Culver kids - talent and fun

ABOVE: Some recent scenes of Culver area youth include (photos AT LEFT) participants in the Culver-Union Twp. Public Library's first successful Talent Night on Feb. 29, during which kids up to age 18 were welcomed to perform in front of an audience. According to Jill Gavlick, who heads up the library's children's department, "We just made the night open and fun with no competition. There are many kids who love performing, everything from music to magic, gymnastics and dancing to singing. I thought it would be fun to give them an opportunity to showcase their talent in front of people other than their parents and relatives, while also helping to build their self-confidence." Gavlick adds that CUTPL will hold another Open Talent Night this summer. arrest for sale of illegal deer meat By Jeff Kenney Citizen editor A Culver police officer has resigned following his arrest last week after a year-long investigation pertaining to illegal possession and sale of venison (deer meat).

Indiana Conservation Officers arrested former Culver officer William "Bill" Strong (45, Argos) and his father-in-law, Willard "Doug" Corey (71, Plymouth), on Wednesday.

Strong's absence presents staffing challenges for a department Culver's size, though Bean affirms parttime officers are stepping up to cover shifts.

"It puts a dent in things, we're managing but through," he says, adding the department expects to hire a full-time officer in the near future to take over the position.

Police reported that tips from concerned individuals led them to Corey's Deer

Service Clubs of Culver - part 1 in a series

Editor's note: the several service clubs which serve the Culver community form an important part of the backbone of community life and health here. With that in mind, The Culver Citizen is responding to a need noted by many such clubs to help educate and inform readers as to the work done by the various organizations, and how readers may become involved and help fill critical posts in areas where membership or volunteers may need bolstered. Our first feature focuses on what is likely the most recent such service club, and future articles aim to cover the other organizations.

Corey was arrested on two felony counts of illegal sale of wildlife and two misdemeanor counts of illegal possession of deer.

Approximately 300-400 pounds of illegally possessed venison was donated to local food banks.

Strong served as a fulltime police officer in Culver for 13 years, according to town marshal Wayne Bean, who declined to comment on any other facet of the situation, noting other details from his department's end are "personnel issues."

Strong has also worked for some years as a Lake Patrol officer on Lake Maxinkuckee, through the Marshall County Sheriff's Department and Lake Maxinkuckee Association. Strong's current status as a Lake Patrol officer was un-

In a press release regarding the arrests, Indiana Conservation Officers emphasized that the sale of wildlife is regulated by law and encouraged anyone with information regarding the illegal sale of wildlife or any other wildlife crime is encouraged to call 1-800-TIP-IDNR.

The Culver Beard Club's mission is Fun, Fundraising, and Community to improve the lives of people living within Marshall County, and to provide auxiliary support for existing non-profit organizations.

"Basically our goal is to help the local community and specifically people in the community for the betterment of the community. Right now, we have a focus on youth," said Tucker Anderson, club vice-president.

The biggest event the club puts on is the annual Culver Beard Club Polar Plunge in mid-February, the club's largest fundraiser of the year. Adults 18 years and older take a plunge into the freezing waters of Lake Maxinkuckee, sometimes in costume. The proceeds go towards the Culver Beard Club which enables the club to focus on the other community events they offer.

In the spring CBC partners with the Culver Town Park to put on the annual Easter egg hunt at the park. During the summer, members volunteer at the Marshall County Blazing BBQ & Bluegrass Fest. Renowned chef Surrisi departs Culver for new locale, position

The past fall and winter have marked the end of one era for Culver's well-known dining scenes, though there's still plenty of life left in Culver area restaurants.

As reported in the latest edition of Culver Academies' student newspaper, The Vedette, in an article titled, "Passing on the Spoon" by Culver Girls Academy senior Ran Tao, Larry Surrisi — chef at the school's Lay Dining Center for the past five years — departed Culver Feb. 7.

Although his renowned skills as a chef hadn't been offered to the public at large of late, Surrisi was one of the pillars of a wave of fine dining entities which began in Culver in the mid to late 1990s, when he opened the Edgewater Grille at 620 Lake Shore Drive in Culver, later expanding the small restaurant to its present size as the Lakehouse Grille.

departed the Surrisi Edgewater for a new venture, the City Tavern (later City Diner), down the street at 415 Lake Shore, which operated until late 2010. He then became chef at the Lay Dining Center on the campus of Culver Academies.

Latest change in Culver dining

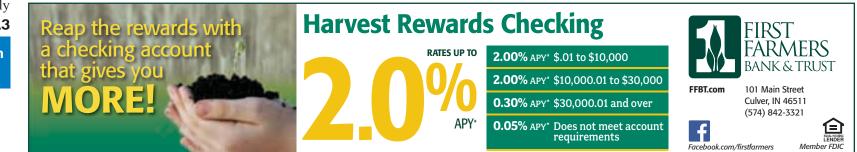

Surrisi's departure comes close on the heels of that of another mainstay in Culver's fine dining scene, George Pesek and his wife Tammy, who oversaw the popular Corndance Cafe and Evil Czech Brewery in Culver. The former restaurant opened its doors in 1999 and helped form a dining culture here which drew visitors from far and wide. The Peseks, who opened sister restaurants in the Mishawaka area, closed the doors of both Culver entities last September.

Culver, of course, is far from devoid of sought-after dining establishments. Mark Damore Jr. works to continue the spirit of the Edgewater in its former home, but with his own special twists, via the Lakehouse Grille. And Culver's longest-running eatery, Papa's Restaurant at 424 Lake Shore Drive, this year marks its 40th year of offering fine Italian food, pizza, and an extensive array of wine, beer, and spirits. That's all in addition to popular local offerings like the longstanding Cafe Max on Main Street, Culver Surrisi, writes Tao, "is moving to a college in the University of Montana system and he will be the director of the din-ing operation there. The college has a goal of improving guest satisfac-tion. Food is part of the branding, a part of the welcome mat of the institution. Dining service like that is a market that competes for tuition dollars because people want to be catered to, to be given choices, and the kitchen where people got to bake and cook."

"Dealing with students is reliving," Surrisi told Tao. "Parents all want the very best opportunities, the broadest exposure to what life has to offer for their kids. It is the only reason [for doing what I do]. You can't take anything with you, but you can leave something for the children. It is the meaning."

Surrisi's son, Sean, is attorney for the city of Plymouth, Indiana, and in 2015 was elected president of the Indiana Municipal Lawyers Association (IMLA). Sean's wife Janette has been a local real estate agent and an active member of the Culver community and various business and civic organizations. "Perhaps you know a great deal about Larry Surrisi Chef Surrisi," writes Tao in the Vedette.

"Maybe you hung out in the kitchen if you are in the baking club, or you enjoyed some of his delicious treats if you are his mentees. But for me and many people, Chef is a mythical creature who casted spells behind the scene whether you love or tolerate the dining hall food. I saw him only a few times, sauntering around with a camera and a smile. And on the Wednesday of the week he left, I had the opportunity to learn more about Chef Surrisi, an energetic, inspiring, hopeful, and kind man, who would surely be missed.'

In the article, Ran discusses Surrisi's love of the students and the mission of Culver, but his desire to be more challenged and experiment with new ideas in food in preparatory school or university environs, though he

Library's long-range plan survey ready for public input

The Culver Union Township Public Library is seeking the community's help. The library has just ended its year-long Carnegie Library centennial celebration during which it took a look at CUTPL's past; now the library is turning eyes toward its future. As part of the planning process a short survey has been developed. It's accessible online from a link on the library webpage at www.culver.lib.in.us, and is also available in paper form at the library. The survey will help to write the library's new long-range plan.

Residents may view the current plan at www.culver.lib.in.us/doc/long-range-plan.pdf To assist in developing a vision of the library's future, the library is interested in reading and hearing the public's ideas about CUTPL, and what services/materials/facilities residents would like to see at the library.

Those who take the survey will be eligible to enter a drawing for a Kindle Fire HD 10. The library is also looking for volunteers to participate in our discussions about the library's future goals. These "focus groups" will take place in August.

Exercise for seniors at the library

Culver-Union Township Public Library is pleased to offer Exercise for Seniors. This free exercise class for seniors meets on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 10 a.m. in the Carnegie Room and features easy, seated exercises.

We decided to start as a late night club because that's when people could meet after work. In a town like Culver, most people work in the service industry so it was easier to get together mid-week. OPINION - HISTORY

Check out a state park, help plan the library's future

So the America I loved still exists, if not in the White House or the Supreme Court or the Senate or the House of Representatives or the media. The America I love still exists at the front desks of our public libraries. — Kurt Vonnegut

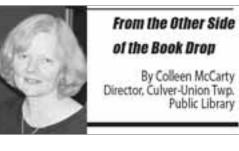

Library Program Lets You "Check-Out" State Parks: Indiana State Park Centennial

Annual Pass Library Check-out Program

CUTPL has recently closed our yearlong Centennial commemoration, just in time for Hoosiers to begin celebrating Indiana's Bicentennial. Interestingly, in 1916 the Indiana State Parks system was a gift to the people of Indiana in celebration of the state's Centennial. Now, in 2016, Hoosiers can check out state parks by checking out an entrance Pass from their public library.

The State Park Centennial Annual Pass Library Checkout Program is a partnership between Indiana State Parks and the Indiana State Library, to encourage people to visit libraries and parks. At libraries across Indiana, 240 Passes were distributed – one to each library district. The Passes provide access to Indiana's 32 state parks and also to Indiana's state forest recreation areas where entrance fees are charged. Passes will be available until Dec. 31, 2016.

The program is one of the ways the Indiana State Parks system is celebrating its own centennial anniversary. "Our goal is to provide access to our great Indiana State Parks for those who may have never visited," said Ginger Murphy, deputy director of stewardship for Indiana State Parks. "We also hope that those who come in to check out the annual Pass will take time to explore the services and materials available in Indiana's libraries."

The Indiana State Library helped pay for the Parks Pass program. "The State Library is excited about its bicentennial partnership with Indiana State Parks," said State Librarian Jacob Speer. "The partnership gives library patrons an opportunity to explore the many beautiful state park locations across Indiana simply by using their library card to check-out the free Passes.

CUTPL's own Pass has been cataloged and is ready for check-out. We are following the State Library's recommended circulation policies: the State Park Pass is available at the CUTPL Circulation Desk and the Pass can be taken out by CUTPL Resident cardholders. It circulates for 7 days with no holds and no renewals, and the late fee is $1 per day, with a replacement fee of $50, which is the actual cost of the Pass. Be sure and check-out CUTPL's Pass and visit one of our State's beautiful parks or forest recreation areas!

LRP Survey is Ready

It's time for CUTPL to write a new Long Range Plan (LRP.) Our current LRP expires at the end of 2016 and is available for you to read on our webpage: http://www. culver.lib.in.us/doc/long-range-plan.pdf

We begin this planning process by asking questions such as: Where is our Library going? How can we better meet community needs? What are we doing well? What can we do better? To develop the new Plan, we need your input; as an initial step, the Library Board and the Policy Committee have developed a survey for you. It is now available on our website http://www.culver.lib.in.us/ and also in paper form at the Library. We are asking for your opinion on what services interest you, improving our facilities and grounds and how best the Library might communicate information about our services and offerings to you. In the survey we also offer you the opportunity to participate in focus group meetings which will be facilitated by our Regional Representative from the Indiana State Library and will take place during 2 sessions in August. We have included a place in the survey where you may input your contact information if you would like to join the focus group.

All who participate in the survey are eligible to enter a drawing for a Kindle Fire HD 10. The survey will take place from March 1 through June 30 and we hope to hear from you!

The Culver - Katharine Hepburn connection

By Jeff Kenney

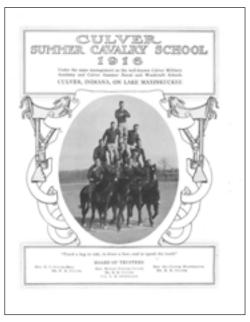

The proliferation of Culver Academies alumni (and other) connections to Hollywood is nothing new, though arguably the number of "household name" connections is a smaller selection. Here's a "new" one (to many readers, doubtless) to add to the list, even if it isn't a direct connection. In this case, it's the late Hollywood legend, Katharine Hepburn (1907 - 2003).

No, "Kate" didn't, of course, attend the school, but her husband, Ludlow Ogden Smith, did.

Smith, or "Luddy," as he was known, was a Trooper with Culver's Summer Cavalry in 1916, as detailed by author William J. Mann in his book, "Kate: The Woman Who Was Hepburn" (2007, Picador).

Mann notes Luddy was not as successful an athlete as his older brother, Lewis, but that his "underperforming" at Culver was offset by his "perfect scores in punctuality and neatness," all of which may have contributed to his being assigned to remedial gymnastics.

"In his uniform of blue shirt, black tie, gray riding breeches, and black puttees, Luddy spent his days at Culver rough-riding horses and lugging heavy army sabers and carbines," writes Mann, noting Luddy had not been keen on attending Culver, partly because the training he received there would doubtless set him upon a path to active military service in Europe in the Great War. It didn't take Luddy long to complain to his mother, by mail, of the military discipline he encountered at Culver.

severe, however, and wrote his mother near the end of that summer of '16, "You wouldn't know your son now (with) his straight shoulders and shortcut military talk.

Troop commander Col. Robert Rossow's letter to Smith's father from August of '16 is quoted, praising Smith's improvements in learning to ride.

Smith, whom Hepburn met while a student at Bryn Mawr College, was her only husband, though the actress was famous for future relationships -- especially with Spencer Tracy -- following her divorce from Smith in 1934 (they had married in 1928). Hepburn remained friends with Smith until his death in 1979, often crediting him for his support of her during her early acting career.

There's no reason to think Katherine Hepburn ever visited the site of her husband's summer cavalry experience, though it seems likely he had tales to tell her of his Culver experiences.

After all, doesn't everyone?

Indiana Bicentennial Torch Relay to travel through Culver Event will take place here Oct. 4; local torchbearers to be named in May

The Indiana Bicentennial Commission has organized a "torch relay" in celebration of the state's 200th birthday. The torch, representing the torch on the state flag, will pass through all 92 counties and will begin in Corydon, the first state capital, and will end at Bicentennial Plaza in Indianapolis. The torch will pass through Marshall County on October 4 between 2 and 6 p.m. The state torch committee provided the route through Marshall County as it enters from Elkhart County and exits into Fulton County.

Representatives from Marshall County's bicentennial committee further defined the route with specific stops and hand-offs of the torch as it moves through Bremen, LaPaz, Plymouth and Culver. The torch, which will be escorted by a large caravan, will also pass by the Chief Menominee monument on Peach Road on its way to Culver.

The committee divided up the townships into the four towns that the torch will travel. Bremen will include torch bearers from Bourbon & Tippecanoe, LaPaz will include Polk, Plymouth will include West, and Culver will include Walnut & Greene.

Marshall County was allotted twenty torch bearers for the relay and worked with the state torch committee to solicit nominations for carriers through January 31. More than fifty individuals from Marshall County were nominated to carry the torch. The local committee also wanted the county's high school students to be represented in the relay, which resulted in the invitation by area juniors to submit an essay on "What does it mean to be a Hoosier?"

Six of the county's school corporations submitted a finalist and runnerup to carry the torch during their senior year. This decision to include students in this way is unique to Marshall County. The local committee felt that the bicentennial celebration should be as much about future generations as the past. The committee will have the essays archived with the Marshall County Historical Society and will share them with the media once the selections are finalized.

The local torch committee has forwarded 20 names including the essay finalists, and two alternates to the state bicentennial torch committee for final approval. The state torch committee will make the final determination on torch bearers and will be announcing the names selected to the public in May. The local committee will be working with the communities through which the torch will pass to further establish the events surrounding the relay.

SPORTS

By James Costello Sports Editor

BOURBON — Going into the second half against Culver Community, Oregon-Davis was sputtering at a 4-of-13 shooting clip that left it trailing the Cavs 14-11. But head coach Joe Eskridge never panicked. He knew the law of averages was bound to kick in at some point.

The Bobcats snapped out of their shooting slump after the break, knocking down 9-of-16 second-half shots, including 4-of-7 tries from 3-point range to rally past Culver for a convincing 50-39 victory. The lead changed hands for the final time on Braxton Moorefield's wing triple on a Cameron Clark inside-out assist with 1:25 left in the third quarter, and Clark followed up with a 3 from the opposite wing to push the defending champions out to a 26-21 lead going into the final frame.

Once there, OD converted a whopping 17of-22 free throws to hold off Culver for a repeat championship berth opposite host Triton.

Moorefield notched 14 points for OD and Clark finished with eight, but both were eclipsed by Jon Clark's game-high 15. The latter Clark was a big part of the Bobcats' 17of-22 free throw shooting for the night as he calmly buried all 11 of his charity tosses in the fourth quarter.

from deep and at the line, Culver used its size advantage to good effect in the low post as Tristan Schultz and Josh Krsek each put up 12 in the paint. But after giving up three offensive eight offensive rebounds for eight second chance points and 12 points in the paint in the first half, OD stepped up its interior defense in the second half. "Defensively, they have us out-sized so we have to work harder," said Eskridge. "What we did was have to balance - make sure we didn't let any of their shooters out, but when you have a chance double down on the post and just make it tough, make it tough for them inside," explained Eskridge. "Don't let them just throw it in there and shoot it over the top of you. Working them in the post. We tried to pack it in a little bit so they wouldn't have a lot of room to work down there. In the first half we let them get some of those secondchance points. I think they got about all of their points after they took at least one shot and got it Culver Community's Everett Krueger looks inside, while Oregon-Davis' Trevor Risner defends during a scoring eight. and got another Class A Sectional 51 semifinal game in Bourbon Friday.

ing by double digits when Everett Krueger hauled down a defensive rebound and drove it the length of the floor for a transition layup at the 3:35 stop of the second. Culver steadily built from there, and Tuesday's 27-point margin

We've been telling these kids 'Don't look past these guys.' There's a reason you play the games," he said. "I knew it was in the back of our minds maybe a little that we beat them by 30 or whatever it was. In my mind, I guess > we did. The team comes out and makes you kind of execute out of things you don't normally do, and I thought we handled that very well."

Culver's offense achieved the kind of balance that has been so key to the team's successes this season with senior guard Krueger leading the team with 16 points, senior post Tristan player Schultz putting up 12, and Josh Krsek and Nate

balanced, too, in the way it scored points. Krueger knocked down a trio of 3s, and both he and Carnegie created off the dribble. Schultz and Krsek did their scoring in and around the paint, and Culver players racked up 12 assists - led by Carnegie's four and Krueger's three — as the Cavs scored at a 62.5 percent (20-of-32) clip from the floor. It was a case of "pick your poison" for North Miami, and when the Warriors tried to contain one aspect of Culver's offense, the Cavs simply capitalized somewhere else. "I kind of feel always that that's what they've kind of got to do to our team — they've got to pick one or the other to try and contend with," said Tom Krueger. "I thought Tristan and Josh did a good job of not forcing things. A couple times I think we forced the ball inside with two or three guys, but other than that I thought we did a pretty good job of moving it around the perimeter and then getting it in." Meanwhile, Culver showed mostly zone on the defensive end to hold North Miami to woeful 10-of-36 (27.8 percent) field goal shooting on the other end of the floor. The Warriors' 25-point tally was the fewest allowed by the Cavaliers this season, and Krueger was pleased with his team's defensive efforts. "Any time in basketball you hold somebody to 27 percent and 25 points at the high school level, you've got to be pretty proud of your defense," said the Culver boss. "I thought the kids did an excellent job. We missed a few box-outs here and there, but for the most part I thought we contested very well." Culver now advances for a rubber match with defending sectional champion Oregon-Davis. The two teams have met twice previously this season, both times at OD, with Culver getting the better of the Bobcats in a narrow 57-55 decision during the Bi-County Tournament, and OD earning a convincing 52-30 reprisal a little over a week later on Jan. 27.

CMA falls in OT versus Marian

Culver Military Academy gave fifth-ranked Mishawaka Marian all it could handle, but ran out of steam in overtime in a 51-44 Class 3A Jimtown Sectional championship loss Saturday night.

The Eagles led by as many as eight points in the first half and by six late but couldn't hold on against the Knights, who rallied for their second overtime victory in two nights. CMA was held scoreless in the extra period to close out the season at a respectable 16-8.

Ignas Masiulionis scored 18 points to lead the Eagles, but didn't score after the third period. Ethan Brittain-Watts also finished in double figures with 11 for CMA.

Lady Cavs' senior lineup made for historic season

The Culver Community High School Lady Cavaliers ended their season last month, and while that season may not have resulted in some of the successes of past years, it was one for the history books in one sense, at least: three of the four seniors playing for the team were exchange students attending classes at CCHS this year, hailing from countries where its safe to say basketball is not the source of feverish devotion it is in Indiana. Following is a Q&A with senior players including some interesting answers, including those of the only local senior, Marisa Howard.

After surrendering 25 and 15 points to senior guard Everett Krueger in the two teams' previous match-ups this season, OD threw the Cavs a different look on the defensive end in Friday's rubber match, using a 2-3 zone and a strong team effort to hold Krueger down to just seven points.

"He's a tough player. We just made and emphasis of to a man, five men, make sure you know where he's at," Eskridge said of Krueger. "We're going to do it with a team effort. We got to this point and we've played them twice and we've thrown them some looks so I think they were probably ready for a box-and-one type of look or something like that so we wanted to give them something a little bit different, something so they wouldn't have something drawn up that would work right away. It worked pretty well.

Culver closes the season at 15-9 and bids goodbye to Krueger and Schultz as well as fellow seniors Cody Valiquet, Austin Bailey, and John and Justin Brown. OD advances to tonight's championship with a record of 10-13. • OREGON-DAVIS 50, CULVER COMMUNITY 39

CULVER COMMUNITY 52, NORTH MIAMI 25

BOURBON — Coaches and basketball pundits often say that anything can happen at tournament time, but there were few surprises at last Tuesday's Triton Sectional openers.

Culver Community handed North Miami a 52-25 loss in the early game, a final margin that was reminiscent of the Cavaliers' 31-point regular-season victory over the Warriors, while Argos closed the season with a 53-40 defeat at the hands of South Central (Union Mills) in a nightcap that echoed the Dragons' 58-49 loss to the Satellites two weeks ago.

Those outcomes set up Friday's semifinals between Culver and Oregon-Davis in the opener and host Triton and South Central in the late game, with the championship to be decided Saturday night.

Culver's coaching staff had been warning their players against the temptation of overlooking the one-win Warriors, particularly given the lopsided win the Cavs achieved at North Miami back in early December, and the home team on the scoreboard seemed to take it to heart.

There were two ties in the first period as Culver settled in to the sectional atmosphere, but the Cavs closed the first quarter 7-0, part of a larger 13-2 run that left them leadFriday's tip is scheduled for 6 p.m. ET.

"OD does a very good job of trying to mix defenses. We're going to have to play our best," Krueger explained. "If we're just patient with it, I think we'll be fine. We don't want to try and rush anything. I think the kids are starting to see that. You go to the back side of stuff you get a lot of opportunities. We're going to have to handle that well." Culver Academies' Chris Kline — fostering sustainability through leadership

Editor's note: The Culver (Academies) Alumni Magazine's Winter, 2016 edition focused on matters related to sustainabilitv on the Academies' campus, an area in which the school has seen considerable innovation in recent years. At the center of many current initiatives in Culver resident Chris Kline, the descendant of multi-generational local pioneers (his grandmother, Ruth, was interviewed extensively for the Jan. 7, 2016 edition of The Culver Citizen on the occasion of her 100th birthday) and Chris and other family members have been quite active in community organizations and endeavors for decades. Following is a feature on Kline from the Alumni magazine, used by permission of editor Doug Haberland. By Doug Haberland, Culver Alumni Magazine editor When it came time to consider hiring a sustainability director to coordinate and oversee the Culver Academies effort, Chris Kline Culver Military Academy class of 1982) was the logical choice.

"He's a Culver guy with impeccable academic credentials and a career in sustainability," Head of Schools John Buxton said. "Chris is a Culver parent who is energized by the idea of working with students and sharing his vision.

If we expect our students to become responsible citizens and leaders, they need to understand the concept of sustainability in all areas of life. We needed to start their training and awareness process now," Buxton said. "We want Chris to help lead the integration efforts linking leadership with sustainability and social entrepreneurship."

Hired in June 2014, Kline is working with various campus stakeholders to lessen Culver's environmental footprint and to provide educational opportunities for students, faculty, and staff. He is also a senior instructor in the Leadership Department, teaching an eleventh-grade course on Ethics, Character and Leadership.

As the son of a retired instructor, a graduate, and a Culver parent, the dual roles are an opportunity for Kline to give back to a place that "is in my blood" and to put his professional experience to work in and out of the classroom.

"I've had the opportunity to work in the private (fifteen years) and public (eleven years) sectors on various projects and challenges we now consider to be part of sustainability. I feel I can bring this experience to Culver," Kline said. "For eight years I worked as a staff member on a U.S. Senate Committee charged with conducting investigations into many environmental issues. I learned much about environmental laws and regulations, but more importantly how to be persistent, careful, and skeptical. In the private sector, I had responsibility for the business unit. Nothing focuses the mind so much as having to meet a bottom line. I try to put these experiences to use in the classroom and in my role as Sustainability Director.⁷

Prior to joining Culver, Kline was a principal and director of Business Development for Cardno JFNew, an environmental consulting and restoration firm in Walkerton, Indiana. Kline ensured his Chris Kline unit's revenue met financial targets. He also managed federal contracts with the Department of Interior and General Services Administration. During his tenure with JFNew, Kline also served as regional director and federal practice team leader.

Kline graduated from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill as a Morehead Scholar. After graduating he worked as a research associate for the Roosevelt Center for American Policy Studies. In 1989, he joined the staff of the U.S. Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs in Washington, D.C., and worked eight years for former U.S. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

Kline returned to Culver in 1998 to join his father, Robert, in NorCen Insurance, a business started by his grandfather in 1923. From there, he moved to Tecumseh Professional Associates Inc. as a project manager and policy analyst. Kline earned his MBA at the University of Notre Dame during this time, joining JFNew in 2006.

His mother, Carolyn Kline retired after twenty-three years with the Academies as an English instructor and CGA Dean of Girls (1990-94). His grandmother, Ruth Kline, worked in the business office during the 1970s Kline is the father of daughters Maeve W'09, '14 and Nora '19 and sons Francis '15 and Patrick W'13, '17.

Culver Academies uses crowdfunding to satisfy a thirst

In 2014, providing Culver Woodcraft campers with refillable water bottles eliminated the purchase of more than 13,000 disposable plastic water bottles in one summer. This program would have been even more successful had there been a method of filling the reusable bottles more easily.

To address this and other funding issues, Culver Academies developed the crowdfunding site Impact.Culver. org which allows donors to support specific projects and programs and have a direct impact on current students' experiences. Green Life, the student environmental group, and Sustainability Director Chris Kline (a Culver resident and 1982 graduate of Culver Military Academy) are behind the effort to raise funding for water stations on campus and for gooseneck faucets in bathrooms, both of which will alpart of his Senior Service Practicum.

The goal is funding for seven water stations on campus at a cost of $2,000 each, plus another 30 gooseneck faucets at $200 each. That would provide for one faucet in each main dorm and unit bathroom, plus one in each Woodcraft unit.

As of the end of 2015, the crowdfunding site had surpassed its $10,000 goal. The full $20,000 needed was a second-tier goal, said Culver Fund Officer Katie Taylor (Culver Academies class of 2011), who was heading the Development Office effort.

Besides the benefits to students and to the environment, there are inherent benefits to the donor, Taylor noted.

Impact Culver allows people to target their donation to specific projects and see their donations at work within the year, Taylor said. Plus, 100 percent of all donations go directly to the project and the donations are tax deductible.

The Academies is the first secondary school to use crowdfunding. To donate to the water station/faucet project, or to learn more about the Academies' other crowdfunding opportunities, visit Impact.Culver.org.

Roots of Academies' Pollinator Prairie will touch many Multiple groups involved with creating a future research lab for students and Woodcraft

When Reilly Combs (a Culver Academies senior from LaPorte) first learned about the connection between native wildflower prairies, pollinator species, and our food supply, he wanted to do something about it.

"The world's population continues to increase and we have to find a way to feed everyone. Creating habitat for pollinator species is a critical part of addressing this issue," Combs said recently. "Plants need pollinators."

Part of the Academies' graduation requirement is to complete a community service project, so Combs began working with Chris Kline, Leadership Department instructor and the Academies' Sustainability Director, to determine what he could do.

About the same time, Scott Fetters, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) Private Lands biologist for northern Indiana, approached the Academies with information about the FWS Pollinator Program. "I knew the Academies had mission, I thought it would be a great match for our program,"

Culver history among topics in county museum upcoming Brown Bag Lunch series

By James Master

MARSHALL COUNTY — The Marshall County Museum Historic Crossroads Center is kicking off spring with their once a month series that invites everyone to bring their lunch and be entertained while they eat.

The theme of the Brown Bag Lunch Series is centered around Indiana's Bicentennial.

"A lot of this was all bicentennial era," Executive Director of the Marshall County Museum Linda Rippy said adding that the museum is trying to "promote the bicentennial in different formats."

It all begins with an Indiana Bicentennial Special presented with Encore Performing Arts on March 11. "Cole Porter's Top 10 List of Songs" will be discussed by Charles Troy. Cole Porter was not just a Hoosier, but also a famous composer and songwriter.

The presentation of Porter's life will be given by Charles Troy. Troy is a musical theatre historian that provides a unique presentations that employ a blend of recorded songs, original graphics, scanned photos, historic video, and an extensively researched, scripted narrative to dramatize. The museum has collaborated with Encore Performing Arts to present six presentations all over the county

`Train Talk' at county museum Saturdays

The Marshall County Museum, 123 N. Michigan Street in downtown Plymouth, is well-known for its 40-foot, interactive model train layout that operates every Saturday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. In an effort to further educate and engage visitors in the Train Room, the museum has invited a select group of train enthusiasts for a question and answer period every second Saturday from 11 to 1 from March through July. These monthly two-hour gatherings with the train experts, called "Train Talk," will give train enthusiasts an opportunity to visit our museum and share information about their passion — trains.

Topics discussed include demonstrations on making basic scenery for your model train layout, a spotlight or interesting model trains, a video of an elaborated model train layout by an artist featured in Railroad Magazine, as well as reflections of a real railroad employee that will talk about his experience in train movement along the tracks.

Call the museum at 574-936-2306 or visit our website for more information on dates of specific talks.

Senate approval could mean end of ISTEPs across Indiana

By Jeff Kenney Citizen editor

Culver students are taking the ISTEP standardized test this week and last, but many teachers are hoping a recent move by the Indiana Senate could mean this is the last year for the test across the state — at least for the time being.

In February, the Senate passed a measure on a 38-10 vote which would create a 22-member panel to "study alternatives to the ISTEP" and "make recommendations for replacing" the interest to Academies' biology teacher Kris Little '75. In 2008, Little was responsible for creating an acre-and-ahalf native prairie just north of Fleet Field.

"Establishing native plantings around campus just makes good sense," Little said. "In addition to creating habitat for pollinator species, like bees and butterflies, native plants improve soil health, filter storm water, sequester carbon, and are more drought and disease resistant than non-native or ornamental plants."

Little and fellow biology teacher Eric March regularly take students out to the smaller prairie to illustrate various ecological principles. Little recounts that it took a good bit of education to convince various Academies officials to permit the original prairie to be created. Of particular concern was potential risks to the Bird Sanctuary if prescribed burn-offs would be used to maintain it. "We still haven't cracked that nut," Little said.

"This prairie will be a great resource for campers taking any of our nature classes. In addition I'm expecting we'll incorporate the plants from the prairie into our Indian lore curriculum," she said.

In addition to helping with some of the field work, like marking the boundary and preparing the project area, Combs is putting together educational material for use at Woodcraft. "I'm really excited to see this project take off," said Combs, who plans to study to be a p assistant in college. As the project moves forward, it is attracting additional interest and support around campus. F a m o u s photographers exhibit opening garners crowds

RIGHT: Students and visitors admire the work of three famous photographers at Culver Academies' recent gala opening for its exhibition of the works of three of America's most noted photographers from the 1930s, an exhibit which will continue through July 31.

The works of Eudora Welty, Alfred Eisenstaedt, and Ansel Adams debuted Feb. 20 in the Crisp Visual Arts Center for a five-month exhibit. The Crisp Center is located on Academy Road on the campus of Culver Academies, just west of Logansport Gate.

The exhibit is free and open to the public. The Deer-Zink Gallery will be open on Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. The exhibit is also available by appointment by calling Robert Nowalk, curator of the Academies' collection, at 574-842-8278.

The photo exhibit, drawn from the holdings of the Culver Academies' art collection, includes 20 images by Eudora Welty from her Mississippi portfolio. Representing documentary photography, though better known as an author, Welty worked for the Works Progress Administration during the 1930s; 27 photographs by Alfred Eisenstaedt, a noted photojournalist with an international reputation. Eisenstaedt came to Culver Military Academy in 1939 to do a story for Life magazine (SEE LOWER PHOTO); and 15 images from Yosemite Portfolio III by Ansel Adams, created in 1960 for the Sierra Club from negatives taken between 1926 and 1959. Adams represents aesthetics and is the most well-known and beloved of all American photographers.

"Together, these three photographers present a vision of America in the first half of the 20th Century that is diverse and alive, truthful yet hopeful," Nowalk said. "The joy of being an educator exists in sharing learning," he added. "The Visual Arts at Culver understands works of art to be the cultural legacy of all humanity and not just the possession of one person or one institution. Ownership is stewardship and, since it is our mission to educate, share, enrich, and offer learning opportunities, when we have something important to offer, we would like it to reach the widest possible number of people."

Schrimsher talks CCSC logo with Culver Kiwanians

LEFT: Shelly Schrimsher, a lead volunteer in the marketing committee formed by Culver Community Schools as part of its strategic planning process, paid a visit to the Culver Kiwanis Club last month at one of its regular Wednesday evening meetings at the Lakehouse Grille on Lake Shore Drive.

Schrimsher, seen here exhibiting the recently-approved Culver Comm. School Corporation logo on a t-shirt, explained the importance of branding and a branding identity to the marketing and success of the school, in addition to its relevance in fostering school spirit and positive community perceptions.

The branding and marketing committee, she said, undertook an online fund-raising campaign to underwrite the costs of the logo creation, with staff and administrators weighing in on final designs.

These included a more formal look with Cavalier (the school's mascot) "head" as well as an array of various iterations such as the one seen here. These will be used in school banners, on uniforms and other athletic attire, official school publications, and various attire and ephemera available online at varsityshop.com/ccsc_culver_community_schools. Banners exhibiting the logo are hoped to be featured on the streets of Culver in the future, and the committee hopes to foster official periods for the community to support the school corporation.

Schrmisher and interim CCSC superintendent Chuck Kitchell, who also participated in the meeting, also discussed the challenges facing the school, primarily declining funding and the issues relating to standardized testing and shifts in state evaluation models. Branding and marketing of the school corporation are aimed at emphasizing its strengths in the face of a now-competitive school environment regionally and across the state, it was noted.

Culver Millers will assist in 50th birthday celebration for Marshall Co. REAL Services

By James Master

MARSHALL COUNTY — This month marks the 50th birthday of REAL Services, and REAL Services of Marshall County aims to support independence for life within the county.

In Marshall County, the Plymouth office administers a network of services for older adults and the physically disabled. REAL Services is responsible for planning, developing, implementing, and administering a network of services that are utilized by older adults and low income households in north central Indiana.

REAL Services was created in May 1966 as a part of the planning division of United Way. Its purpose was to develop a service network that was designed to meet the needs of older adults in St. Joseph County.

In 1967, it received the first federal grant in Indiana from the U.S. Administration on Aging for Research and Development and was extended in 1968 to further program development.

To celebrate the anniversary, the REAL Services of Marshall County will be holding several activities on March 16 beginning at 10 a.m.

The Millers Assisted Living in Culver will be performing blood pressure clinics. Bingo will be available for those that wish to participate. Special Speaker Cindy Cole from Purdue Extension will be speaking about nutrition. Lunch will be catered by REAL Services. The menu will include pork roast, stuffing, gravy, roasted sweet potatoes and a veggie blend. Dessert will be a special anniversary cake.

According to Director of REAL Services of Marshall County Linda Gladys, Plymouth mayor Mark Senter will make an appearance. Reservations should be make a day in advance and that adults 60 or older are welcomed to attend.

"Its a benefit to the community. They think it's a soup kitchen or charity, but it's not. It''s a place to break up the monotony," Gladys said in regards to REAL Services.

Easter egg hunt at Catherine Kasper March 19

An Easter egg hunt will be held at the Catherine Kasper Life Center, 9601 Union Road in Donaldson. More than 4,000 eggs will be hidden on the center's grounds, and kids 10 and under are invited to see how many they can find.

The Easter egg hunt will be held on Saturday, March 19 from 10 a.m. to noon EDT. Organizers are asking parents to register for the event ahead of time, so they'll know how many people are coming.

The registration form is available via the event's Facebook page at www.facebook. com/events/554167904764723.

Spine impairment is a leading cause of disability for veterans-and it's on the rise. We urge Americans to back vets up by joining our efforts to treat and defeat these injuries. Get involved, our website is a great place to start.

Mapping Indiana released by Indiana Historical Society

INDIANAPOLIS — After more than a decade in the making, the Indiana Historical Society (IHS) Press announces the release of Mapping Indiana: Five Centuries of Treasures from the Indiana Historical Society, with essays by Erin Kirchhoff, Eric L. Mundell and Amy Vedra.

Although it is not known exactly when the first map found its way into the IHS collection, the organization has actively collected cartographic gems over the last 186 years. Now with the release of Mapping Indiana, 107 of the most dynamic and treasured of those maps are being shared with the world, just in time for the state's Bicentennial celebration.

The scope of the maps ranges from several Old World views of North America to more contemporary views of Indiana counties and towns, with many designed to be as artistic as they once were functional.

In addition to the maps and accompanying essays, Mapping Indiana features introductory essays by noted map specialist Donald Creswell and historian Nicole Etcheson, which relate the history of mapmaking from the early days of maps in America to the present, as well as the history of maps in the state.

The book is available in the Basile History Market, at the Eugene and Marilyn Glick Indiana History Center, located at 450 W. Ohio St. in downtown Indianapolis, or online at www.indianahistory.org.

Area communities recognized in OCRA celebration

fered by OCRA.

A few local communities were recognized by the Office of Community and Rural Affairs for their participation in various state programs.

OCAL

Lt. Governor Sue Ellspermann recently joined OCRA officials at the Indiana Statehouse as part of the organization's 10 year celebration. OCRA's mission is to aid in the development of small and rural communities throughout the Hoosier State.

This year, 100 Indiana

lowed to eat. "I was afraid nobody would show up if I did," she smiled. Instead, she asked them to participate in the random drawing just before they picked up their food.

"It is just one part of my senior service project entitled 'Food for the Future,' which consisted of a series of actions and events to not only raise awareness about food insecurity and world hunger but empower students and teachers to continue working to combat it," Nowalk said via email. She did ask participants for written comments and those who replied wrote that the evening "was not only eye opening, but engaging and interesting."

"I was most touched by people's interest in the project and their newfound passion for making a change," she wrote. "I hope that everyone who was in the dining hall left with a heightened awareness of how blessed we are and the need for people, who are willing, to make a change.'

Along with the meal, Nowalk displayed graphics and played a video dealing with hunger. Some of the American statistics include:

• 20 million school-age children participate in the free or reduced school lunch program.

• 16 million children (1in-5) struggle with hunger.

• 79 percent of households report purchasing inexpensive, unhealthy food to feed their family.

• 324 counties in the Unit-process of developing an Indiana Main Street program for their communities.

Part of the celebration was hearing from former Lt. Governor Becky Skillman Those in attendance at the 10-year celebration heard Skillman discuss OCRA from it's early days.

Communities often receive thousands in grant funding through OCRA's various programs, including millions of dollars in recent years to the town of Culver.

ed States are considered high food-insecurity counties.

Nowalk hopes the Hunger Banquet spurs others to act. She added she was influenced by the food insecurity project that Alex Ding '13 did her senior year.

"Often, it is easy to get sucked into the mindset that we are too small to have a positive impact and that big dreams cannot be achieved. However, if we build with the little things, we can make a difference in the world," she said. "To me, the key is to not let ourselves be limited by the task itself and remember that we are only as incapable as we let ourselves be."
