to 10 inches and causing school (and many businesses and other entities) to close Wednesday and (in the case of schools, due to click road conditions Thursday morning) Thursday. Cadets at Culver Academies took advantage of the opportunity to build a snowman measuring some eight feet (*UPPER LEFT) in height. By last weekend, however, spring-time temperatures were turning the many inches of snow into slush and water, (and removing most of the ice from Lake Maxinkuckee) though as of this writing, forecasts were calling for more snowfall and freezing rain by mid-week this week. Surely spring is on the way nonetheless — perhaps some readers have robin sightings to report?

Talk of CVS project focuses on rights to municipal lot

It's been a long time coming, but discussion resumed last week among Culver town council members regarding installation of a drive-through pharmacy pickup window -as well as overall renovations of the building -- at Culver's CVS store. The most debated matter, however, was not the window itself, but use of a municipal-owned parking lot and a dumpster currently situated there.

Council president Ginny Munroe, speaking at the Feb. 23 meeting, noted initial planning for the overhaul of Culver's only pharmacy had taken place in 2014 and involved the Hamstra Group, owners of the local store. That group requested the town grant an easement for the alley running behind (to the west of) the store, with plans to install a drive-through window facing the alley, which Hamstra would pave and make one-way.

In exchange, Hamstra offered to maintain a municipalowned lot south of its main parking lot. The town lot, currently unpaved, was purchased around 40 years ago through the efforts of Culver's Chamber of Commerce, to provide parking for employees at downtown businesses without clogging limited parking on Main Street.

By Jeff Kenney Citizen editor The town of Culver is taking its first steps towards a recreational bicycle and walking path, and if audience interaction at special Feb. 23 meeting (following the council's official meeting) at the town hall is any indication, the community is widely supportive of the initiative. Mike Reese of the Troyer Group returned to the council after an initial presentation at its previous meeting, explaining he had been working on a master plan for the trail which had been hoped to be funded by a grant. Council members,

CES assistant principal position Town takes dissolved, CCSC receives $40k in formal steps Teacher Performance grant toward bike CUVER — The Culver Community School board declined to renew Culver Elementary assistant principal Julie Berndt's assistant principal and Title 1 director contract, at its Feb. 22 meeting, part of a broader effort to save declining funds by eliminating an administrative position. The board had issued notice that it was considering the move, back in January.

According to our reporting partners at WKVI, a shortfall in the corporation's General Fund is to blame for staff

In more pleasant news, CCSC interim superintendent Chuck Kitchell told the board the corporation was awarded more than $40,000 for distribution to teachers based on teacher evaluations in recent years.

Kitchell explained the funds are part of state-sponsored Teacher Performance Grant, which requires "highly effective teachers" be given more money and "effective teachers" somewhat less money, with teachers deemed needing improvement or "ineffective" not allowed in the pool at

The highest stipend possible for a teacher would be $729 and the lowest $446, reported WKVI, though taxes are among monies which will be taken out before the money is finally distributed. Teachers who started this school year are ineligible for the grant. The total awarded is based on a mixture of scores from

Culver 'Stellar Community' steering committee open house Monday

The Culver Stellar Community Steering Committee will be holding a public open house on Monday, March 7 from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at Culver Town Hall, 200 E Washington Street. All members of the public are invited to attend.

Stellar Communities is a planning program managed by the Indiana Office of Community and Rural Affairs designed to reward small communities that adopt best practices and address issues related to attracting population growth in rural communities.

The Town of Culver has been working towards a Stellar Community designation since the adoption of the town's new comprehensive plan in August 2014. In 2015 a broad committee made up of representation from throughout the community came together to create a 5 year action plan based on the recommendations of the newly adopted comprehensive plan. The action plan committee has already started to complete short term goals from that plan, including selecting a site for a workforce housing development and financing a bike and pedestrian master plan for Culver and Lake Maxinkuckee.

Vocal Trash to recycle hits, instruments at March 9 concert here

Oldies but goodies" takes on a double meaning when Culver Academies' Huffington Concert Series presents Vocal Trash at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, March 9, in the Academies' Eppley Auditorium.

Vocal Trash is an ensemble that performs pop tunes spanning the decades. But songs aren't the only things the group recycles. Playing instruments fashioned from items salvaged from the landfill, Vocal Trash sends a message to reuse and recycle.

Tickets are now on sale at Culver Academies' Steinbrenner Performing Arts Center Box Office or by contacting Marsha Coven via email or calling 574-842-7058. Tickets will also be available at the Eppley Auditorium Box Office one hour before the performance.

The group's unique instruments include a "one of a kind" bass and guitars, with an industrial percussion section made-up of metal trash cans, plastic barrels, water bottles and other recycled items. The group's show stresses how to use your imagination in a meaningful and lasting way as it relates to eco-friendly living.

however, were open to town funds being used towards the plan, which fulfills part of Culver's comprehensive plan of 2014, as well as its follow-up five-year action plan. The grant, which Culver did not win, would have funded the $25,000 price tag for the plan. Reese did point out the Indiana Dept. of Natural Resources offers a grant up to $150,000 for recreational trails, though applications are due May 1.

The first phase of the trail, said Reese, would be a section of trail between the town park and the downtown area, something questioned some in the audience who pointed out that a pedestrian and bike-friendly trail already covers much of that distance. However, it was noted that many such trails become attractions for communities, drawing visitors and enhancing businesses adjacent to them. With that in mind, many from outside the area may not be familiar with the walking route from the park to downtown without a formal, well-marked trail.

Reese explained the local segment may well be the first phase of a long-discussed trail around Lake Maxinkuckee, a plan which could also be noted in the town's Stellar Communities application. He said the town could employ an interactive Wiki Mapping website to encourage public input on the project.

Audience member Tom Yuhas, of the Culver Redevelopment Commission (with whom the council was officially meeting regarding the project, at the meeting) raised the matter of a previous effort some 15 years ago to create a trail around the lake, which met with considerable resistance from some property owners.

Council president Ginny Munroe said that plan called for use of public access easement directly along the lake shore, which could have effectively seen the trail running through property owners' yards. That proposal, added Reese, also involved sections away from the lake proper and on county roads, which in some cases also raised objections from property owners on those roads.

Reese also said that previous effort was, firstly, handled through a different funding system, but also never went beyond a preliminary map and cost estimates.

"There was the perception (of the plan)," said council member Tammy Shaffer, "and then there was the (actual)

Leist said public input had been sought on the earlier trail project, and existing letters from that era show opposition from land owners at properties where in many cases new owners are today in place.

Munroe said Culver Academies wrote a letter of support for the current trail proposal, as did the Culver Chamber of Commerce and other local entities.

In response to Yuhas' question as to a more focused plan to take the path around the lake, Munroe said part of the planning process is looking into the matter in enough detail to make such decisions, adding that if Culver Academies is supportive, the trail could possibly go through

"We're a walking town as it is," she said. "The point is, if you have major entities supporting it, you start there, but a master plan would answer some of those questions (such as locations, easements, and the like)."

She also likened the effort to the town's Safe Routes to School grant program, which approves the plan to construct sidewalks in certain areas of town even if not every detail of location and easement has been established at the time of application.

It was also discussed that the trail could ideally connect to other existing regional trails such as those in the Rochester and Kokomo areas, which connect to the Monon Trail in the Indianapolis area.

"There's a lot of economic growth off that," Munroe added.

Leist echoed that notion, reporting that similar trails adjacent to retail areas were the number one thing merchants for which expressed happiness.

Audience member Marsha Coven discussed having worked on walking and bicycle trails in the Fort Wayne area in the mid-1990s, adding that the trails have proven immensely popular. "You can get on any trail," she said. "It's choices and discovery. You go right and discover something new about Fort Wayne. Also, they would look at an area and one particular road there was no way a trail would fit on that, but architecturally they found a way, and it's aesthetically pleasing and very safe. I hope this does come to fruition in Culver.' Shaffer reported hearing from one person who no longer bikes around the lake after a fast-moving truck on the east shore struck her and caused a back fracture. Brandy

Pohl of Max's Playhouse daycare on State Road 10 also expressed interest in a trail which might connect the town to that district. "I think people are hungry for this and have wanted it a long time," said Shaffer. "It's just a matter of having someone to work on it, which the Troyer Group would Council members proposed and approved a special appropriation from Culver's General Fund to pay for Troyer's planning process towards the trail at $23,100, includees be allowed to park in the municipal lot, according to Munroe, though a revised proposal also asks that that lot be approved for CVS customer parking as well. Additionally, CVS has maintained a large waste dumpster along the south wall of its building, situated in the town-owned lot, and Hamstra requested that arrangement remain intact. There had also been discussion of Hamstra paving the municipal lot, though prior concerns had focused on possible water runoff problems if the lot surface became impervious.

Munroe pointed out activity on the project stopped on the part of Hamstra, rather than the town.

Some council and audience members -- such as Cafe Max owner Susie Mahler -- questioned whether the pharmacy's dumpster should take up parking spots in a publicly-owned lot, suggesting instead the store consider placing its dumpster in the grassy area along its north wall. Mahler also noted the pharmacy had been using the municipal lot to place snow plowed from its own parking lot. She and other business owners noted they have had to make accommodations for dumpsters of their own, and are unable to use public space to place them. It was also pointed out that the town has little difficulty now in plowing its own lot, and wouldn't benefit much from CVS doing the work. Council member Joel Samuelson expressed concern about paving the drive-through alley, noting the Hammer

Garage business immediately west of it could be affected by water runoff in rain events.

Mahler also suggested the town discuss where the pharmacy's delivery trucks would park if the alley becomes a Town manager Jonathan Leist suggested Hamstra Group representatives should attend a future council meeting to discuss the issues.

Marketing Culver

Also discussed by council members was the hope of more combined efforts towards what council member Tammy Shaffer called "marketing Culver." Shaffer, who now chairs the Culver Redevelopment Commission, noted there has been discussion among council members and other focused on bringing new retail businesses to Culver, filling empty storefronts, and generally promoting Culver. She noted the town of Argos is uniting discussion between entities such as its Chamber of Commerce, park, town council, and others, to ensure "everybody is on the same page."

Munroe noted members of a committee aimed at bringing in more merchants to Culver recently traveled to New Buffalo, Mich., and will travel to Nashville, Ind., shortly. She emphasized the value of a coalition with the Chamber, CRC, and town council, as well as the town park, schools, and council, perhaps aimed at sharing services, better communication, and "attacking issues."

She discussed an upcoming meeting regarding the state's Stellar Communities Initiative, which could result in a grant to assist the town with projects relating to its comprehensive plan.

"We all felt a need to start dialoging about (sharing resources towards promoting Culver)," added Munroe, "and holding more public meetings and work sessions."

Stellar Communities public open house is planned for Monday, March 7 (see article this issue).

Other actions, discus-

other matters, the council voted to deny a request from a property owner that late fees be disregarded for a water bill he said was delayed in the mail after it was damaged in transit, something he said was owed to the poor quality of the paper recently instated for use in the town's new water bills.

Town clerk Karen Heim noted the town's official policy is that bills are the responsibility of the postal service once out of the town's hands. She also noted water bills arrive around the same time every month, and that she notified the customer of the recently initiated e-billing option. She also said the town ordered heavier card stock for its next billing cycle.

Town council member Sally Ricciardi noted she'd received town water bills for the past 40 years and they consistently arrive around the same time and are due at the same time monthly; she moved the request be denied, which the council approved.

Also approved were several invoices relating to Culver's ongoing water plant replacement and Lake Shore Drive storm sewer upgrade, as presented by Mark Sullivan of Midwest Engineers. Among changes to original orders were replacement of a planned gas chlorinator at the plant with liquid chlorine (an $8,600 savings); a fiberglass door to replace a planned metal door to the plant's fluoride room, given the highly corrosive nature of the chemical (an addition of $1,800); and repouring of part of the plant's floor in light of its having settled over the decades and dropped three inches (at a cost of $7,375), all totaling a net increase of $3,633 for the project.

Samuelson requested the addition of funds for stones discussed during a walkthrough of the project, bringing the total approved by the council to $4,600.

Other approved invoices included $60,537.60 to Michiana Contracting; $21,900 to Phoenix Fabricators; $1,700 to Midwest Engineers; and $10,012.96 to the resident project inspector.

Submitted to the CRC for payment relating to the storm water project was $84,764.70.

Sullivan said he spoke with a representative of the company handling the storm water project and was assured the entire project would be complete by May 1. Asphalt for repaving will not be available until April 15, so the project manager is delaying moving the project west until closer to that date, said Sullivan.

Also approved was an annual report submitted by Heim relating to the town's finances and described by Munroe as "incredible" in its detail.

Passed on first reading was a state-mandated internal control procedures policy for any town employee handling money.

The council greenlighted $39,319.86 to replace the storage building at Culver's water plant, a savings from the more than $100,000 price tag originally proposed by bidders, at the suggestion of utilities manager Bob Porter. Town staff will finish the heating and electrical in the building as time allows.

During his town manager's report, Leist said a committee with representatives of Culver Academies, the Culver park board, community school corporation, Chamber, and others met recently regarding the Stellar Communities initiative. He also said he and Marshall County Economic Development Corporation director Jerry Chavez met recently with the town clerk of North Liberty, Ind., regarding that town's win of the designation last year.

Approved was a request Leist presented on behalf of Culver fire chief Terry Wakefield for $2,095 for dive equipment to add a third rescue diver to the department.

Also approved was payment of $15,000 to grant writer Shannon McLeod for her services to Culver, which Munroe noted are ongoing.

Nowadays, many people suffer from N-D-D: nature-

ing up separated from nature can actually cause serious mental and emotional issues. "Nature-deficit disorder describes the human cost of alienation from nature, among them: diminished use of the senses, attention difficulties, and higher rates of physical and emotional illnesses," he writes. "Long-standing studies show a relationship between the absence, or inaccessibility, of parks and open space with high crime rates, depression, and other urban maladies.

Connecting with nature doesn't have to take a lot of time or money. Here's a simple way to connect right at home: hang a bird feeder outside a convenient window and meet the neighbors — the winged kind.

I love birds, and I come by it honestly. One of my earliest memories is peeking out my grandmother's kitchen window, watching a flock of goldfinches enjoy the food she put outside for them. My mother and father keep a fancy bird-feeding station outside their back door. One year for Christmas we got them the "Yankee Flipper," a birdfeeder with a sneaky mechanism that flips anything squirrel-sized Everywhere I've lived, I've installed a bird feeder, even when Tim and I were apartment-dwellers on the northwest side of Indianapolis. Our heavily-wooded apartment complex bordered an acre of no-man's land where two TV towers stood. We had the usual suspects at our feeder, of course — but I also spotted pileated woodpeckers and heard a great-horned owl in the middle of the night.

When we moved to South Michigan Street in Plymouth last year, I was worried that we wouldn't see as many birds as we had when we lived outside town in a rural subdivision. I hung several feeders outside my kitchen window hoping that word would spread. To my surprise, downtown Plymouth is a better bird habitat than I expected it to be. For one thing, despite the proximity of people, we are surrounded by mature trees and backyards that are — ahem - not always meticulously landscaped or fertilized. The Yellow River winds past less than a block away, its edges almost as wild and undeveloped as they were when the Potawatomi Indians lived here.

Since moving in, we've enjoyed juncos, jays, whitebreasted nuthatches, black-capped chickadees, downy and red-bellied woodpeckers, tufted titmice, cardinals, house finches, several kinds of sparrows, a Northern flicker, and even bluebirds. Having been raised in the city, I thought bluebirds were mythical creatures, like unicorns. Seeing them at my feeder is astonishing!

I've made sure that my kids know the names of "our" birds and that they can easily see the feeders through the kitchen window. I've noticed that they spend time every day watching the birds, and they even hold up the frustrated house-cat so he can see the birds, too. My parents made sure I had that connection as well. We camped, hiked, visited nature centers, and listened to naturalists interpret the flora and fauna of our Hoosier state. At the time, I thought every kid knew that the cardinal was our state bird. Now I realize what a rare privilege it was to grow up so in tune with my native surroundings. I believe children raised with an appreciation for their natural nabitat will be more inclined to protect it.

Culver police to combat impaired driving during March campaign

CULVER — The Culver Police Department announced it will join efforts with over 250 Indiana state and local law enforcement agencies to increase education and enforcement around dangerous and impaired driving. From March 4 through March 27, officers across the state will conduct high-visibility patrols specifically designated to identify and intercept those driving aggressively and un-

Increased enforcement during March is a statewide effort supported by federal funding allocated to the Culver Police Department from the Traffic Safety division of the Indiana Criminal Justice Institute (ICJI). Officers will work overtime to conduct observational patrols around

According to ICJI, in March 2015 there were 529 alcohol-related crashes across Indiana, resulting in 214 injuries and five fatalities. Additionally, during the same period, crash reports indicate 1,606 collisions occurred due to dangerous driving, resulting in 332 injuries and four fatalities. Dangerous driving includes such factors as "speed too fast for weather conditions," "driver distracted," and 'driver asleep or fatigued."

Accidents resulting from dangerous and impaired driving are preventable. The Culver Police Department and ICJI would like to remind motorists safe driving is as sim-

People ask me all the time, why should I work out or be active six or seven days a week? Isn't that excessive? My answer is always two-fold.

1) Why not? You're creating a good habit. Collectively, we have enough bad habits to go around.

So why not strive for as many healthy and positive practices as possible? We eat, sleep, work, shower and brush our teeth every day. For a moment, just image quitting all these great habits. You would soon experience detrimental outcomes. But after quitting, if you began eating again, receiving rest, showering and earning an income your life would be positively and

The school board also approved its 2016-17 school calendar, even without a response from the state regarding hoped-for rescheduling of the PSAT testing, which had been scheduled by the state when many corporations -including Culver -- had their fall break planned.

The board had previously delayed approving the calendar in hopes of confirming that an alternate fall break date would be formally designated by the state (which Kitchell previously said was likely based on past years' experience). Kitchell told the board many area superintendents have moved forward with the previously-scheduled fall break despite no response from the Department of Education. If the test can't be rescheduled, Kitchell said fall break would probably be shifted instead.

There are no major differences between the new calendar and the previous one, said Kitchell. Classes will begin Aug. 2 and end May 31, 2017, with graduation June 2 of that year. The calendar may be viewed on the corporation website at www.culver.k12.in.us.

Neer qualifies for NCAA Nationals -

SEATTLE, WASH. -- At the Husky Invitational in Seattle, Washington, University of Oregon All-American (and Culver Girls Academy grad) Waverly Neer qualified for the NCAA Indoor National Championships on March 12 by running 15:48.9 in the 5k (5:06 per mile pace).

an 11-0 run spanning from the 7:27 mark of the first quarter to the frame's 4:47 stop, giving the Lions an 11-2 lead and forcing a Culver timeout. But the Lions started settling for lower-percentage shots, the Cavs steadily whittled their deficit down, and — after a full six lead changes in the last two minutes of the first half — the visitors barely clung to a 26-25 advantage at the break.

"Our first few possessions of the game we didn't really run anything," Krueger said of Bremen's early 11-0 run. We got it in a couple guys' hands, and they thought they were going to do everything by themselves. That's not really how the game works. I told them 'Stick with the game plan here. Stick with running our stuff, and good things are going to happen.' And they did that."

The Lions maintained narrow leads most of the third period, but the leads changed hands one final time on a driving layup along the baseline by Culver sophomore reserve R.T. Roberts — who chipped in five points with an assist and three steals off the bench — off a Schultz assist with 1:09 remaining until the quarter break. Bremen was able to tie it up one final time at 36-all on Klockow's transition layup at the 6:04 mark of the fourth, but Everett converted on a spin move in the paint, Josh Krsek netted his only bucket of the night driving to the rim, and Schultz converted on four straight charity tosses to give the home team some breathing room en route to the eventual win.

While Shultz and Everett Krueger led Culver offensively, the Lions got a game-high 19 points from Ryan Topper. The 6-3 senior forward also did a creditable job on the defensive end alternating against first 6-4 Culver guard Nate Carnegie — who was held to three points but pulled down 10 rebounds — and later the bigger-bodied Schultz.

While Culver closes out the regular season with a 14-8 record following its first win in the past five games, the Lions came up just short of ending their own skid Friday. • CULVER COMMUNITY 45, BREMEN 43

wonder why you ever stopped doing these daily tasks that are so good for you. The same is true for daily activity. Inconsistent and infrequent activity is certainly better than nothing at all, but six days a week, thirty minutes a day will have you functioning on all cylinders soon, feeling immeasurably better, and possessing the energy for a productive and satisfying life.

2) Medical research proves that people function properly when they are active six days a week, thirty minutes each day. Research from the American Heart Association shows that physical activity improves quality of life. Cardiovascular health, overall strength, flexibility, endurance, balance and coordination each contribute to our overall health and ability to enjoy a productive, fun and active Cardiovascular exercise is any type of physical activity that causes your heart to beat faster and lungs to breathe harder. If your heart is exercised six days a week it becomes amazingly strong. Regular cardiovascular training makes the heart and lungs work harder, unifying them to become more efficient in delivering oxygen-rich blood through the body. As a result, the heart muscles become more powerful and able to cope with everyday tasks and extensive physical exertion.

Commitment to activity six days a week requires that you write down your personal goals and place them in a prominent location. Decide what time of day works best for you, and schedule an appointment with yourself that you will never break. Keep this appointment, and do not break it for anything other than a true emergency. There's a direct correlation with exercise, lower stress and overall happiness. People who are active on a daily basis seem to be generally more pleasant, possess a young vibrant spirit and are deeply connected to their surroundings.

Dedicate yourself to a daily ritual of activity and establish consistency that provides the framework for selfmotivation by committing thirty minutes a day, six days a week to your lifestyle. The results will be dramatic!

Dana Neer serves as Wellness Coordinator and Counselor at The Culver Academies. He can be contacted at Dana.Neer@culver.org.
